OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER

Ideal fall weather conditions prevail in Duluth today.

Yesterday was windy and cold, and the weather man looks for unsettled weather tomorrow, but today is well nigh perfect.

A year ago today it was cold.

The sun rose this morning at 5:56 and will set at 6:04, making twelve hours and eight minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"During the last twenty-four to forty-eight hours rains fell throughout the Northwest, the lake region, South Atlantic and Gulf states, principally in connection with the barometric depression overlying the far West. The high pressure centered over the Dakotas has caused chilly weather throughout the whole Northwest and freezing temperature has been the rule since Saturday morning over all of Western Canada, Northern Montana, and Northwestern North Dakota. A continuance of low temperature may be expected in St. Louis and Douglas counties tonight and frost may occur in low places."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m., Tuesday:

Upper Michigan—Probably cloudy tonight and Tuesday; frost Tuesday morning if weather clear.

Wisconsin—Unsettled tonight and Tuesday; continued cool.

Minnesota—Unsettled weather tonight and Tuesday; probably frost tonight.

North Dakota—Unsettled but generally fair tonight and Tuesday; probably frost tonight; warmer in northwest.

SNAPPY BILL AT ORPHEUM

Edward Reynard, Ventriloquist With Production, Feature of Program.

It's a snappy, smooth running bill at the Orpheum this week, with no remarkably big feature acts, but with seven good, clean, and entertaining numbers.

It is a well balanced program, and it moves off smoothly and with no waits between acts.

Edward F. Reynard, the headliner, easily carried off the honors of the bill. He has the most meritorious and the most amusing number on the program. He calls himself "The Ventriloquist With A Production" and this describes the act perfectly. He has gotten away from the cut and dried methods of the ordinary ventriloquist, and has built up a comedy sketch around his excellent voice control, making his entrance in a real automobile, which, by a clever stage device, is made to appear in the distance and gradually approach. Reynard is held up by a country constable. The role of constable, like all the other parts in the sketch, is played by a little dummy which is made to talk by the performer. Reynard is the only person who appears on the stage during the act, but he keeps the sketch moving, and the dozen or more characters busy. He has also contrived some very clever little stage devices which add greatly to the comedy. The scene all takes place on the corner of a village street.

"Coralled" is the name of the sketch presented by the Gilbert Miller Players. It is a typical swashbuckling, Western melodrama boiled down to the proportions of a sketch. There is a young gambler who talks with a Southern drawl; a bold, bad sheriff who misrepresents the law; and the charming young Western cowgirl, who handles the young cannon that are much in evidence, like a veteran of the Arizona plains, and who falls into her lover's arms while the sheriff sits lashed to the post with a clothes line, and grinding his teeth—cur-r-rses—in the helpless rage. It's "great stuff" and the Sunday audiences "ate it up."

The messenger boy quartet, which travels under the name of The Arlington Four, scored one of the big hits of the bill, with some "barber shop" harmony and some eccentric dancing by the blackface comedian of the troupe. It is a good, lively rough and tumble comedy musical act.

Two slender young women found a warm reception waiting for the pianologue. They were Miss Jane Boynton and Miss Ivy Davis. Miss Boynton was seen here last season, but this year she has a new partner, and some new songs. They sing three or four catchy and popular airs, playing their own accompaniments. They have an attractive presence, and their act is pleasing throughout.

Two young men who juggle Indian clubs, while standing almost on top of the footlights, have a whirlwind and rather sensational act. They spend only a few minutes on the stage, but they juggle the clubs so rapidly, and pass them back and forth in such a bewildering manner, that the act is one of the liveliest and most popular on the bill.

Augustin and Hartley are two barrel jumpers, who perform some difficult feats in jumping in and out of barrels. The act is along conventional lines, but the tricks are difficult and well done.

Some fall styles in hats from Paris, make the moving pictures this week more than ordinarily attractive, and the orchestra is playing a military overture. The bill will continue all week with a daily matinee.

NEW VAUDEVILLE AT THE LYCEUM

New Sullivan and Considine Show Pleases Three Large Audiences.

The second and last week's run of Sullivan-Considine shows at the Lyceum theater began with three performances of the new bill yesterday.

The Empress theater will be ready for occupancy, it is thought, by next Sunday. Extensive repairs have been made. With new chairs, new decorations and a new ventilating plant, the theater will be ready for its winter season.

Three very large audiences were well pleased with the new offering for the week and at the Lyceum yesterday.

Burgos and Clara open the show with as pretty an athletic exhibition as has been booked for Duluth over the Sullivan-Considine circuit in a long time. Their line of gymnastic exploits is a little different from those of the usual order, and the audiences yesterday seemed to appreciate that fact. Most of the work of the team is done on bars hung as many feet above the stage as space will permit. Some of the stunts are most difficult. All through the act the principals show nerve, daring and long training. The act is a thriller and on many vaudeville programs would have a better place than as an opener.

Mondane Phillips is a young woman who sings. She calls herself the girl with many voices. As a part of her act she imitates well known grand opera stars in both looks and voice. In vaudeville there are hundreds of imitators but few of them come so near the mark in their impersonations as the young woman who is this week devoting about twenty minutes each performance to amusing Duluth theatergoers.

"The Man Who Knew" is the title of a pretty rural play, which is more interesting and entertaining and which for refreshingly original material is the best put on as a part of an Empress show in some time. The LeVerne Barber players are putting on the sketch. Each character is well taken and a special setting is used.

Luigi Dell 'Oro has a musical act which is, to say the least, unusual. He has a variety of musical instruments, many of which have never been used on an American stage up until the time he played his first engagement in New York some time ago. He is now on his first American tour and comes direct from the Empire theater, London, where he proved the musical sensation of the season.

"Quo Vadis Upside Down" proves to be a merry leap from the sublime to the ridiculuos. Charles L. Warren and Henry Seymour provide the fun, and it is one long laugh.

There will be three performances each day, one each afternoon and two each evening during the remainder of the week.

"The Paradise of Mahomet."

Grace Van Studdiford.

Few singers, either native or foreign, have charmed Western theater-goers as did Grace Van Studdiford when she made her memorable trip through here two seasons ago in "The Golden Butterfly." It means a lot therefore to say that she never sang better than she sings in the Parisian comic opera bouffe, "The Paradise of Mahomet," which will be presented at the Lyceum theater Saturday, Sept. 30, for matinee and night. Nevertheless, Manager Daniel V. Arthur is making this claim for Miss Van Studdiford. Another claim of the manager is that Miss Van Studdiford has been surrounded by one of the most excellent singing companies of principals and chorus that were ever brought together in this country. She will be seen here with the same sumptuous production as at the Herald Square theater, New York.

BLIND LOVE'S TRICK.

Husband Repudiates Contract He Made Not to Be Jealous.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 25.—A little more than a year ago S. A. Dickason quarreled with his wife. They had been married only a few months, and she left him. Dickason was madly in love and made strenuous efforts toward a reconciliation.

Before consenting to live with him again Mrs. Dickason drew up a contract which gave her absolute freedom to come and go and do just as she pleased. There was a clause against jealousy.

Dickason now repudiates the contract, which, he declares, was signed under duress of intense love. In a deposition filed in his suit for divorce he says he was compelled to do kitchen work, and further that Mrs. Dickason renewed her friendship with men whom she knew before her marriage. The agreement read in part:

"I agree to allow my wife, Tennessee Dickason to do just as she feels inclined to do; give her all my money; promise not to be jealous; allow her to come and go just as freely as when she was single; won't condemn her for doing anything; will be kind to her, and if I violate this agreement in any way will allow her to obtain a separation."

DOG HAS TO BE KILLED

Before Coroner Can Get Near Veteran Who Drops Dead.

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 25.—For half an hour a large St. Bernard dog prevented an entrance to a room where its master, Steve Paul, a Civil war veteran, was sitting in his chair dead.

Not until the animal was killed could Coroner Wunderlich reach the corpse. Paul was sitting alone in his room on the third floor of a down-town building directly in front of a window. He died of heart disease and the body remained in an erect posture.

The attention of pedestrians on the street was attracted by the motionless figure, and the police were notified.

Every effort to enter the room was repelled by the dog, who had been Paul's only companion, until the animal was shot.

HITTING THE BULL'S EYE OF THE SPORTING TARGET

Giants and Athletics Have Changed Players Since the World's Series of 1905—Zbyszko Busy; Duluth and the National Bowlers.

SURELY we are now certain that it will be the Giants and the Athletics in the world's series. The play of the past week has further cinched the chances of these two teams, though there has not been very much doubt regarding the Philadelphia team for the past month or more. The race in the older league has been filled with uncertainties, and now the spurt of the McGrawities has straightened all the kinks out of old uncertainty's back.

It is interesting to think of the change time, that relentless old gent, has wrought in the personnel of the two teams. Mathewson and Devlin are about the only two players on the New York team who carried the Giants to the pennant in 1905, the year the Nationals triumphed over the champions of the Ban Johnson circuit.

Mathewson may have lost some of his cunning, and yet he is still accounted one of the greatest, one of the most resourceful hurlers in the game. Devlin is still with the team, but has been crowded to the bench. Dan McGann is dead and the much-abused Merkle is in his place at first. Larry Doyle is a new comer at second, while Fletcher and Herzog in the infield and Snodgrass, Devore and Murray have made the fickle fans of Gotham forget of the deeds of Mertes, Donlin and Seymour.

Harry Davis is with the Athletics today, though he has been crowded from first by time, and young McInnis. Murphy has been moved from the infield and the two Crosses, Lave and Monte, have moved down the ladder of baseball ability. Chief Bender, the pitcher who won the only game the Athletics took from the Giants in the series of 1905, is still with the Mack men and is very much alive. History may repeat itself and Bender may be the pitcher to win for the American league team.

Critics say that the Athletics are the smoothest playing team in baseball today. McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker, the Philadelphia infield, have succeeded the famous Chicago stonewall infield as baseball's greatest first wall defense. Chance, Evers, Tinker and Steinfeldt were great, so great that they won four pennants for Chicago; the Philadelphia four come very near the high standard set by those famous Cubs.

But against this precision and surety of execution will be set the wonderful speed of the Giants—for the base stealing of this team has been a revelation this season—and their hitting ability. Not alone this, but with Mathewson and Marquard right McGraw will have two of the greatest flingers of baseball.

In a short series a pitcher, if right, can work every other day. That is just what Mathewson did in the only world's series he ever worked in. If both Mathewson and Marquard are right when the world's series is called next month, it may be that McGraw will alternate these two men in the box. If Bender and Coombs and Morgan are right, the games should be great battles fought out by two great teams, possessed of wonderful speed on the paths, brilliancy of attack and having some of the hardest hitters in the great national game.

Certain it is that had the Cubs won the flag, and they looked like the winners up to three weeks ago, the Athletics would have been the big favorites in the betting. Now it looks like a pretty even thing with the sentiment of the two leagues and the partisan fans making whatever odds are going to be.

THERE is no more clever manager of athletes in this country today than J. H. Herman of Buffalo, N. Y. He is the man who handles the affairs of Zbyszko, the idol of the Polish people, and after a defeat at the hands of Gotch, accomplished when Zbyszko was not as thoroughly familiar with the catch-as-catch-can game as he is at the present time, Herman is ready to wager real money that Zbyszko can defeat the world's champion and has managed things so adroitly that it seems very likely that Zbyszko will meet Gotch in the next big match that the pride of Humboldt enters.

Herman is without doubt the most systematic advertiser in this country. He has spread the fame of Zbyszko to the four corners of the world and has already entered upon a campaign for his man that will result in his meeting the present season the most prominent wrestlers in the world. Herman has sent out handsome engravings of the big Polish champion, and from the looks of these pictures Zbyszko seems to be in the best shape of his career.

As Zbyszko is almost certain to meet Pilakoff in a finish match here the present winter, the energetic campaign of the clever Herman to bring about a second meeting with Gotch, will be watched with a great deal of interest.

THERE is every indication that Duluth is going after the next national meeting of the bowlers. With bowling growing in this city, as Duluth steadily registers its increase in size and spirit, there is every reason to believe that the Zenith City will send a strong delegation of bowlers, reinforced with a strong squad of boosters, instructed to use every effort possible to bring the meet of next season to this city.

In the past the fact that Duluth has had no place to take care of the meet, has worked against this city, though perhaps Duluth has hardly been in the position to go after the meeting, which brings together some of the best bowlers of this country and Canada. But if the delegation from this city went after the meet strong enough and succeeded in landing it for Duluth, enough alleys could be put in at the Auditorium to take care of all the play that could be crowded into a week.

As a matter of fact Duluth would have a much better place to hold the meet than the building that housed the alleys in St. Paul where the convention was held last winter. With bowling growing in favor here, with Duluth being represented with stronger teams, it is up to the most influential men in Duluth's bowling circles to unite with some of the leading business men of this city and work for the national meet to be held a year from the coming winter.

In St. Louis, Pittsburg and other large cities the meets have been held in auditoriums. With the place to properly hold the national meet, Duluth should go after it with organized effort and bring here a convention that will advertise this city all over the country.

ROLLER HOCKEY GAME.

New Sport Will Be Introduced to Duluth Fans.

Tonight at the Auditorium rink the game of roller hockey will be introduced here as a new sport, at least new to Duluth. The Big Duluth and Northern Hardware teams will clash in the first roller hockey game ever played here and a game fast and interesting is expected, judging from the statements of those who have seen the various teams of the newly formed league in practice.

The game is played with the regulation hockey sticks and with a small ball. It is practically the same as hockey and is a very fast and lively contest. There are five men on a side, and with the exception of a few changes in the rules the game is identically the same as hockey played on the ice.

The very fact that it is harder to keep one's feet on rollers than it is on ice skates, contrives to make the game very exciting to the spectators at times. It is not an uncommon sight to see several players sprawling on the floor at the same time.

Following is the lineup of the two teams:

CINCINNATI AND NEW YORK PLAY POOR BALL.

Cincinnati, Sept. 25.—In a poorly played game before an enormous crowd, Cincinnati defeated New York 6 to 5. Marquard opposed Rube Benton when the game started, but Marquard was relieved by Wiltse after Cincinnati had gathered five runs off him and the score was tied at the end of the fifth. Wiltse allowed only three hits during the remainder of the contest, but as two of these were bunched in the seventh, it was enough to lose the game.

Benton was hit hard, but kept the hits scattered and struck out nine men.

Murray's triple and Merkle's singles and a double steal tallied the second run in the fourth inning. Snodgrass' single, an out, Almeida's error and singles by Herzog and Fletcher added three more in the sixth. For Cincinnati singles by Beecher, Hoblitzel and Marzan's wild pitch and an out totaled three runs in the third. Doubles by Clark and Benton added one in the fourth.

Almeida's single, Boyle's wild throw and Egan's sacrifice fly brought in another in the fifth, while Mitchell's single, Almeida's sacrifice and Egan's single scored the winning run in the seventh. Score:

EVANS MIXES WITH CROWD

Umpire Resents Foul Language and General Fight Is Result.

Cleveland and Philadelphia Ball Players Rescue Him With Difficulty.

Cleveland, Sept. 25.—Umpire William Evans hit one man, beat up another and was himself handled roughly following the Cleveland-Philadelphia baseball game here yesterday afternoon. A general fight resulted and a crowd of 2,000 spectators swarmed on the field and around the participants.

Spectators objected to Evans' calling a foul ball on Second Baseman Ball of the Cleveland team in the eighth inning and when he put Butcher out of the game in the ninth for protesting after two strikes were called on him, they became more aggravated. When the game was over, and Evans walked toward the clubhouse, a man jeered him with an oath, Evans says, and Evans struck him. Evans again started for the clubhouse and in front of the entrance another man is said to have cursed him.

Evans resented this with his fists and soon there was a general scrimmage, which did not end even after members of the Cleveland and Philadelphia teams bore the umpire inside the clubhouse. The crowd surged around the entrance demanding that Evans come back. Several women were in it and one was wedged so badly in the mass of people that two ball players had to rescue her and carry her into the clubhouse.

Evans was not badly beaten, though he complained of a pain in his back where some one kicked him.

"The first fellow used some pretty foul language," he said. "His fists were clenched but I hit him first. I did not hurt him, just knocked his hat off. The other fellow standing at the entrance to the clubhouse, refused to let me by and I hit him several times. I am sorry such a thing occurred and on Sunday too, but I had to defend myself."

Several years ago Evans was nearly killed when hit by a pop bottle thrown at him at the St. Louis American league ball park.

After Evans had been spirited away in an automobile to a railroad station, and out of the city, the crowd started to stop street cars in an effort to find the umpire. Two men who resembled Evans were pulled from cars, but a police saved them from being beaten.

ALHO SHOWING CLASS.

"Demon" Ed Alho of Cloquet, who is attracting a good deal of attention in wrestling circles of the Northwest because of his showing against all of the men whom he has met, will make his first appearance in this city in the preliminary to the Pilakoff-Yankee Rogers match at the Auditorium next Saturday.

On Labor day at Cloquet, Alho met George Whipps of Minneapolis, who is said to have wrestled Walter Miller twice and not lost a match. Alho made Whipps quit, Alho winning the match. Before the match with Whipps, which started Alho's campaign of the present season, he met and defeated all of the men of his weight in this part of the state, often being obliged to go out of his class to get matches.

The present winter he is going after some of the best men in his class and it would not be at all surprising to hear of Alho hooking up in a finish match with Sailor Jack.

The Cloquet boy is remarkably muscled and has shown both strength and endurance on the mat. The fans of Cloquet are very proud of him and are anxious to see him matched with some star of his weight. The present week Alho meets a wrestler near the international border line, returning here Thursday.

ONCE DESPISED MERKLE IS NOW A GREAT PLAYER

New York, Sept. 25.—Fred Merkle's superb ball playing at this critical stage of the struggle for the National league championship is one of the props which are keeping the Giants on top. Merkle's fight for recognition has been long drawn out, but the plucky first baseman has persevered until he now looms up as a great batsman, a remarkable fielder, a fleet base runner and a tireless worker. It is doubtful if any other ball player could have accomplished as much under the trying circumstances which attended Merkle's early baseball career as a New York player.

When he failed to touch second base in that memorable and fatal game with the Chicago Cubs in 1908, Merkle became a laughing stock and the butt of unjust criticism everywhere. He was held up to ridicule for a mistake that many other players had made, though not in games of such great importance. The big fellow took it all in good nature until it became tiresome. Then he whipped a few of the traducers out in his native town and thereafter during the winter months he was allowed to live in peace. But all this time Merkle enjoyed the confidence of John McGraw, who told him to pay no heed to jests and jibes, but to go ahead and do his best on the ball field.

"You can make the baseball public forget all about that touching second base business by playing the game the best you know how," said the Giants' manager, "I'll stick to you through thick and thin. Nobody can get your job. So show 'em that you're not a bonehead after all."

Thus encouraged, Merkle buckled down to work in earnest, with the result that soon he began to command respect. Fans who once laughed at him were quick to see that Merkle had the right stuff, and when he showed vast improvement in batting and fielding they generously applauded him. Today the episode of 1908 has been forgotten, Merkle is a star ball player, and if the Giants win the pennant much of their success can be attributed to the hard-working first baseman, who never lost heart when under the hottest fire.

ADAMS WIN CLOSE GAME

Jeffersons Are Defeated By Score of 6 to 0 in Opening Contest.

East End Team Plays Strong Game Against More Experienced Eleven.

In the first game of the local football season the Adams yesterday won from the Jeffersons, an East end team that has just entered the local field, by the score of 6 to 0. The playing of the newly formed Jeffersons, was stronger than even the stanchest admirers of that aggregation looked for. They held the Adams on even terms for part of the game and the strong West end team had to play its best game to defeat the insurgents from the east of Lake avenue.

The only score of the game came in the second quarter of the first half, with the ball eight yards from the Jeffersons' goal line and the third down, Emil Kriz hit the line for the required distance. Stevens negotiated the goal.

During the remainder of the game the two teams fought up and down the field on even terms. There was little to choose between them. So early in the season it is only natural that the offense of the two teams should not show up as strong as the defense. Both elevens found it hard to make consistent or repeated gains, and both resorted to punting at frequent intervals, the advantage in this department of the game lying with the Adams.

Young Bartlett and George Wood put up a corking good game for the Jeffersons, Bartlett doing some splendid ground gaining. Bartlett was a Trojan on defense and spoiled many a play for the opposition.

Bill Stevens, a former high school star, played one of the best games for the Adams, while the showing of Foster, Greener at fullback, and Kriz was also very good.

Art Buchanan of Superior was the referee and Bradley acted as umpire. There was little disputing and the officials enforced discipline.

Hibbing Youth Wants Fight With Champion Ad Wolgast.

The following by Tommy Andrews of Milwaukee, the well known fight critic, has to do with Pal Brown and his defi of Wolgast and the other leaders in the lightweight class, and shows that the Hibbing lad is at least attracting attention:

"Ad Wolgast, Knockout Brown and a few of the lightweight stars had better look to their laurels for there is a young man on their trail who is liable to cause all of them considerable trouble. The young man in question is Pal Brown, not a brother of Knockout Brown, but just a plain Brown from the good old state of Minnesota, the town of Hibbing, near the iron range, and judging from his record of the past year he is some pumpkin. He has not yet turned 20 years of age, but he has a fine development and is under the guidance of Dr. H. F. Plapper of Hibbing. Brown has had twenty-one fights the past year and has won nearly every one by the knockout route, and going to the limit of twenty rounds.

"Pal Brown is not trying to bluff his way to the top of the lightweight division, but is anxious to work his way up and take his chances with the best of the 133 pounders; then, if he cannot win, why, he is willing to return to the farm. As a matter of good faith, however, Pal, through his manager, Dr. Plapper, has posted with the writer, a forfeit of $1,000 to go as a part of a side bet to meet Ad Wolgast, Matt Wells, the English champion, Knockout Brown, or any legitimate lightweight, who will put up the money. He does not ask Wolgast to come out and say he will meet him now, nor does he want to be ignored, but he is willing to bet real money on his chances and go as high as $5,000 for a side bet. The money is up and the young man cannot do more to show that he means business.

"Pal has been fighting around 124 to 126 pounds, but is growing fast and should soon be a full-fledged lightweight, as he stands 5 feet 7½ inches. He is a clean-cut youngster and one who will mix and not try to stall along. He has gone to New Orleans where he hopes to have several good bouts and then work into New York, where he wants to get a crack at the near champions."

Fitwells Are Beaten.

The Fitwells met defeat yesterday at the hands of the Mohami baseball team of Virginia, the score being, 6 to 2. The game was fast and well played, despite the cold weather, and was witnessed by a large crowd.

COMPANY I TEAM WINS MARTIN SMITH TROPHY

The Martin Smith trophy was won yesterday afternoon at the rifle range by Company I of Superior with the score of 833, the nearest team to the Superior shooters being the field staff and band team of Duluth, with a score of 827. Seven teams entered the competitive shoot, Eveleth, Hibbing and Princeton being represented.

With seven shots allowed for each team member at each of the different distances, the possible score was 35. With very unfavorable weather conditions the scores are considered very favorable. Maj. Orrie E. Lee, first brigade, M. N. G., Stillwater, was the range officer; Lieut. R. M. Weaver, battalion adjutant of Duluth, was statistical officer. Capt. Hatcher, Capt. Rossiter, Capt. C. Weaver, Lieut. Pettigrew and Lieut. Gallop were among the visiting officers present.

Last season Company I also walked off with the trophy, a beautiful silver bowl and service, which is to be shot for annually. This season's mark marked a general improvement in the records which may be due to the use of the Springfield rifle.

Following is the result in detail:

BASE STEALING WINS FOR GIANTS

New York Far Ahead of Rivals in Theft of Sacks.

New York, Sept. 25.—A glance at the base-stealing averages of the National league is sufficient to show why Muggsy McGraw's New York Giants are leading the pennant race—also why the champion Cubs are not higher up. With the same kind of base stealing records that the Giants have made this year the Cubs would be out in front as far as the Athletics are, with nothing to worry about but the world's series. Of the ten leading base stealers in the National league six are New York Giants. They rank second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh in the ten. Bob Bescher of Cincinnati, is the only man ahead of the Giant sextet.

The Giants who are literally stealing the pennant are Devore, Murray, Herzog, Snodgrass, Merkle and Doyle. Devore has stolen fifty-four bases, Murray forty-six, Herzog forty-three, Snodgrass forty-four, Merkle forty-two and Doyle thirty-five. That makes 264 thefts for six men. A team with six base stealers like these is mighty hard to beat, especially when there are men like Marquard and Mathewson on the pitching staff.

One look at the Cubs' base-running record is sufficient to show that Chance has not had the run-getting team of old in the field this year. Jim Sheckard, who is not so fleet of foot these days as he has been in other years, tops the Cubs' list with a total of twenty-seven thefts. Pretty poor showing for a club which still is in the running for the flag—and a showing which makes people wonder all the more how Frank Chance, with a crippled team and a poor pitching staff, has kept the Cubs up in the race.

The Giants are stealing their way to the pennant. There is no doubt about it. The Cubs have got to get busy on the sacks if they hope to nose out the fast-running bunch McGraw has under his wing. The Giants are using the methods Bill Lange and Billy Hamilton made famous in the old days. They are taking chances on the sacks in every game and have made life miserable for the catchers all over the circuit. They steal on the slightest provocation and are getting away with game after game by this sort of attack.

When the Cubs were in their prime they had some base stealers. Three or four years ago Chance and Evers were reckoned about the best in the league. They are the best the Cubs have today. And they are the two men who have been absent from the lineup the most of the season. This is the reason the Cubs and Cub fans want Chance back in the fray—the reason they rejoiced because Evers is back. The Cubs must steal bases from now on, or the Giants will steal the pennant by the method the Cubs have been forced so far to neglect.

SPORTS ARE APATHETIC

Bombardier's Backers Criticized for Matching Him With Black.

London, Sept. 25.—Although the world's heavyweight championship is presumably at stake, the coming battle between Champion Jack Johnson and Bombardier Wells, the English title holder, is not causing a great deal of excitement in sporting circles here. Even the big purse of $40,000, the largest ever given for a prize fight outside of the United States, has not stirred the public to enthusiasm.

If opposition can be considered advertisement, the fight has received such from as widely divergent sources as the sporting writers and the pulpit. Most of the pugilistic experts, writing for the sporting papers, continue to criticise Wells' backers for permitting him to battle against the champion. These writers agree in describing Wells as a promising but inexperienced fighter, and they deplore the blight to his career which a defeat at this time would entail.

Apparently unmoved by the opposition against their meeting, the champion and challenger are hard at work at their respective training quarters, Johnson at Paris and Wells at Leigh-On-Sea and Earl's court. When the black champion left here for the French capital he was fat and if he attains fighting weight by Oct. 2, he will have to put in some strenuous work over the boulevards. Wells claims to be in the pink of condition and looks it. For the remainder of his training season the English champion will take things easy, doing only enough work to keep to weight.

The only detail of the fight still unarranged is the question of the referee, which will be decided by the fighters one week before the contest.

BASEBALL FANS ARE IMPATIENT

Many Orders for Tickets for World's Series Sent to Club Officers.

New York, Sept. 25.—Inquiries concerning the coming series of world's championship baseball games and orders for tickets for the games, have been received in unprecedented numbers at National league headquarters and the officers of the prospective pennant winners. To clear up any misunderstanding about the plans for the series, President Lynch of the National league issued a statement saying that no arrangements will be made for the playing of the series until it is definitely settled what two clubs will participate in the series. Then the national commission will make public a schedule and announce the price of tickets and where they may be obtained.

"It is useless and a waste of time," the statement says, "to apply for reservations at this office, or to the officers of the prospective pennant winners until after the national commission has made its declaration."

FRANK KRAMER WINS BICYCLE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 25.—Frank Kramer practically won the national professional bicycle championship at Velodrome track by capturing two firsts while Jack Clark, who had the lead, was unable to participate owing to injuries received last Wednesday. Kramer is now credited with 72 points and Clark with 60.

ROCHESTER AGAIN WINS EASTERN LEAGUE FLAG.

New York, Sept. 25.—The 1911 season of the Eastern league closed yesterday with a double-header at Providence and another at Newark, the tail clubs in the season's standing. President Edward Barrows, in reviewing the season, said it might easily be classed as one of the most successful in the twenty-one years' history of the senior organization of minor baseball leagues.

Rochester, managed by John Ganzel, for the third successive season, won the pennant. Its percentage was .645. Baltimore was second with .621. The other teams finished in the order named: Toronto, Buffalo, Montreal, Jersey City, Newark and Providence.

Linstrand Wins Prize.

At the conclusion of the Y. M. C. A. physical department tests, held in the Kelley Hardware company's window last week, it was found that men of this city average between a 600 and 700-pound lift and 250 cubic inches of lung capacity. The sweater offered by the hardware company by the man making the best showing, was won by William Linstrand, an employe of the Northland Coal company. He lifted 1,550 pounds and blew 310 cubic inches, giving him a total of 1,860 points. R. H. Dickerson was second with 1,775 points and W. F. Knox was third.

SHEEP DAYS ARE PASSING

Montana Becoming Great Agricultural State, Says Her Attorney General.

Albert J. Galen, attorney general of Montana and brother-in-law, of the late Senator Thomas H. Carter, is a visitor in Duluth today. Mr. Galen is accompanied by Mr. Bennett of Helena. Both Mr. Galen and Mr. Bennett have just returned from a trip to New York, later going to Washington, and are returning to Montana by way of Duluth.

Mr. Galen is the youngest attorney general that Montana has ever had. He is at the present time serving his second term, having been just above the age of qualification when elected for his first term. He is being, at the present time, very prominently mentioned as the Republican candidate for governor.

Born in Montana and living there all his life, he has a wide and comprehensive knowledge of his native commonwealth. His father was owner of the ranch where the famous Galen brand horses were raised, and the present attorney general had ridden the plains in his younger days.

"The grazing lands of Montana are rapidly disappearing," said Attorney General Galen this morning. "The range country is being pushed right back to the mountains. Dry farming has given Montana some of the richest wheat raising lands in the world, with the result that the cattle and sheep raising industries are being crowded to the wall.

"In the Judith basin there are at the present time over 180 gasoline plows. It is estimated that 6,000,000 bushels of wheat has been raised in one county alone, which eloquently explains why the cattle and sheep industries are being driven out of the fertile grain raising regions of the state. This is virgin land, which for years has been used for grazing. It was never believed that it was good enough to raise wheat on. The dry farming method is simply a scientific method of retaining the moisture in the soil by rotation, and it has worked wonders in our county."

Mr. Galen is a class mate of Judge Dancer of this city. He had not seen the judge for years, and this morning walked in on him in his chambers.

"How are you, old sport," called Attorney General Galen. Judge Dancer glanced up in dignified inquiry.

"I suppose I am taking liberties with so dignified a person," replied the gentleman from Montana, "but how are you, anyway."

Then Judge Dancer recognized his old class mate of Ann Arbor, and the two men sat down and enjoyed a long talk.

"The cowboy of the early days is slowly passing from us," said Mr. Galen. "There are a few of them left, and once in a while some young fellows from the East come out and wear chaps and big Stetson hats and try to carry on. Now and then you see a cowboy with chaps on, but not like we used to wear them in the days gone by. We didn't wear them for effect, but simply because it was the most natural thing in the world."

Mr. Galen and Mr. Bennett left this afternoon for the Twin Cities, from where they will leave for Montana.

SAID SHE WAS 'VERY CLASSY'

Frank Himes Told a Friend Mrs. Chapman Was a "Dream."

Frank J. Himes is said to have characterized Mrs. Nellie Chapman, his alleged affinity, as a "dream" and "very classy" to Christopher Shursen, a friend, who was on the stand this morning to tell what he knew of the case.

The action, which was brought by Mrs. Frank J. Himes, charges Mrs. Chapman with enticing her husband, Frank J. Himes, away from her, and asks $10,000 as damages for the loss of his affections.

The case has been on for several days before Judge Dibell of the district court. The closing arguments were made and the case given to the jury this afternoon.

Mrs. Himes claims that for some time past her husband has been living with Mrs. Chapman in an improper way at Mrs. Chapman's house at West Duluth.

Mrs. Chapman admits that Himes has been living at her house, but claims that he has been there as a regular boarder, paying for his room and food.

For several days past the courtroom has been crowded with people anxious to hear the testimony, part of which was sensational. The curiosity squad was larger today than usual.

PLAN STATE DAIRY PROBE

Health and Food Departments Will Look Into the Conditions.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—To inquire into and if possible remedy the unsanitary conditions existing in Minnesota dairies, as depicted by Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, E. B. Bouthell, assistant to George W. Whittaker of the division of husbandry, department of agriculture, is expected to arrive in St. Paul Oct. 2, and go into consultation with J. G. Winkjer, state dairy and food commissioner. The inspectors will be called in, and Dr. H. M. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, will join in the conference. A systematic campaign against unclean dairies is proposed.

Who Is Responsible?

Just who is responsible for conditions as outlined by Mrs. Crane is a mooted question between the dairy and food department and the board of health. Dr. Bracken of the health department says the dairy barns may be as Mrs. Crane pictures them. If they are, he says, that is a matter for the dairy division to take up.

The dairy and food department denies that the conditions Mrs. Crane pictured exist at all. F. W. McIntosh, secretary, intimates that if filthy conditions exist anywhere, be they in dairy barns or other places, the board of health should abate them.

Dr. Bracken said his department did not expect to take any action on anything commented upon by Mrs. Crane. Her report, he said, is to enlighten the people and is not intended for criticism of officials and present systems.

DULUTH IS NOT REPRESENTED

E. L. De Lestry, the Minnesota state vice president of the American Mining congress, which is to be held at the La Salle hotel, Chicago, Oct. 24-28 next, says that Duluth, although not represented among the delegates appointed by the governor to attend the congress, still has a chance to secure adequate representation. He said today that under the rules of the congress, the mayor of Duluth had a right to appoint six delegates, the Commercial club two and the Board of Trade two. This would make a total of ten delegates, each of whom would have fully as much authority as any of those named by the governor. Mr. De Lestry explained why the governor did not name any Duluth or iron range man in naming his ten. It was because for years the governor of Minnesota had appointed men from this part of the state and they never showed up. It was imperative, Mr. De Lestry declared, that all ten of the governor's appointees be present at the congress, as it was planned to form a state chapter, and all ten were needed for this organization. He also said he had written to John W. Sebenius and Dwight E. Woodbridge, asking them to attend the congress among the governor's appointees, but neither could attend.

The governor's ten appointees are: S. F. Olson and A. D. Wilson, Minneapolis; A. M. Eastman, F. G. Schurmeier, F. G. Krahmer, Charles Schuneman, S. G. Iverson and C. H. Gardner, St. Paul, and F. B. Seager and Charles Danielson, Cannon Falls.

REX BEER!

TEMPERATURE plays a big part in the life of most beers. But not so with Rex. You can pack it in ice until it's as cold as you like—and when opened it still retains its life, sparkle and brilliancy. This condition is not an accident. It's the result of care in brewing and quality of materials. When you pour a bottle of Rex, you will always find that same life you find in beer drawn directly from the wood.

Lieut. Col. Gerlach Makes Plea for a National Army.

Governor Eberhart Down for Speech But Fails to Arrive.

Afternoon Session Is Held on Board the Steamer Gopher.

The thirty-second annual convention of the Minnesota National Guard association opened this morning at the Commercial club. Over 150 commissioned officers of the National Guard, are present for the two days' convention, which will be given over to instruction and discussion on subjects dealing with the national and state military policy.

The officers form a brilliant assemblage, in their bright uniforms, resplendent with gold braid—the red stripes of the artillery officers giving a dash of extra color, standing out from the white stripes of the more numerous infantry officers. The National Guard association is made up of the commissioned officers of all the different military branches of the state and the number is increased by several visiting United States officers, members of the governor's staff and retired National Guard officers keeping in touch with the affairs of the organization.

An earnest plea by Lieut. Col. William Gerlach, U. S. A., retired, for a close adherence to the precept, "In time of peace, prepare for war," with arguments for a national army of sufficient strength and efficiency for effective action in a sudden emergency, with a well trained state reserve; a discussion by Brig.-Gen. Charles McC. Reeve of Minneapolis of conditions in South America republics, with an exposition of some of the causes which would make the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine in trying times difficult, and a technical talk on the Texas maneuvers from an observer's viewpoint by Capt. Bert M. Lennon of Minneapolis were the features of the morning session.

Maj. Thomas C. Clark of Stillwater, attached to the medical corps, was to have spoken on "Camp Sanitation" but he is attending the annual meeting of army surgeons in Milwaukee and is consequently unable to attend the meeting here.

Governor Not Here.

Several of the officers arrived Saturday and Sunday and this morning's early trains brought many more. Governor A. O. Eberhart, who was expected, did not arrive this morning and his attendance at the meeting is doubtful. Adjutant General Fred B. Wood did not arrive this morning, but he is expected tonight to remain for the remaining sessions.

When the convention was called to order this morning by Maj. William T. Mollison of Faribault, president of the association, 147 officers answered to their names. Last year at the St. Paul convention, only ninety-three answered the first roll call, and Maj. Mollison seized the opportunity to pay a graceful tribute to Duluth, saying that the great increase in attendance was undoubtedly due to the superior attractions of Duluth. He said that National Guard officers and all others are always glad to come to Duluth for they know a warm welcome awaits them here.

No time was lost in preliminaries. The officers, with true military precision and adherence to system, settled down to the business as outlined in the call for the convention.

Maj. G. C. Lambert of St. Paul, commander of the First field artillery, chairman of the executive committee, reported on legislative matters. He reported on the legislation obtained at the state capital last year and said that the National Guard obtained nearly everything for which a request was made. On the point of federal legislation, he called attention to the amendment placed on a federal appropriation bill last year requiring that National Guard men, in time of war, must serve two years regardless of the time of the expiration of their enlistment. He said that the objectionable amendment was not incorporated in the bill submitted at the extra session and which was not acted upon, but he urged the officers to have their representatives in congress watch for it at the next regular session and to bring their influence to bear against it. He said that the National Guard should not be discriminated against, as no similar provision applies to the men of the regular army.

"Military Needs of the United States," was the subject assigned to Lieut. Col. Gerlach. A tried and true soldier of many years' standing, a practical tactician of recognized ability, Col. Gerlach was given an enthusiastic reception when he arose to speak.

He plunged into his subject without preliminaries, pointing out the weakness of the present military system, the need of an armed force as a moral support to diplomatic arbitration and the wisdom of always being ready for war on the theory that arbitration is a beautiful thing until realities arise and diplomatic agreements are often binding just so long as there is no occasion for their violation.

Col. Gerlach said:

"The military deeds of the United States, a thorough philosophical contemplation of the writings and utterances of the noble men who led the people of the United States successfully through the struggle for independence, during the period between the conclusion of peace with Great Britain and the adoption of the Constitution will reveal to the student of our national history that their object when advocating the assemblage of the convention of 1787, was to form and perpetuate the Union of the states, and to foster a strong national spirit.

"Worshipping high political deals these patriots were also practical statesmen. So when regard by delegates for a diversity of interests of their individual states, and strong prejudices manifested themselves during the deliberations in committee, Washington and his able co-laborers necessarily resorted to compromises, and thereby finally succeeded in framing a system of government which, while we might call it unique, has proved itself in practice to be a happy combination of a strong central government for all common and external purposes, while the regulation of mere domestic affairs is left to the individual states.

"The result of these compromises is plainly evident in the final arrangement of military affairs.

"The liability of every citizen to military service in support of the state is recognized; the power to make war to raise and maintain armies, is wisely vested in the central government, limited, however, by a proviso, which forbids the making of appropriations for periods longer than two years. In the states is delegated the duty of organizing and training the militia in accord with a code of discipline prescribed by the federal authority.

Division of Authority.

"While we may accept this action as an acknowledgment of the principle that a military establishment is a necessary part of a well regulated governmental machine, we may deplore, too, that it carries an element of weakness, division of authority, an enemy of all military efficiency. It ignores the experience of the revolutionary war wherein more than once success was imperilled by failure of states to do their full duty, and military operations had to be carried on with hastily raised troops, serving only for short or indefinite periods.

"Now, if in 1787 an army was conceded to be an essential part of our institutions, we may justly assume, in view of changed conditions, that it is an absolute necessity today. The United States developed into a strong, without arrogance we can claim, leading world power, the exponent of free Democratic and Republican governments cannot isolate themselves, neither with safety or honor. They must keep their place in the column of the march of human progression, assigned to them by Providence. They must perform well their duty as a member of the great family of nations, and either courageously work out their destiny, or perish ingloriously by the wayside.

"If these promises are correct, there can be no question as to the necessity for the development of our national war power and a discussion of our military needs is in order.

"A careful reconnoisance of our surroundings shows on all sides strong nations, armies fully organized, equipped, ready for almost instant service. Steam and electricity have almost annihilated space and time, and our geographical situation does no longer give us the protection it did in former days. Our neighbors, too, are our active competitors in the commercial field. Free access to them for us is absolutely demanded in the interest of our people. Furthermore there is the Monroe doctrine, a part of our political religion, wisely promulgated by our government. It is yet deemed wise to maintain it and we must perform the duties coincident to its existence.

"Good, practical statesmanship dictates that we should not depend on sympathy in the conduct of our international relations. Agreements among nations usually are effective only when it is to the interest of their makers to observe them. Diplomatic action especially protests, command respect, it then is power behind them to force their respectful consideration.

"It is certainly commendable to promote the tendency to submit international respects to arbitration, but it would not be wise to wholly depend on this spirit before our investigation has advanced so that reason alone will govern and moral force alone can rule mankind.

"Luck and pluck have carried us creditably through all our military undertakings so far in spite of want or patriotism, but look at the sacrifice of life and treasure this has involved. Surely, we cannot forever place our trust in a 'special Providence,' our national childhood is passed would we willingly claim consideration on other amends.

Military Needs.

"When we come to a determination of what are our military needs and how to provide for them, we face a weighty problem. In its solution the statesman and soldier must work faithfully, hand in hand.

"We have here today, not the time to go into details to sketch—a general outline only is practicable.

"One thing is certain—to succeed in their labor the statesman must be watchful, the soldier must be highly efficient, his pride in, above every personal consideration, his sole ambition to serve well his community. There is a weakness inherent in Republican government, where military matters are concerned. As a rule with us, the head of the state and war secretary are not professional soldiers. We have no war lord who gives the decisive note. Our chief of staff is yet subject to political influence, for now his term of office ends with the presidential term and is limited to four years.

"These difficulties can, however, be neutralized to a certain degree, if after due deliberation and mature reflection we adopt a fixed military policy. The basic principle of this should be the creation of a 'national army,' an 'Army of the United States,' under the direct control of the constitutional commander-in-chief, the president; its size sufficient to meet any force a possible opponent may be able to land on our coast upon the commencement or in the early stages of a war. This force must be organized, trained, equipped, transportation to the place of its first assemblage and subsistence and other needs provided for in advance, so it will be capable of almost instant mobilization. We must not overlook the fact that the value of a good military establishment depends on its readiness. The first assemblage of troops is of vital importance. Errors then committed can rarely be remedied in the course of subsequent operations. It is not just that our patriotic soldier, the flower of the nation, which invariably impelled by patriotism answered its call to arms when occasion demanded should receive his first instruction on the battle field. Superiority in preparation has such a tremendous influence upon the final outcome in war, that no enterprising enemy will ever neglect to turn it to best advantage. He will not give us time to get ready.

"When I refer to organization, I have not in mind merely companies or other tactical units, but also the larger aggregations especially the division, as a field and battle unit, and the various relation of higher command. All this, in military parlance, 'ordre de bataille,' should be well thought out in time of peace, properly arranged and fixed. When war comes there is no time for deliberation in this direction, besides an important part of the training of an army consists in its higher commanders becoming acquainted with their troops and duties. The latter is the main object of our maneuvers.

Reserve Forces.

"An element in the organization of an army, indispensible indeed to its full efficiency, is its reserve. Peace conditions rarely ever permit the keeping of fighting units at full field strength. They must be filled up upon mobilization to a war basis. Active operations soon thin their ranks. To meet these wants by assigning recruits, impairs the efficiency of a command. War history is full of examples illustrating this truth. Only a trained reserve—(even if only partially so)—will provide for this need. Now when the soldier has plainly outlived the military needs of our country and this is no easy task, the work of the statesman becomes important and hard indeed.

"He must reckon with the available resources, financial, etc. He has prejudices to overcome, he has to do battle with ignorance. Designing men, high in our national councils, as we well know, conjure the ghost of militarism, at certain periods, to frighten the unthinking part of our people. The intelligent citizen should take this as an insult. If one soldier to 1,000 people, can endanger our liberty, it rests on a poor foundation.

"Next the statesman's efforts are handicapped by the action of some of our legislators, in parading statistics, showing our enormous expenditures for military purposes. These figures are startling indeed, yet investigation will uncontestably prove that they are the result of our habitual disregard of the wise precept "In time of peace prepare for war." So much for our military needs. But I beg a new attention for a few minutes more.

Citizen Soldiers.

"In the solution of our military problem, the citizen soldier plays an important role too. To him falls largely the task of performing the missionary work needed to enlighten our people on military matters; to create an interest in our army. This you should ever keep in view. Let no opportunity pass unused. In this way, close to the people, you can do much good, and prepare the public mind for the acceptance of the principle of general military service by the citizen—to much we eventually come in the course of the natural evolution of mankind, before the dream of eternal peace of our peace enthusiasts can be realized.

"Let us who wear the blue not go to sleep. Let us prove our patriotism by openly, persistently advocating true reform—even where it involves the surrender by states of time honored privileges.

"Let us work for a 'national army,' a 'sword of the nation,' composed of our regular establishment, our citizen soldiers and a reserve common for both. "Changes in the recruiting system, localizing of its regiments, are steps quite practical and will initiate a movement which will promote progress.

"Study well the war and general history of our fatherland—universal history too—in a true philosophical not superficial manner, and you find in it a never failing source of political wisdom and patriotic information."

In South America.

Europeans hold commercial sway in South American republics, their taking hold of governments is not beyond the possibilities, their looking to their fatherlands for advice would be a natural consequence and a violation of the principles of the Monroe doctrine might be the construction placed upon it by the United States, was the point brought out in Gen. Reeve's paper on "South America as It Is."

If the South American people could be made to realize that the United States does not want territory, but is actuated by the friendliest feelings, the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine would be comparatively easy, he said.

Gen. Reeve's paper was a discussion of conditions in the different South American republics, his conclusions and facts being obtained from his observations during a five months' trip through the country the south.

He declared that Europeans are the leaders in commerce in South America; that the native governments are unstable and corrupt; that Americans are looked upon with suspicion, and that there are no prospects for the American entering business in them. The Peruvians alone seem to be friendly to the United States, he said.

Of Panama he said:

"At Panama I saw the same feeling of hostility. One would think that, after having created a nation, after having made them a present of $10,000,000 for a strip of land and a concession which no other nation would have given them more than 10 cents for; after having made their fever-infested, plague-smitten cities as healthy as any modern city is today, they would have shown some symptom of gratitude. But they say that we drive too hard a bargain in the canal concession, and that they find now they could easily have sold it to some European nation for double the price we paid."

Gen. Reeve's paper was full of brilliant humor and observations showing a keen insight into the reasons underlying conditions, and it was greatly appreciated.

Texas Maneuvers.

Capt. Bert M. Lennon of Minneapolis was the first National Guard officer to report to Gen. Carter at the Texas maneuvers. In his discussion this morning he read from his report made to the adjutant general on his return from the maneuvers, and he added comments as he went along. Capt. Lennon's conclusion was that regular staff officers have much to learn in the handling of large bodies of men, and the National Guard is naturally still farther behind.

Capt. Lennon said his observations convinced him of the fallacy of trying to drill men in large numbers and get good results in handling them in large bodies afterwards. He took up the technical features of the camp at San Antonio, the sanitary measures, policing, hiking, target work, and rations. He said he was impressed by the lack of instructions to National Guard officers and said that the only conferences between officers he heard were in private. He said that in his opinion officers should have been called together for tactical instructions to get the most out of the maneuvers.

The afternoon session of the convention is being held on the U. S. S. Gopher, which steamed out into the lake. An address by Governor Eberhart was on the program, but the governor has not arrived in the city. The other numbers on the program are: Remarks by Col. Arthur W. Wright of Austin, Second Infantry, M. N. G.; "Battle Exercises," Maj. Nicholas Nicholson of Austin, Second infantry, M. N. G.; remarks, Brig.-Gen. Fred B. Wood, adjutant general; "National Guard Legislation," Capt. Albert Pfaender of New Ulm, Second infantry, M. N. G.; "Communication in the Field," Maj. Frank W. Matson of St. Paul, Third Infantry, M. N. G.

This evening the visitors will be entertained at a theater party at the Orpheum theater.

STYLE SHOW WEEK HERE

This is style show week in Duluth. The fall and winter goods which have been coming in for weeks will be on exhibition in Duluth stores all week. The newest and most exclusive patterns will be shown and no woman can deny herself the pleasure of looking over the goods even though she does not buy.

It will be merely an introductory week and managers of all the stores are anxious that all Duluth women take advantage of the oppertunity to see the newest styles of both America and Europe.

The stores have been trimmed inside and out with appropriate decorations for fall and the windows and interiors have been draped lavishly with new goods.

Never before have the styles been so attractive as this fall and the trimmers have more than an ordinary chance to show their skill. At each store there are exclusive designs and in an effort to get large crowds out to see them this week many of the stores have sent out personal invitations all over the city.

ALLEGED BANDIT'S BAIL IS $10,000

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ten thousand dollars was the amount fixed for bail for John Young, the alleged Northern Pacific bandit. He will be given a preliminary hearing in the morning on a charge of assisting in holding up a train at Buffalo July 19. He reached Fargo this morning from Neenah, Wis., under the charge of Sheriff Boyle. He claims to have returned to Fargo and to have remained in this city several days following the crime, and that he got $125 as his share of the loot.

Officials are in doubt as to the man's sanity. Others believe he made the confession to get away from Wisconsin, where he may have committed some crime.

EXPERIMENTING WITH NEW STUMP PULLER.

Andrew A. D. Rahn, with the Shevlin-Carpenter Lumber company of Minneapolis, and one of the chief lieutenants of Thomas Shevlin, is in the city today, a guest of the Spalding.

Mr. Rahn has just returned from Navish, where the lumber company sold a large tract of land. He is here to look over a new stump puller that is being demonstrated here, and which, should it prove of practical value, will be purchased and taken up to the vicinity of Crookston and used in clearing some of the land up in that part of the country.

INJURED IN FALL DOWN FLIGHT OF STAIRS.

William Anderson, aged 40, may die at St. Luke's hospital as a result of this morning when he fell down a flight of outside stairs leading to his room over John Randahl's saloon, 105 East Superior street.

Anderson has not been working for the past few days, and the police say that he became intoxicated this morning. In ascending the stairs, he toppled over and in falling struck on his head, sustaining a fracture of the skull.

The man has a brother with whom he was rooming. Anderson came to Duluth from the farm and has been employed as a laborer in the city for the past few months. His parents are living in Sweden.

BEARS HAVE WINNING DAY

Bulls Lose Part of Ground They Gained Friday and Saturday.

Wheat Down in All Leading Markets—Flax, Too, Suffers Loss.

Duluth Board of Trade, Sept. 25.—The remarkable gains that the bulls made in the wheat pit on Friday and Saturday were partly lost today, although the three days, taken together, still show the bulls at a termendous advantage. The decline today was almost steady. tl seemed to be due largely to manipulations on the Minneapolis board, though Duluth followed closely. Duluth December declined 1⅞c below Saturday's close. Duluth flax also showed heavy losses, September declining 10 cents. Durum lost three-fourths of a cent, corn one-half, and oats a quarter. Rye remained the same.

The excitement in the wheat markets of America, in particular those at Duluth and Winnipeg, over the defeat of reciprocity showed some tendency to subside during the earlier part of today's session, though not in any such measure as to give promise of wiping out the bulge that the defeat caused. Duluth September, which closed Saturday at $1.11, opened today at $1.10 and about noon was selling at $1.09⅛. Minneapolis December was sagging at about the same rate. Some of the brokers were inclined to think that some powerful interest at Minneapolis was pounding down the December wheat. But the fact remained that the Minneapolis wheat receipts were exceptionally heavy today, and that in itself would have a strong tendency to put down the price there, and draw down the Duluth price in sympathy. Reports from Chicago and Winnipeg were also bearish, though not is so great degree as to equal the sagging at Duluth and Minneapolis. Counteracting the bearish tendencies, to some extent, were reports of badly spotted wheat in the northwestern part of Saskatchewan. Offsetting, somewhat, the effect of heavy car arrivals at Minneapolis, was the report of an excellent demand in that city for cash wheat.

Flax offerings on the Duluth floor were far heavier today than they have been at any time this fall. The railroads estimated for today the arrival of sixty-nine cars of flax. This cast every other day's car receipts of the present season away into the shade. Of course the flax prices went down, the greatest break being in September, which is used more in hedging just now than any of the other futures. Before noon September had struck a point 10 cents lower than Saturday's close, selling for $2.28. About noon it was quoted at $2.30. The arrivals of flax at Duluth are steadily exceeding the shipments, and the result is that flax is accumulating in the Duluth elevators. Eastern crushers are not buying as heavily as one might reasonably expect, but are still holding aloof for lower prices.

LINSEED.

The general tendency of flax during the week ending Saturday, Sept. 23, was clearly downward. Only one day did it close at a bulge over the previous day and that was on Friday, the day following the defeat of Canadian reciprocity. This bulge was rather sympathetic, than due to actual commercial conditions. Wheat took a skyward flight and drew other grains, more or less, in the same direction. However, it soon became apparent that the duty on Canadian flax does not affect the price of American flax a great deal, for the seed resumed its downward course the very next day. The average of the September closes during the week was $2.46 or 8 cents below the average of September closes of the previous week, $2.54.

The cheapening of the flaxseed was due to heavier arrivals and a poor demand on the part of the Eastern crushers. These crushers do not wish to buy any more flax than they must at prevailing prices, which they regard as too high. They are looking forward to the Argentine crop, though that will not be ready for some months. However, if the arrivals of flax at the Duluth market continue to grow heavier, as they have been doing, the weather being generally favorable for thrashing, it is likely that the price of flax will soon be low enough to stimulate quite a demand on the part of the crushers. The receipts of flax at Duluth during the week were nearly 83 per cent greater than the receipts during the previous week, whereas there was an actual falling off in shipments. It is no wonder that the price has been going down.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Feeling of Depression Springs From Big World Shipments.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Larger world's shipments than expected brought about a feeling of depression today in the wheat pit. Besides, Liverpool reported free offerings from Manitoba, with demand poor. Selling here was rather heavy, but support only scattered. Little attention appeared to be given to talk of war growing out of the clash between Turkey and Italy. The opening was ¼@⅜c to ⅝c lower. December started at 98⅞c to 99¼c, a loss of ¼@¼c to ½@⅝c, sagged to 98⅝@¾c and reacted to 99c.

Northwestern millers buying wheat southwest led to further hardening of values but the effect did not last, the market declining worse than before. Closing prices were steady with December at 98⅝c, a net loss of ¾@⅞c.

Weak cables carried corn down. Leading houses took the selling side, and met with little opposition. December opened ¼@⅜c off at 63⅞@64c. The market seemed to have no power to rally.

Subsequently, colder weather west helped prices somewhat, but there was a fresh decline when wheat fell late in the day. The close was steady, half a cent down at 63¾c for December.

Oats suffered from unloading by longs. Prices were steadied, however, through resting orders to buy at a decline. December started ⅛@⅜c lower at 47@47½c, and later held at the last named level.

Selling on the part of packers had a tendency to knock the props from under provisions. First sales varied from Saturday night's figures to 15c below with January deliveries $15.12½@$15.25 for pork, $8.97½@9.00 for lard, and $8.00 for ribs.

LOSSES ARE WIPED OUT

Stocks Bound Upward in Last Hour and Close Is Strong.

New York, Sept. 25.—Further weakness developed in the stock market at the opening today, although there was no sign of the extreme nervousness of last week. The first transaction in United States Steel was a block of 8,000 shares at 56⅛ to 56 compared with Saturday's close of 56¼.

On subsequent transactions the loss was increased to a point. The preferred receded a half. Weakness of the copper group was acute. American Smelting sold at 58⅛, a decline of 1¾. Anaconda receded a point to 31⅛ and Amalgamated Copper 1¼ to 47⅝, all low records for the year.

Union Pacific lost 2 points, Canadian Pacific 1⅜, Northern Pacific 1¼.

The market was unable to retain the gains made during a slight rally which followed the initial decline. Heavy offerings of the copper stocks offset the support extended to the railroad leaders, and prices all around sank to a lower level than at the outset, with considerably more selling of the representative railroad stocks. United States Express broke 4 points, American Beet Sugar preferred 3½, Amalgamated Copper 3, American Smelting 2⅜ and Anaconda 2 and Reading 1¾.

Liquidation more general and virulent than any which has overtaken the stock market in the last two months of its almost steady decline, was witnessed today. The selling was not on so large a scale as that of last Friday, but declines, especially in the copper and affiliated shares, were more precipitate.

According to board room gossip, the selling came from all quarters, including Europe, and was probably intensified by the presence in this city of the attorney general of the United States whose attitude toward trusts has recently provoked so much uneasiness. To the impartial observer, the course of the market this morning, suggested that railway shares were held steady last week chiefly for the purpose of unloading elsewhere in the list.

New low records for the year were made today by Union Pacific, Reading and some other high grade issues. At midday stocks were pouring in large volume and the extreme weakness of the less negotiable issues indicated that they were being thrown out of loans. Bonds were heavy.

The market closed strong. Stocks bounded upward in the last hour, recovering a substantial portion of the losses. A statement accredited to Attorney General Wickersham indicating that a tentative plan had been agreed upon for the readjustment of the American Tobacco company's affairs, led to sharp rallies in the securities of the corporation. The strength extended to the remainder of the list and prices mounted rapidly. The short interest was forced to retreat and the bidding before the close was unusually spirited. United States Steel rose 4¼ to within a fraction of Saturday's closing; American Smelting recovered 3⅝, Union Pacific 4, Reading, Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific 3, and St. Paul and Amalgamated Copper 2½. Final prices in many cases showed only slight net losses.

Cotton Market.

New York, Sept. 25.—Cotton opened steady but at a decline of 11@23 points under heavy general selling which forced every month on the list into new low ground for the movement. Selling was inspired by weakness at Liverpool attributed to heavy Southern offerings of spots in that market, good weather in the south over Sunday and favorable crop accounts from Georgia and Alabama. Covering was very active around the initial figures and prices rallied 10 or 12 points from the lowest right after the call, but the South was a very heavy seller, and the market later in the first hour was nervous and unsettled with active months about 16 to 18 points below the close Saturday.

Spot closed quiet, 30 points lower; middling uplands, 10.55; middling gulf, 10.80. Sales, 400 bales.

Futures closed easy; closing bids: September, October and November, 10.18; December, 10.31; January, 10.28; February, 10.30; March, 10.38; April, 10.41; May, 10.50; June, ——; July, 10.50; August, —.

MUNICIPAL HOUSEKEEPER SUBMITS HER REPORT

The report of Caroline Bartlett Crane, "expert municipal housekeeper," dealing with sanitary and housing conditions in Duluth and sixteen other cities in Minnesota, has been issued by the Minnesota state board of health.

It comprises 239 printed pages and deals with various subjects pertaining to public health and the conditions surrounding the various towns and cities which she visited. She spent five days in Duluth and delivered several addresses in which she commended certain things and condemned others. She has not taken up each city separately, but under each head she discussed the situation relative to that particular subject in each city, comparing one with the other. The campaign was undertaken at the joint request of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs and the state health board.

Mrs. Crane repeats her severe criticisms of the poor house and the awful conditions which she said she found existing there. She mentions the overcrowding of the city jail and an explanatory note states that the inadequate jail capacity is thought to have something to do with the alleged laxity of o"cials in following cases of family desertion. She also expresses surprise that at the time of reading the proof of her copy the septic tank at Chester creek had not been completed despite newspaper announcement. She states that the people in general and some of the officials in Duluth seem to have no consciousness of a housing problem and tells of some of the bad places which she visited. She commends Duluth's milk inspection and its water supply.

The topics under which the report is submitted are:

Letter of transmittal, introduction, water, sewer, street sanitation, garbage collection and disposal, smoke nuisance, milk supply, meat supply, markets and food factories, hygiene and sanitation of schoolhouses, housing problem, almshouses and jails, public health administration and the public, why no index.

At the rear of the report is appended an explanation of why there is no index and several interesting questions are raised. It is as follows:

"The omission of an index to this volume is deliberate, and is prompted by the same motive which led to the classification of material under subjects rather than (as in previous reports) under cities; namely, to induce as many persons as possible to read the whole report, and not to pick out merely what is said about their own city. Thus, they may gain a better appreciation of the relative excellences and deficiencies of their own city, and may learn where to turn for helpful example.

"Reading of Eveleth, how can Winona, or any other city, remain content with its public health appropriation?

"And how did Winona get her parks, and Eveleth her professional full-time health officer?

"If Duluth can protect her milk supply, why can not Minneapolis and St. Paul protect theirs?

"If a central abattoir is practical in Owatonna, why not elsewhere?

"Why should Rice and Freeborn counties, thirty miles from each other, be world-wide apart in the care of their almshouse poor?

"How does little Waseca come to have such a fine public comfort station, while cities four times her size have none?

"These are but samples of countless questions that will arise among the residents of each city if they will but read about the other cities. At all events, it seems best not to discourage this much desired end by providing a short-cut to the facts about 'our town.' Nevertheless I am regretfully aware that the omission of an index lessens convenience in any more general use which may be made of this work."

LAST BOAT OF THE SEASON

The passenger business between Buffalo and Duluth will close tomorrow, when the steamer Juniata of the Anchor line will leave this harbor for the last trip of the year. This boat arrived in port this morning with a few passengers, and will leave at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening.

For the Anchor line this season has been the busiest season in its history, and the three big boats which have made the journey from Duluth and Buffalo, have carried thousands of people.

The passenger season will be closed for the year next Saturday, when the Hamonic of the Northern Navigation company will leave here on Tuesday.

WILL NOT RECOMMEND THE IMPROVEMENT.

Believing that the prospective commerce of Brule Harbor, Wis., is too small to warrant the making of the proposed improvements, Lieut. Col. Francis R. Shunk, who is in charge of the Duluth district, has issued an announcement that an unfavorable report will be made regarding the improvement.

LOCK WORKER IS HURT AT THE SOO.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Lennox a Poe locking man was severely hurt at 10 o'clock Sunday night when a stern line of the steamer Saxon slipped off a lock wall corner catching Lennox on the legs. Lennox was thrown into the air and received a scalp wound and other injuries to different parts of his body. He was unconscious for some time, but his injuries are not fatal.

"They'll have a busy time taking me," Mr. Keller was told he said.

"Davis sat in a saloon with our informant and drank with him," Mr. Keller said this morning. "That was a notable gathering of yeggs up there."

BULL TAKES POSSESSION OF ONEOTA CEMETERY

If any one with superstitious inclinations had occasion to traverse the lonely highway which winds around Oneota cemetery Saturday evening at dusk, he would have had plenty of material for a ghost story, which, with the aid of imagination and a little exaggeration, could be kept in the family and handed down to the grandchildren.

Even Sexton James Brayden, caretaker of the cemetery, was puzzled at first, although he claims that he was not frightened. Sonorous blasts coming from the direction of the graveyard brought Sexton Brayden to the cemetery and in the half-light, half darkness, he saw looming up before him a vague form of a horned quadruped, which gave him a merry chase, before he got to a place of safety.

Anxious to solve the mystery Sexton Brayden returned accompanied by his son. With considerable more discretion than speed, they approached a second time that which appeared to be a huge dark apparition from the dead. Upon careful investigation they found it to be a bull, which had probably strayed into the cemetery some time during the afternoon.

The sexton's attempt to oust the animal from the burying ground almost resulted disastrously for him, for the animal put him to rout a second time. This time the father and son returned with a rope and after much maneuvering, managed to lasso the creature.

This did not end the difficulty, however. Mr. Bovine refused to be led. He displayed his rather peevish disposition by stamping around and leaving his hoof marks in some of the flower beds which mark the graves. Try as they might, the bull could not be led, dragged, pushed or coaxed out of the graveyard. Evidentally he had come there to stay. This morning the bovine was still in the cemetery tied to a tree.

Mr. Brayden has given the following description of the animal: Jersey back, dark sides, dark legs, a light grayish spot between the eyes and a pair of horns. The bull is thought to be about 2 years old. The owner may recover the animal by recompensing Mr. Brayden for the damages done.

COMMITTEE FROM MISSOURI

A committee from Proctor and J. J. Frey of West Duluth called at the office of the city engineer this morning to go over the plans for the Getchell road and the work which has already been done. The entire situation was fully explained to them by W. E. Hawley, assistant engineer.

Some complaint had been made as to the contract, but they were shown why certain kinds of construction were necessary. Mr. Hawley said that some exceedingly difficult work had been encountered, and could only be handled as had been done if the best results were to be obtained for the money available. The work will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The council allowed $2,000 for the work, and it is understood that a similar amount will be available from the county, with a probable further allowance from the city later. The committee appeared to be satisfied after the members had gone over the situation with the engineer.

BOATS FAIL TO SETTLE QUESTION OF SUPREMACY.

The much disputed question of whether the motor boat championship honors belong in Superior or West Duluth, was not settled Sunday afternoon, although contestants from both sides of the bay claim them.

The much postponed race between the Dauplaise's Relentless of Superior, and Ernest Larson's Dupont the Second of West Duluth, was held Sunday up the river, the course on the bay being too rough.

Owing to a misunderstanding in regard to the course, the race was a failure. Larson's craft encircled the course but once and in doing so finished ahead of Dauplaise's boat. The latter craft kept on going and finished alone on the second lap. Two laps were supposed to have been run off, but Larson claims that he misunderstood this.

Owing to the lateness of the season, it is improbable that the boats will race again. Both are in the 40-horsepower class.

MUST FACE TRIAL EITHER IN UTAH OR AUSTRIA

Ivan Cacic, of Hibbing, 29 years old, is now in the hands of the imigration department and stands a show of being sent to Utah where he will be tried for an attempted killing, or sent to Austria, where the police are said to be anxiously waiting for him to try him for the shooting of a girl at a church entertainment, and also for the cutting of another man in an Austrian church.

According to the people of Hibbing, Cacic is a gambler and a "bad man," and they advised the immigration officers to "look out for him." Last March Cacic slashed two Dalmatians with a knife in a saloon, because they "were cussing the Austrians."

Four years ago Cacic came to this country from his native land, and settled in Bingham Canyon, Utah, where he shot a man in the leg. He claims that six men were after him at the time, and that he tried to avoid them, but they caught him in a boarding house. He then shot one of them, but he states, he never learned how the man was, nor how seriously he was injured.

Following his escape from Bingham canyon, Cacic came to Hibbing, where he stayed for four months, after which he left for Austria. It was while there that he shot the girl in the head while shooting at a man at the church entertainment. Later he cut a man in a church, it is claimed, and then made good his escape, coming to this country and returning to Hibbing.

Following his trouble with the Dalmatians an investigation was made, which resulted in finding out the other facts regarding him. Cacic states that he was in the affairs charged against him in this country, but denies that he had any connection with the affairs in Austria.

IVAN CACIC.

In speaking of the deportation, he states that he has no objections to being sent back but "doesn't see why he should be put to so much trouble after what he has gone through." It is possible that he will be extradited to Utah to stand trial for the shooting there, if witnesses can be found. If not he will likely go to Austria.

The immigration service acknowledges the work done by the police department of Hibbing in this case. They were instrumental in the man's apprehension.

Killing Song Birds.
Teachers in the public schools have been asked to aid the preservation of song birds in and about the city by impressing upon the minds of the children that they must not kill them. Each year it is claimed that many harmless birds are killed by small boys with .22-caliber rifles and slingshots. Several persons have also narrowly escaped injury from stray bullets from rifles in the hands of these amateur hunters, who are especially numerous at this season of the year.

Burglars Unsuccessful.
Would-be safe robbers entered Polinski's meat market at 27 East First street some time between Saturday night and this morning. Gaining an entrance through the rear, they attacked the knob of the safe with a hammer, but did not succeed in breaking it off. They either gave it up as a bad job or were frightened away.

Yeomen Will Entertain.
The Brotherhood of American Yeomen, No. 3131, of this city, will have a free entertainment for friends and members this evening at the K. P. hall on West Superior street. There will be a musical program and refreshments will be served.

Straight Jail Sentences.
Two men and a woman each got straight jail sentences of sixty days in the county jail when arraigned in police court this morning. All of them are old offenders for drunkenness and have been sent over the hill time and time again. This morning they entered pleas of guilty to third offense drunkenness. The law makes it mandatory that they be sent to jail sixty days. They gave their names as Eva Saharan, Magnus Johnson and Emanuel Anderson.

Club Manager Fined.
Than Travis, who runs the colored club at 22 West First street, pleaded guilty in police court this morning to running an unlicensed drinking place. He paid a fine of $100. Complaint was made to the police Saturday morning that the place was being conducted in a disorderly manner. Detectives Terry and Toewe were sent to investigate and found about thirty colored people shouting and singing so loudly that they could be heard a considerable distance. They had evidently been celebrating the greater part of the night.

Two Strangers in Hospital.
A man and a woman whose identity is unknown are at St. Luke's hospital. They were picked up by the police and sent to the hospital for treatment. The woman was picked up at 3 o'clock Sunday morning on the Bowery, and is apparently suffering from the effects of too much indulgence in alcoholic beverages. Her name could not be learned. It was gathered that her home is on the range. The man was found unconscious on the sidewalk last evening in front of the city hall. He had evidently been stunned by a fall. Neither is considered in a dangerous condition.

Smallpox Cases.
Several cases of smallpox have been discovered by the health department at West Duluth. Some of those afflicted are students. They were sent to the pest house and every precaution taken to prevent the spread of the disease. Its origin is unknown. There have been several other cases in the last year, but in practically every instance the patient was a non-resident who had contracted the disease outside the city.

Posed By Miss Russell.
The 1911 fall girl was posed by Miss Russell, one of Duluth's most popular saleslades, and who is connected with the suit department of J. M. Gidding & Co.

Voluntary Bankrupts.
The Aurora Mercantile company of Aurora, Minn., this morning filed a petition with the clerk of the United States court in voluntary bankruptcy. C. H. Taylor, secretary and treasurer of the company, signed the petition. The liabilities are given as $53,679.35, while the assets are $38,366.75.

SAY EVENING PAPER IS BEST!

The evening paper is the best for advertising, because the morning paper is carried townward by the men and is finally consigned to the waste basket. Aside from the class that can afford to help in the home, few women get time to read until after the day's work is done.

The Pageant of Fashions for Fall

THE glories of the coronation of England's monarchs have been the theme of greatest interest in the eyes of all the world. And even in democratic America we have been a bit dazzled thereby. The return of the great to mediaeval brilliance of color, and riot of gold and jewels, for this great occasion, is reflected in the robes of fashion generally. So that all of the world shall catch a ray or two of the glories of nobles and kings, Coronation red and king's blue are not the only darlings of the mode that boast a royal descent. For there are innumerable opulent touches to be noted in gold embossed brocades and tinsel tassels, in beading, jewelling and heavy embroidery that hint at the influence of the great and mysterious East.

At a recent exhibition of imported models, four examples of the successful exploitation of East Indian ideas were noted. The first was an afternoon costume of navy blue liberty satin, with Oriental embroideries, gleaming with metal threads. It was a one-piece robe effect, fastened down the front and shirred in, at the waist line, where a girdle of plaited satin cords, with heavily weighted sash ends, confined the fullness. The skirt was left open almost to knee height, so as to show the ankle in walking—the front sections lapping across each other. This gave a very narrow effect, and wrapped the garment closely about the figure, in such a manner as to clearly reveal its lines. This costume was in low tones, relieved by sumptuous embroideries of many colors, skilfully blended, and applied, in such a manner as to seem woven with the fabric itself. An evening costume, by Paquin, also bespoke the influence of East India, in motive and coloring. The foundation lining was of a peculiar shade of East Indian red chiffon, veiled with a medium bright blue shade of the same material. The over dress was scattered with an embroidered floral pattern in heavy dull blue and mauve silk, and dark blue wooden beads. A deep band, at the hem, below the chiffon tunic, was in striped silk and cotton East India tissue and gave the appearance of an under petticoat. The stripes were in blue, orange, black, purple, green and pale blue and gleaming with metal threads. Appliqued motives of dark blue chiffon, with embroidered designs, further elaborated this underskirt. Heading the band and as a sort of border to the chiffon tunic were dark blue wooden beads. This was a two-piece dress, consisting of bodice and skirt with a girdle placed slightly above the natural waist line at its lowest point. As the girdle was wide, however, it increased the short-waisted effect. The bodice was of the surplice order, with the characteristic double crossing lines of the East Indian dress, and on the right breast, falling to one side, was a jabot of the chiffon in Indian red and dark blue. The military sash girdle and bands of the surplice front were of changeable blue and purple taffeta. The variety of colors, in this costume, was unusual, and yet so skilfully handled as to produce a delightfully harmonious effect.

As has been noted, the general lines of afternoon and evening costumes incline towards simplicity. The high waist line and rather narrow skirts prevail, in the majority of models, though there are a few which show a leaning toward the 1830, rather than the directoire modes. Fichu effects are not uncommon, with here and there a suggestion of bertha or bretelles.

Cords, tassels and fringes are widely used as decorations, the latter being especially noticeable. Naturally with fringes to the fore, draped effects again assert themselves. A three-piece costume recently exhibited illustrates this tendency perfectly. It inclined a bit toward the quaint 1860 effects, and had, as an entirely new feature, the much-talked of balloon sleeves, whose fullness at the elbow was stretched on little hoops of featherbone. The bodice had a draped fichu about the shoulders, bordered with fringe—below a small white net yoke, trimmed with tiny buttons. Lavender blue, permo crepe was the material chosen for this little gown and coat, and the fringe was in the same color. The fichu and under sleeves were of white chiffon and the fichu collar of the wrap was of white wool. The skirt of this costume was in tunic effect, wrapping the figure closely, and the edges were bordered with fringe and heavily weighted in order to produce a close, clinging effect in the draperies. The wrap was also in the draped style, with fringe about the edges—the fronts draping over like the ends of a shawl. The sleeves were half length and across the back was a little belt of shirring which held the wrap in the figure at the waist line.

Tunic effects continue in favor, embroidery bands, beading and fringes finishing the lower edges and the sleeves. Bordered patterns, printed or embroidered, offer pleasing possibilities of manipulation into charming tunic costumes. Kimono or butterfly sleeves still retain their hold upon popular fancy, although the draped sleeve and the balloon sleeve, which are newer, have come to dispute their popularity.

Very long, close fitting sleeves are a feature of many a smart costume, suggesting early Italian styles. Girdles, sashes and cordeliers are in quaint harmony with the revival of these antique modes, as are also trimmings of maribou and fur. Very soft satin and messaline and softly draping woolen fabrics are most appropriate in these clinging costumes, while voiles, marquisettes, chiffon cloths and crepes, both plain and figured, appear in tunics and overdraperies. Heavy surah silks have again made their appearance in the field of fashion after an absence of many years and will find a ready welcome.

Taffeta, too, is again modish—costumes in this material, fringe trimmed, which were one of the sensations of the late summer, being shown as demi-toilettes, for fall and winter.

Short coats and close skirts, giving the fashionable slender outlines, are still the favorites, though skirts are not so narrow as they have been during the past few seasons, having attained just the proper dimensions for grace and ease.

Two to two and one-half yards is an average measure about the hem of the smart fall tailored skirt. Plain gored effects are of course ultra modish, but there are many pretty models showing pleats let in at the side from knee to hem. Panel backs are well nigh universal, some circular skirts or skirts with circular cut backs being about the only exception.

Tunic skirts of wool show simulated underskirt effects of satin or velvet, the collar lapels, cuffs and other trimmings of the jacket matching the underskirt.

Jackets vary from twenty-six to twenty-eight, and even in some cases thirty inches in length, affording a very good range for individual selection. In addition to the usual straight cut coats there are many modish, semi-fitted jackets, better suited to the lines of the average well-developed figure. Very narrow English cut shoulders appear upon the jackets of smart tailored suits, absolutely no fullness in the top of the sleeves being allowed. A few fancy suits are cut with the kimono or butterfly sleeve, which is essentially dressy. Coats with high waist line in the back are also seen on costumes for dressy wear. The real fashion feature of fall suits and coats are the handsome wide, fancy collars, revers and broad cuffs, carried out in a variety of novel ways. These are often of contrasting color and fabric, or inlaid with velvet, braid, or contrasting cloth.

Both double and single breasted effects appear in the fall models, though the former, perhaps, best suits the purpose of fancy revers and collars. All kinds of rough, heavy materials are smart for tailored suits, bourette cloth, basket weaves and fancy mixtures being the order of the day, varied with a few mannish suitings.

Zibeline, plain and in two-toned effects, are again in style, as might be expected with the vogue for long-haired fabrics. Striped zibeline show red or white hair lines on dark grounds. Striped suitings of all kinds are very smart for fall and winter wear.

For dressy wear, velvet suits will take the place of the satin models, which achieved such a triumph during the spring and summer. Embroidery on velvet is a new idea in adornment, the designs being executed either in heavy silk or colored worsted. Browns, purples, black and white effects, grays and dark blues are all modish and appropriate for the fall tailor made. The popularity of pretty little dresses of wool or silk and of short jacket tailored suits renders at least one long coat an essential of the well balanced winter wardrobe. Never was fashion's display of outer wraps more lavish than for this season, the automobile, perhaps, having had some influence upon the vogue for long coats.

The 34-inch coat is, in fact, preferred above all others, which is at least a good, warm, comfortable whim upon the part of dame fashion. For general wear there are many splendid garments of this kind in soft, snug, reversible, blanket material, rather rough in surface effect, but extremely smart. Reversible cloths are the correct thing for these long coats, the color of the reverse side appearing in broad, fancy collars, revers and cuffs. Usually the outer side is of a plain, practical color, gray, grayish mixture, navy, black and white, brown mixture or tan, while the inner side is of gayer hue, pale blues, red, bright tan or the pretty crisp plaids of the Highland clans.

The more dressy coats of broadcloth, satin, velvet and plush have very beautiful directoire and Charlotte Corday collars cut on the deep, fashionable lines, often simulating hoods or capes, and ornamented with pendant tassels.

THE AUTUMN EVENING WRAPS IN NEW SHAPES.

New York, Sept. 25.—East Indian effects are strongest just now in the autumn evening wraps. This fad is evidenced not only in the embroideries, but in the shapes of the new garments, for few of them have clearly defined sleeves despite the fact that capes are not at all in the runnings. Doubled-faced satin is one of the favorite materials as it is so broad that only two widths are needed for the tube-like effects and the same is true of the fine smooth-surfaced cloths, carrying heavy embroideries similar to those seen on the broadcloth robe gowns, and the striped voiles mounted upon taffetas. None of the new wraps close straight from the throat to feet. They sometimes start from under the chin, but either directly above or below the waistline, the left front wanders diagonally toward the right side and fastens against the hip. This precludes the use of any save invisible hooks or of small flat buttons concealed by a handsome ornament.

Fashionable Fancies in Furs

By Louise Beaufort.

WHEN woman was created, according to an old legend, Earth and Heaven were ransacked to provide her with charms and graces. Certainly they have been exploited ever since for new articles of adornment, mineral, vegetable and animal nature being called upon to yield their dearest treasures.

Furs are among the oldest articles of clothing which have contributed to the comfort and appearance of humanity. The idea of snatching the jackets of his fur-footed brothers and enemies to shield his own tender and unprotected skin must have occurred very early to prehistoric man. Even today there is a sort of primitive appeal about rich, glossy skins, fashioned into garments of the utmost luxury and comfort.

The becomingness of furs, no less than their beauty and utility, attracts the faithless woman—for, as a setting to feminine loveliness, they have scarcely an equal. This is particularly true of natural, undyed furs, and thus it is fortunate when a season like the present favors their use.

Natural opossum, raccoon and fox are among the most fashionable of winter furs, and are moderate enough in price, for the most part. Skunk, which is another natural, durable and comparatively inexpensive fur, also holds its popularity of the last few seasons. Mole skin is also shown in combination with other furs, or made up in sets with trimmings of passementerie. The working of mole-skin and seal in patterns is one of the novelties of the present fur season. In very high priced fur, mink promises to be a leader for general wear, while the "Coronation" has given an impetus to ermine, as a fur for dressy occasions. The little tails, which are usually sewed in groups on an ermine garment, are arranged more sparingly on this season's creations, and in some cases entirely omitted. Some very broad scarfs of seal have linings of plain ermine.

Red, gray, brown and black fox are all used extensively—and tipped fox is exceedingly modish. White fox, for evening wear, always has a large number of admirers, and is used this season, as formerly, in pretty, fluffy sets or as a trimming to garments of ermine.

Fewer heads and tails are seen on furs than for some years past, and this would seem an advance in taste. Of course, there are fox sets, and sets of raccoon and fisher, in natural, animal shades, but for the most part broad pelerine and shawl collar effects, with trimmings of passamentrie, braid, fringe or tassels prevail, accompanied by plain muffs, slightly smaller than the modish ones of last season. The best shape of muff is undoubtedly the half-barrel, or pillow variety, which has much of the graceful roundness of the barrel muff, without its bulk and awkwardness.

Very large pelerines of mink, ermine and chinchilla, in effect whole wraps of the shawl or cape variety, are exhibited for those whose purses can stand such luxuries—and are among the most graceful designs of this decade.

The woman who cannot, for any reason, consider a full length fur coat, will find comfort in the many pretty short jackets of fur that are to be the smart thing this winter. These little short coats are usually about the length of the fashionable suit jacket, which is twenty-six to twenty-eight inches, and they are modeled on much the same lines. Etons of fur are also pretty and correct, taking the place of the large pereline, or fur scarf. These short coats are usually of seal or Hudson seal, broad-tail, astrachan or baby lamb with collars and cuffs, or other trimmings, of fuller, fluffier fur. The Etons are sometimes bordered all about with contrasting fur, while the jackets show a great variety of large shawl collars and revers of raccoon, fox or skunk.

Sailor collars, even, are used on fur coats, some in square, some in round, and some in pointed effects. Forty-five inch coats of fur are occasionally seen, and offer an excellent compromise between the merits of the full-length coat and the short jacket. Fichu effects in stoles of short, fine fur, are sometimes caught at the waist with a handsome buckle or ornament. There is a general revolutionary suggestion about present fur fashions, especially noticeable in fichu and cape effects, and in broad collars and deep cuffs.

Turbans of fur, to match muff and scarf, or jacket trimmings, are also in good style. A fur turban, worn with a fur coat, and matching the revers, cuffs and muff, gives a delightfully picturesque finish to a winter costume.

In selecting furs, one should bear in mind that no one fur is universally becoming. Skunk is quite generally so, and mink likewise—but the gray and black furs are not for all faces. As a rule, they are most becoming to blondes and light-complexioned people, generally, and to those with gray hair. Very youthful faces always look well above light furs. Women of olive complexion should always select a fur with a brownish cast, unless their hair is of raven blackness, when a black fur may be worn. White furs are most becoming to dark or rosy faces—the roses of old Jack Frost, however, render them wearable by many who are otherwise pale. A little study of the possibilities of fur in enhancing the beauty of the complexion, by contrast, is not only interesting, but well worth while, as it enables one to achieve superior effects.

HER OUTING.

Chicago News: "I may be away when you come home this evening," said Mrs. Jamesworthy. "Mrs. Kickshaw has invited me to take a motor trip with her. She has a new automobile, you know."

"If I were you I wouldn't chase around too much with Susan Kickshaw," replied Jamesworthy. "She isn't the sort of a woman I'd select as my wife's bosom friend."

"What's wrong with her? You just like to throw cold water on every plan I have, that's all. It breaks your heart to see your wife enjoying herself like other women. Mrs. Kickshaw is one of the most popular women in town."

"Yes, but she's a grandstand player. She's a fiend for the limelight. Nobody ever mentions her without winking the left eye a few times. If you go gallivanting around with her this afternoon there'll be a big illustrated story about it in the papers. As soon as she gets back from the trip Susan will ring up the city editors and furnish the material for three columns. I don't like that sort of notoriety. And then Susan Kickshaw wears imported rags and real glass jewelry and looks like the $10,000 beauty in a circus parade, and you'll be completely overshadowed if you sit beside her."

"Can't you think of any other ridiculous objections?"

"I have plenty of objections on file, but they're not ridiculous. While we are not abjectly poor, we can't afford any automobiles or cullipoes, and I don't think it good taste for you to cavort around town like a millionaire's wife. If you go motoring with Susan you can't invite her to a similar diversion, and so you'll feel under obligations to her."

"That idea didn't seem to occur to you when you took a 500-mile motor trip with Jagway. You jumped at the chance, and the fact that you couldn't reciprocate didn't seem to worry you any. For a week afterward you kept talking about the fine time you had and of how Jagway insisted upon paying all expenses."

"Oh, great whiskers! Of course, you'll distort everything I say and put a wrong meaning on it. Lots of thanks a husband gets nowadays for giving his wife a little friendly advice! I'm sorry to see you show such a mean, narrow spirit. Here I am, working and slaving, like a galley slave scourged to his dungeon, and if I break loose from the treadmill for a couple of days, to indulge in a little recreation with a friend, it's cast up to me as though I had committed a crime. I should think you would rejoice when I have a little opportunity for diversion, but instead of that you go grouching around making everything disagreeable."

"Well, for the sake of peace, I'll stay at home and not go with Mrs. Kickshaw, although I promised her. I don't want you to think that I am jealous of any little pleasures you may have. Nobody knows better than I do how hard you work, and you deserve any holiday you can get. I'll just put in the afternoon planning a dinner for you that will make you feel young again."

"Now you're talking like the woman I married in the days when orange blossoms were a drug in the market! When a man breaks his back in three places trying to make his home comfortable he feels fully rewarded if his wife appreciates his efforts. The true reason why I objected to your going with Susan Kickshaw is the fact that she isn't in your class. She's a popular woman, all right enough, and has her good points, and her new automobile certainly is fine, but you are honoring her by going with her. However, you won't have any riding at all if you wait for a woman in your own class to bring her motor along, so you'd better put on your best lid and go with Susan."

"There are more ways of choking a cat than with butter," murmured Mrs. Jamesworthy, irrelevantly.

PARASOL STOPS A TRAIN.

A curious incident has come to light in connection with the stopping of a London train on the Caledonian main line near Rockliffe station, a few miles north of Carlisle, says the Railroad Employe. The train was running at full speed when the engineer observed a red object by the side of the line which he regarded as a danger signal.

The train was accordingly pulled up, when it was found that the object in question was a red parasol carried by a woman who, wishing to cross the line at a level crossing, was awaiting the passing of the express.

A case as singular happened a number of years ago on the Old Colony railroad near the North Easton station, says Former Supt. J. H. French of that system. Coming from Stoughton, the Fall River line boat train approaches North Easton upon a considerable down grade, passing the station by a curve, then under a low highway bridge on to straight track again.

One dark night the train came to an emergency stop at North Easton station, and upon investigation the cause proved to be the tiny red glass of a bicycle lamp resting against the side while its owner watched the approach of the train.

The Useful Waist and Skirt

A MORE convenient costume than the shirtwaist and skirt has never yet been evolved to meet the needs of the average woman, and probably never will be. This is a perennial style, with which the practical woman could hardly afford to dispense.

With long coats so fashionable this season, the separate waist and skirt will find a yet larger field of usefulness—and designers and makers have provided some unusually chic styles in both garments. Separate skirts, of course, follow the general lines prevalent in suit skirts. They are of the same width and much the same cut—plain gored models, and models with pleats let in at the sides from the knee down. There are also a few skirts with hems slashed, to show the foot and ankle. This is, however, an extreme style, and a more popular arrangement is the simulated slash, with a contrasting piece of fabric introduced in a triangular fold beneath the slashed hem.

The raised waist line continues popular in skirts, the height varying with the taste of the wearer. Many skirts, however, are contrived in the regular way with a band at the waist, to be worn with a fancy belt, or a belt of the skirt material. This style of skirt might be expected, as a great many of the most fashionable waists are made with a peplum effect, to be worn outside of the skirt. Others again, have very wide folded satin girdles, designed to be worn outside the skirt belt. These waists are sometimes made with the outer drapery and girdle separated from the lining, which slips underneath the skirt belt, while the outer material and girdle fit over it.

Draped and veiled blouses will be as widely worn as ever this winter—nearly all of the dressiest waists being veiled in chiffon. Very handsome waists are designed for afternoon and evening wear, with separate skirts, real lace, hand embroidery and beading making the most usual form of decoration.

Sleeves are, for the most part, three-quarter lengths—and styles are well divided between the kimono or seamless shoulder and the set-in, or seamed variety. Some of the new sleeves are smooth over the shoulder, in kimono lines and—with a puffed section attached a few inches below—reminding one of the sleeves of the basques and jackets of the 1860 days.

Strictly tailored waists have often full length sleeves of the set-in variety, finished with the regulation cuff. Some very dressy lingerie blouses have also full length sleeves, with grilled turned-back cuffs, and high-boned collars. Very soft clinging effects are the rule in waists, as in costumes, and soft satins, challies, worsteds and crepes are therefore favored materials—with chiffons, marquisettes, voiles and veilings as over draperies.

A very new arrangement is the wide side-pleated jabot, attached to the middle front or right side of the fashionable lingerie waist, and pinned over to the left, crossing the entire front of the waist. This is a renewal of a pretty and popular style of a few seasons ago—carried, however, to a greater extreme, as the new side-frilled jabots are a size surpassing any former efforts along this line.

Colored chiffon and satin waists, with touches of yarn or silk embroidery, fancy beading and gold or silver trimming, will be much in evidence, though not eclipsing, in any way, the popularity of plain white, or white with touches of colored embroidery.

A silk or chiffon waist, carrying out the colors of a tailored costume, completes a very charming effect, and renders the tailored suit almost a wardrobe in itself.

Several handsome waists, a well-made and well-fitting skirt and a long coat or wrap, is another good, practical winter outfit—or at least a good beginning. The lady of the dainty fingers who delights in fine needle work, will find abundant play for her pretty fingers in making and adorning of these handsome and fashionable waists.

RAILWAY TRAVELING IN JAPAN.

Wide World Magazine: The railway journey from Kyoto to Yokohama, despite the fact that most beautiful country is traversed, is not the pleasantest of experiences. One buys a railway ticket in Japan in installments. The ordinary ticket only enables one to go by a train covering the minimum distance in the maximum time, so an "extra-express" ticket is purchased, which means that the engine moves a little more quickly towards its appointed goal. Next a platform ticket must be procured, to enable one to board the train, and finally one has literally to fight one's way into a first-class carriage. Why do all the passengers in Japan take their luggage into the already painfully small carriage instead of leaving it in the van? And why, again, does a nation that is a password for cleanliness the world over possess a train service so shockingly dirty in every detail? We once, in a weak moment, looked into a stationmaster's room at a large station and for pure dirt it could have given points to a dust-heap. In the carriages the floors are covered with dirt of ages, cigarette ends, orange peel, sandwich papers; at intervals a porter saunters in with a brush and leisurely sweeps all the refuse into a corner, having first carefully closed every window so that no atom of discomfort or infection shall be lost. Finally he departs, leaving behind him the rubbish and an atmosphere charged with germs and smarty words. Truly a Japanese porter's definition of clearing up is removing rubbish from one place to another. To change clothing in a crowded carriage is merely a pastime to a Japanese traveler, and one may happily heave a sigh of relief if nothing worse happens.

Melbourne, Australia, has a population of nearly 600,000.

SO MANY lovely creations, large and small, quaint and smart, have the milliners designed for our delight during the last two seasons that it seemed almost out of the question that even Paris could offer anything new for fall. Yet here they are with us—the new models, seeming, as ever, smarter and more bravely fine than the old. Also, alas, they are so unlike any former fashions that remodeling last year's hat for this year is altogether out of the question.

The most radical departure from all recent millinery precedent is the very high, pointed crown, narrow brim, "Pierlot" shape which is the real style note of the day. These crowns are rarely less than ten inches in height, and very often more. They are very narrow, even at the base, and taper to a rounded or flattened conical top. The brims the usually pinched in a poke across the front, or at the back, and sometimes they are poked at both sides, being plain, back and front. This high, narrow, conic or "Pierlot" shape is a very practical one, as it fits the head well. It is designed to be worn without rats, puffs or any distended, artificial coiffure arrangement.

The high, narrow hat, while predominant, will not, by any means entirely displace the picture hat of ample brim and generous curves. This type of chapeau is altogether too elegant and too becoming to a large number of women to permit of its being hastily relegated to the limbo of things past and forgotten. The ultra-smart large hat will be just as large as ever, if not so ubiquitous and will be flatter than ever, with crown barely raised above the brim, by the scantiest allowance of inches.

Some medium large hats are being fashioned with high crowns, but they will scarcely have the appeal of the flatter, wider models. The large hat is now looked upon as exclusively a dress affair, and not for the "highways and byways" of the market place. This is as it should be, and a welcome innovation to those who have suffered from its expansiveness in public conveyances, elevators and the crowded streets.

Old-fashioned poke bonnets are modish still, and this is fortunate, for they have a certain quaint prettiness, well in keeping with demure young or round faces. The woman who looks well in them usually looks amazingly well, better, in fact, than in almost any other type of headgear. Before passing by the old-fashioned poke, as too extreme, one should try it on, at least, for it may prove a revelation. These old-fashioned bonnets are sometimes edged about with fringe, a trimming in perfect harmony with their lines. They are usually made of velvet, and the sheltering brims are lined or faced with taffeta, or satin.

Velvet, by the way, is the material par excellence for the fashionable winter hat. It is used both on pressed and hand-made shapes, alone and in combination with satin, taffeta, hatter's plush and fur felt. Uncut velvet is a novelty, both for hats and trimmings' very rich in appearance, but more resembling cord silk than ordinary velvet.

All kinds of silks and velvets are employed in the fashioning of winter hats and bonnets, satins corded silks, moires, and plushes having been reinforced by the advent of taffeta, into the millinery field. The vogue of taffeta gowns, trimmed with fringes, which took Paris by storm during the late summer, has given an impetus to this fabric for winter millinery. Hats of felt and velvet are faced with taffeta, and taffeta is sometimes pressed upon the upper sides of hats with felt or velvet facings.

French crepe is new as a material for hat facings, and affords a delightfully soft and becoming background for the face. The head sizes of the new hats remain large, and though a bit closer than of late seasons, they still allow the hats to sink well over the face.

For all practical purposes this will be quite a ribbon season, as very wide, plain and fancy ribbons are used extensively as trimmings for hats of all kinds. Particularly is this true of the new, high-crowned, narrow-brimmed hats, which are very generally trimmed with ribbon. Ribbons show some very handsome new, double-faced effects, the reverse side of brighter hue appearing in a band upon the upper side of darker color. These ribbons are trimmed about the new high crowns, fold upon fold, with these bright edges at each fold, and meeting in a bias seam in front. The crown is thus entirely covered, and at the back rises a wired crest of ruffled ribbon, in plume effect, very full and fluffy, and upstanding to an even greater height than the crown of the hat. Velvet and silk are also arranged on these hats, in the same fashion as ribbon, or in short, sharp, up-standing bows, covering the crowns and simulating wings.

Wings, fancy feathers, and aigrette effects, are an almost universally popular form of trimming for hats of all descriptions. Ostrich plumes, of the French variety, or uncurled, have replaced the drooping willows. With the sale of aigrettes prohibited in this country, various substitutes are being devised that will give the same effect of feathery spray.

Very pointed wing effects prevail, and on the new conic or clown hats, they are trimmed all about the crown with points upstanding. Whole conic crowns of masses of small wings are another favorite arrangement.

Ostrich bands are often used to cover the high crown with a finish of upstanding French tips at side or back. Coque feathers are again the mode and are being wired and braced into all manner of upstanding cocade effects.

Paradise feathers, too, are again high style, and will therefore no doubt be even more expensive than formerly.

Very few flowers are used, though one sees a few velvet pansies and clusters of velvet fruits. Some huge poppies and roses are employed to form the entire crowns of high hats, the petals extending downward upon the brims. These mammoth flowers are all of a foot across, and in uncut velvet they are decidedly handsome.

Wool embroideries and wool applique, in soft, bright colors, are sometimes applied on hand-made hats. They are especially pretty on the deep brim of the quaint, old-fashioned poke bonnet.

As to colors, hats are quite generally modest, purples, prunes, browns, greys, navy and black predominating, with touches of royal blue, emerald green and coronation red, a deep cerise—in the trimmings. Many smart hats are all in dark, dull tones, all black, grey, navy and grey combined, and plain taupe. Some few hats are developed in the pretty, dull, brownish grey mole-skin itself, though these, of course, are very expensive and a novelty. All white hats, or dark hats, with trimmings of white, are both popular and becoming. With so much variety in color, shape, and trimming, it should be an easy matter for every woman to find her affinity in a hat—something which entirely suits her type, her color, and her purse.

CHANGING TASTE IN HYMNS.

Northwestern Christian Advocate: One of our churches in New York city having taken a poll of the congregation in order to determine the ten favorite hymns announces that the following received the requisite number of ballots: "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Abide With Me," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," "I Love to Tell the Story," "Lead Kindly Light," "Rescue the Perishing," "Rock of Ages," "Onward Christian Soldiers," "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Four others were tied for tenth place: "Love Divine, All Love Excelling," "Just as I Am," "Faith of Our Fathers, Living Still" and "In the Cross of Christ I Glory."

Nothing could illustrate better the change that has come over our religious thinking. In the list there is not one hymn about heaven. Ten years ago no congregation would have omitted "Jerusalem the Golden" or "There Is a Land of Pure Delight," and twenty-five years ago the list would have been given to such hymns.

Shot Taffeta in Millinery

Shot taffeta is much in request for autumn head-gear, especially for the hats with their tall Jacobean crowns. A charming model recently exhibited was made of a bronze-shot taffeta in which shades or orange and brown predominated. The silk was gathered and fringed.

The sugar-loaf shaped crowns on the newest models measure quite 18 inches, while the brim is not more than 1½ to 2 inches. One such hat had the crown covered with row upon row of purple silk fringe 1 inch wide; the brim was also purple silk lined with black satin, and its sole decoration two narrow black feathers wired with their base hidden beneath a large round fancy velvet ornament.

Hats in the softest of beavers are in demand for everyday wear. Those in purple beaver with indented crowns and black brim turned up at the side, with either three flat bows graduated in size of black-and-white striped velvet or a black wing, look exceedingly well with a blue serge gown. There are also several charming adaptations of the sailor-shaped hat, the newest having a straight brim slightly upturned and soft crown indented all around.

For the young girl the large hats of the faintest shell-pink beaver with white under brim are particularly becoming. These have but a single large blossom made of the softest French felt. The velvet hat with felt or beaver brim is a novelty, and some are adorned with quills of white or colored cloth or velvet with black satin wired edge.

BAG, HAT AND SCARF MUST MATCH NOWADAYS.

Hat, bag and scarf must match these days. That is the latest decree of fashion. Probably by the time it becomes cool enough to carry a muff the set will have that added. Just now the set may be of fur or it may be of some lighter material. For the woman who does not care to wear a scarf until later a two-piece set is substituted, of hat and bag.

Sealskin and dull gold lace form one of these three-piece sets which is very handsome and in good taste. The hat is small and has a puff crown of the fur, with a drooping border of the gold. The pouch of the bag is of seal, with the gold lace below, and the scarf is merely a neat little cravat.

Another attractive set is in tapestry. The hat is a small crush turban, with a velvet brim, and the bag is in envelope shape.

The bifurcated hat is prominent. Where the crown itself is not actually divided through the middle into two great puffs or raised high in the middle with a ridge emphasized by a cording or binding in a contrasting color, then the trimming is sure to be so arranged as to give the bifurcated effect and is very likely to be in different colors on the two halves.

A stunning model in black velvet not only has the bisected crown, but has two large and soft split ostrich plumes stretching back, one on each side, which accentuate the style. One is in deep purple and the other in white.

Ivory and black wings are arranged in a somewhat similar manner on another model more on the tailored order.

Two huge puffs of velvet, one in coronation blue and the other in black, form all the crown of one bifurcated hat. The trimming is simple, consisting of a handsome buckle and two side ornaments of passementerie.

EMERSON'S STORY OF GRATITUDE

Youth's Companion: There is a beautiful little story in Emerson's recently published "Journals," of which his son, the editor, Dr. Edward W. Emerson, said the poet was very fond.

A certain widow was so poor that she eked out the one thin bed covering by laying an old door over herself and her little children.

EAST FOURTH STREET BUSINESS DISTRICT

Popular Also With Farmers, Who Sell Their Produce and Trade Here.

Famed for Its Stylish Milliners and Live Merchants in Every Line.

BY W. F. HUTCHINS.

Four blocks up the hillside from Superior street, the main business street of Duluth, East Fourth street has an important business district which supplies the needs of thousands of people in one of the nicest residential sections of the city. In this neighborhood are the hospitals and the splendid new Washington and manual training school. The Fourth street business district centers around East Fourth street and Fifth avenue east, but reaches to Tenth avenue east and Fifth avenue west.

East Fourth street and Fifth avenue is a street car center. From this point lines run both east and west on Fourth street. Cars which traverse Fourth street are those of the Grand avenue west, Fifty-seventh avenue west, West Fourth street, Thirty-ninth avenue west and East Fourth street and Woodland lines, making the Fourth street business district easily accessible from all parts of the city and for a single fare.

Merchants in every conceivable line are to be found on Fourth street. It has splendid markets which vie with each other in supplying everything for the table at reasonable prices. Fourth street is famous with the women all over Duluth for its many milliners, some of them among the most fashionable in the city. Everything for the household is to be had on Fourth street, where rents are not high, and the merchants make very attractive prices.

Fourth street is the favorite trading place of the farmers from Hermantown, Rice Lake, Gnesen, Kenwood, Pike Lake and other farming districts tributary to Duluth. Here the grocers are ever ready to take farm produce at good prices and it is seldom the farmer has to go down the hill to Superior street to dispose of his load of fresh produce, practically all of which is quickly absorbed by the housewives of the neighborhood. Naturally, the farmers buy from the merchants who patronize them, and this adds much to the business of Fourth street. Farmers can get anything they need on Fourth street, including farm implements and harvesting machinery.

For two blocks on each side of Fifth avenue east, Fourth street is built up almost solidly with business blocks and clusters of business buildings are to be found for several blocks farther along east and west. The center of this steadily growing business district is pictured on this page. The housewife can do her marketing and shopping in person here, or she can do it by telephone and be assured of quick delivery. A high standard of fair dealing is maintained by the merchants and the people of the hillside are showing their appreciation in a fashion that is causing the Fourth street retail district to grow and spread out all the time.

BUSINESS EXTENDS TO IRON RANGES

Pierson Brothers, in East Fourth Street, Building Up a Large Trade.

In the heart of the East Fourth street retail district, at 429 East Fourth street, Pierson Brothers, fresh and salt meats, in four years have built up a large business which extends all over the Mesaba and Vermilion iron ranges. They get their eggs fresh each day direct from the farmers and they buy all their poultry alive, killing it themselves and selling only the best and freshest fowls. They are the only firm in their section handling Sealshipt oysters. Fresh meats are kept in refrigerators having glass fronts, away from the flies and dust. Their Fourth street market is one of the largest and best in the city. They have a branch at 113 Second avenue west.

For more than a year Pierson Brothers have had a man traveling over all the principal points on the two iron ranges reached by the Great Northern, Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Duluth & Iron Range railroads, selling meats, groceries and vegetables direct to consumers. They have built up a large trade on the ranges, which is growing all the time. Buying in large quantities they get the lowest prices and give patrons the benefit. They employ an experienced sausage-maker whose savory products have a large sale. John and Anton Pierson, the members of the firm, were born and raised in Duluth and had a good training in the business before they entered it on their own account.

WILLIAM FAWCETT, THE CONTRACTOR

He Builds the Sort of a Structure a Man Gets By Day's Work.

The general contractor for the making over of the big brick building at East Fourth street and Tenth avenue east, pictured herewith, is William Fawcett, 509 Manhattan building.

Mr. Fawcett has been in the building business in Duluth for eight years and has done much meritorious work. He builds the sort of a home, for instance, that a man would get by day's work. His thorough-going methods are beginning to be recognized by large property owners like the Massachusetts Real Estate Co., owners of the building shown above. For that same company Mr. Fawcett erected the block of dwellings at East Fourth street and Eight avenue east.

Recently Mr. Fawcett completed the equipment of the manual training room of the Duluth high school and five additional class rooms for the high school. He built the Brothers' home, adjoining the Cathredral at West Fourth street and Second avenue west, and has built quite a number of fine residences in Duluth.

Mr. Fawcett will bid on any structure or the making over or alteration of buildings anywhere in Northern Minnesota or Northern Wisconsin.

A. W. ANDERSON'S MODEL MEAT MARKET

His Aim Is to Treat People Right and to Satisfy All His Patrons.

East Fourth street has a model meat market in A. W. Anderson's at No. 527, between Fifth and Sixth avenues east. Mr. Anderson has been in business here for six years and has built up a large trade. He employs four people and two delivery wagons are necessary to take care of his large business, which is growing constantly. Mr. Anerson finds business growing better all the time in East Fourth street and believes that as Duluth grows with the starting of the steel plant and other industries East Fourth street, next to Superior street, will be the principal shopping thoroughfare of the city.

Extreme cleanliness is maintained in every part of the Anderson model market, the rear rooms being just as spotless as the market itself. It is a lesson in rapid service to watch Mr. Anderson serving patrons. He is an extremely quick and accurate cutter and can wait on twice as many customers as the average man. His assistants are good men, too, and no matter how busy the market is people are not kept waiting longer than a few minutes. Mr. Anderson's motto is to treat people right and to always send them away satisfied. He handles the best meats and sells on a very close margin.

Anderson's market specializes on fish and oysters and always has fresh canned goods and all kinds of pickles in stock. If one wants a delicious slice of ham, Anderson has the best. Mr. Anderson has been in Duluth twenty years and in the meat business 15 years.

PADDY McDONNELL'S PAVEMENT WEARS WELL.
A View of His Splendid Work on East Fourth Street as It Is Today.

No fault is to be found with the paving of Fourth street, east or west, by Paddy McDonnell. After two years' wear the Donnellite paving is looking fine and everybody in the neighborhood is pleased with its smooth, handsome appearance and its durability. Fourth street is paved with Donnelite on a concrete base, the Donnellite being mixed with tar. This paving is known now as Donnellite No. 2, Mr. McDonnell having made an improvement upon it. This improved material is now being laid in Grand avenue, West Duluth. Mr. McDonnell is using asphalt instead of tar and has created what everybody concedes is the ideal street pavement. The use of asphalt instead of tar adds a little to the cost but makes a pavement which resists sudden changes of temperature and adds to the life of the pavement. It is a finer mixture than No. 2, and adds to the smoothness of the street. Donnellite No. 1 is also being laid in Grand Forks and other cities and will add to Mr. McDonnell's fame as a peerless paving contractor.

DEAN OF BUSINESS MEN.

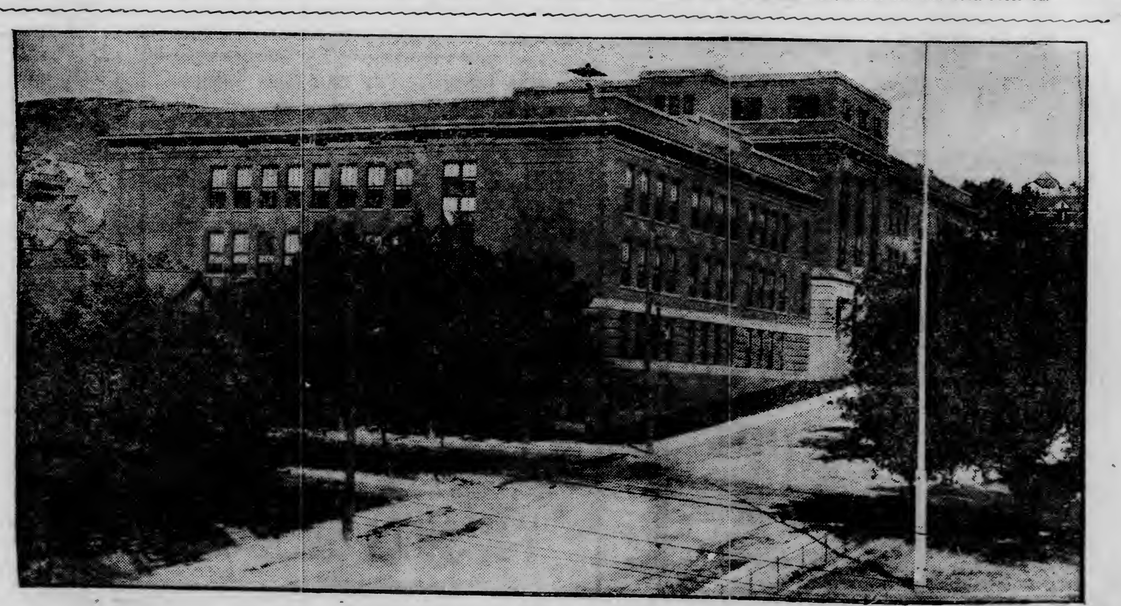
Oscar Fleer Has Been on East Fourth Street for 24 Years.

For thirty years Oscar Fleer has been in Duluth and for twenty-four years he has been engaged in buisnss at the same location in East Fourth street. He is the dean of the business men in his section and has much faith in the future of the East Fourth street business district. He has seen it grow from a struggling hamlet with a few stores to solidly built up brick blocks, surrounded by thousands of homes, many of them handsome residences.



Oscar Fleer is justly proud of his daughter, Miss Lena Fleer, who went to Huntington, Tenn., a mouth ago, to teach domestic science and art in the Industrial and Training school at that place. Miss Fleer is one of the most popular young ladies in the East End section and graduated with honors from the Thomas Normal Training school, Detroit, Mich. She has many friends here who will be pleased to know that Miss Fleer is delighted with her new surroundings and the people of the South. She has written, telling about the charming hospitality of the Tennessee folks and the kindness with which she has been received.

NEW MANDAN BLOCK AT TENTH AVENUE EAST.

This handsome brick block was built one story in height seven years ago. The growth of this fine residential neighborhood, surrounding pretty Portland square, made a brisk demand for desirable apartments, and another story was added to the building and divided into eight model apartments of five rooms each, renting at from $30 to $35 per month. All of the rooms are light and well ventilated, and finished so that very little furniture is required to make them cosy and comfortable.

Each apartment is equipped with telephone, electric and gas light, gas range and supplied with hot and cold water. Ice boxes are in every apartment and each has a separate laundry in the basement. Bath rooms are of good size and nicely equipped. The new building is at 926 to 932 East Fourth street. It is owned by the Massachusetts Real Estate company, J. L. Cromwell, agent, Phoenix building. This company owns a large amount of property on East Fourth street and is endeavoring to have East Fourth street paved next year with asphalt or granatold. The street is already paved as far east as Sixth avenue. In addition to the fine new flats in the Mandan, the Massachusetts Real Estate company has a few other desirable apartments to rent in this fine neighborhood at reasonable prices.

WASHINGTON AND MANUAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

Jacobson Brothers, Builders.

The last of the equipment has just been installed in the Washington and manual training school, which covers the entire block on Lake avenue between Third and Fourth streets, and is half a block in depth. Including equipment, this magnificent structure has cost about $350,000, and is a monument to the builders, Jacobson Brothers, one of the largest building concerns in Duluth. The same firm has just completed an addition to the State Normal school in this city costing $50,000.

Jacobson Brothers are putting the finishing touches to the fine new Dodge block, fronting 150 feet on Superior street at the corner of Fourth avenue east, which is one of the largest and handsomest business structures on East Superior street. They have just completed the Cook hotel, five stories in height and containing 60 guest rooms, on West Superior street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, and a $12,000 apartment house on Third street, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth avenues west.

Jacobson Brothers recently completed at Twenty-first avenue west and Superior street, the finest three-story brick block in the West End. It is on the corner and 50 by 140 feet in size. The ground floor is occupied by stores and the upper floors by physicians, making it the medical center of that section. Jacobson Brothers own this building. The firm erected the J. D. Ensign public school, at Twenty-third avenue west and Tenth street, costing about $50,000.

On First street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues east, Jacobson Brothers erected the Clough apartment house, the Goehring apartment house on First street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, and the fine apartment house of John Gujar, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth avenues east, on the London road. This big firm of builders has also erected a large number of the finest residences in all parts of the city.

Jacobson Brothers, whose office is 501 Columbia building, Duluth, will bid on any structure anywhere.

BIG NEW MARKET IN THE EAST END

Logan's Has Been Doubled in Size to Care for the Fast-Growing Trade.

Two large store rooms in the corner of the fine new block, pictured above, at East Fourth street and Tenth avenue east, have been thrown into one to accommodate the fast increasing grocery business of John Logan, making one of the largest and finest retail markets in the East Fourth street or East End business sections of the city. The big market faces Portland square, a city park, with lawns, trees and flowers.

In remodeling the building the partition between the stores was removed and its place taken by three steel pillars, making a splendid store 40 feet in width and 70 feet in depth, or 2,800 square feet on the main floor, with a large stock room in the basement. The entire front is of plate glass, giving plenty of room for display of vegetables and friuts.

Mr. Logan has been in business at this corner for three years, during which time his trade has doubled, and in the grocery business for twenty-two years altogether. He is installing his own bakery and will supply everything for the table except fresh meats. He will always have the freshest of vegetables and the best of fruits. Logan's enlarged market employs seven men.

The rapid growth of his business means that Mr. Logan's goods and prices appeal to the majority of people.

BYERS PHARMACY IN FINE LOCATION

A Model of Its Kind, It Caters to the High-Class East End Trade.

Byers pharmacy occupies the center store of the fine new block, pictured above, at East Fourth street and Tenth avenue east. It is practically a duplicate of the handsome Byers pharmacy at Nineteenth avenue east and Superior street, having the same elegant mahogany fixtures. As in the East end store a specialty is made of carefully compounding prescriptions. Both pharmacies are in charge of competent graduate pharmacists, fully registered. They are up-to-date in every way and cater to the high-class residential trade.

B. B. Byers established the Superior street pharmacy nearly four years ago and its popularity led to the opening of the East Fourth street store a year ago, much to the satisfaction of many particular people of the neighborhood.

Several of Mr. Byers' own preparations have a large sale and must be meritorious, since their sale is increasing constantly. These preparations include Byers' Tincture of Green Soap, which is fine for the scalp; Byers' Cold Cream, Byers' Toilet Cream, Byers' Headache Wafers, Byers' Cough Syrup and others. The reputation of Byers' pharmacies is behind all of these preparations.

THE HICKS MARKET UNUSUALLY NEAT

Sanitary in Every Way and Has the Best of Meats at Right Prices.

The western corner of the new brick block, pictured above, at East Fourth street and Tenth avenue east, is occupied by the Hicks market, one of the best in the city.

In the windows are handsome blue and white tile receptacles for fresh fish and poultry displayed on ice. Every chopping block is always clean enough to eat from. Meats are kept in a big refrigerator having a glass front and are in plain view, while constantly chilled and protected from flies and dust from the street. The city meat inspector ranks the Hicks market a model for other dealers. The market is large and throughout is scrupulously clean. It is a delight to the eyes of the housewives of the neighborhood.

T. K. Hicks, the proprietor, is a man of long experience. He has been in the meat business in Duluth for thirty years. He sells prime meats at the lowest prices consistent with the best of products. The Hicks market, 926 East Fourth street, prides itself on its quick delivery service.

SMITH'S CHOPHOUSE.

From a Small Beginning It Has Grown Fast in Five Years.

Smith's oyster and chophouse, 411 East Fourth street, draws patronage for many blocks around. It is the only restaurant in that section. People have come to appreciate its home-cooking and baking and when attending the theater they will ride back up the hill to get a tasty bite at Smith's.

W. M. Smith established the restaurant on a small scale five years ago, but now it is of considerable size, embracing a lunch counter and private rooms for parties. Smith's also sells cigars, including Duluth brands, confectionery and soft drinks. Smith's splendid coffee has had much to do in building up the business.

JOHN GONSKA'S IS CENTER OF TRADE

Large Steamship, Insurance and Real Estate Business Built Up.

John Gonska is taking a well-earned vacation in Europe, but the large business he has built up at East Fourth street and Fifth avenue east is going right along under the able guidance of his son, Walter, and Walter Grams. John Gonska has been a resident of the city for thirty years and engaged in business at his present location for fifteen years. He is one of the principal leaders in the business and civic life of the East Fourth street section and is universally liked for his readiness to do anybody a good turn.

Mr. Gonska has built up a large business in steamship tickets, insurance, real estate and mortgage loans. This business is looked after during his absence by his son and able business associate, Walter Gonska, who inherits his father's public spirit and is always working for the betterment of conditions in his section of the city.

John Gonska has a fine home at 231 Fifth avenue east which he purchased from Dr. Collins three years ago. Walter Gonska is single, and is well liked. John Gonska is president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, 79, and is a member of other fraternal organizations. Recently he sent from Europe to the Northwestern Gun club a magnificent loving cup, a picture of which was printed in The Herald at that time.

Walter Grams has been associated with Mr. Gonska for thirteen years and during the last two years has been proprietor of the former Gonska saloon, East Fourth street and Fifth avenue east. This is the center of the East Fourth street business and residence section and the popular meeting place of the men of the neighborhood. The saloon is conducted according to the best German traditions. The best of domestic and imported goods are kept and special attention is paid to family trade, goods being delivered throughout the hill section.

Like Mr. Gonska, Mr. Grams is a great "booster" for Duluth. His motto is "boast for home industries." Mr. Grams has opened a hall, which is the meeting place of various societies and labor organizations. He has been in Duluth twenty-three years and takes an active interest in civic affairs. Mr. Grams is a member of the Northwestern Gun club and his principal diversions are hunting and fishing. He is a worthy successor in the liquor business to Mr. Gonska and conducts one of the most respectble and popular saloons in the city.

city. A noted hunter and fisherman himself, Mr. Wold's place is headquarters for sportsmen who like cosy quarters and the best of wines, liquors and cigars.

Mr. Wold is the sole owner of Northwestern Gun Club rye whisky, which is becoming a favorite with discerning drinkers because of its age, purity and general excellence. This fine whisky is sold only in bottles. Saloonkeepers throughout this section who cater to good trade all keep in stock Northwestern Gun Club rye whisky.

BIG GROCERY BUSINESS.

Robert Lueck's Store Is Always a Busy Place.

For eighteen years Robert Lueck has been in the grocery business on East Fourth street within two blocks of Fifth avenue and during that time he has built up the largest business in his line for blocks around. Everybody is always busy at Lueck's and often customers have to wait their turn, but they continue to come and bring their friends, which is the best advertisement that the store could have for its reasonable prices and fair treatment.

Mr. Lueck removed to a larger store at No. 525 East Fourth street last spring. Four and sometimes five people are kept busy caring for his large trade and it takes a double team to make his deliveries.

Magazines Delivered to Homes.

J. Laden, the enterprising proprietor of the Zenith newstand, 421 East Fourth street, will deliver all magazines as soon as published to homes in his section upon order without extra charge. Mr. Laden carries a good stock of cigars, tobacco, stationery and souvenir postcards. Order by Zenith 'phone 2270-Y.

Bric-a-Brac and Art Lamps

By EVELYN MARIE STUART

(Copyrighted, 1911, by I. J. Robinson.)

IN EVERY home the need of things purely esthetic is felt, and the ideals of what is esthetic expressed in various ways. Wreaths of hair, wax and feather flowers, or embroidered mottoes satisfied these cravings in many homes of a generation or two ago, and always the handicraft of the home worker has, to some degree, supplied this need.

In this day of broader culture and truer taste we are indeed fortunate in having at our command so many sources of artistic delight from which to draw. Pretty pieces of pottery, well designed, new embroideries, graceful baskets and art lamps offer innumerable charming suggestions for brightening the odd nooks and corners of the home.

Pottery, indeed, even the most inexpensive, may be highly artistic and possessed of a great decorative value. The cultivation of a taste along this line will enable one to select things good in contour and color, even though low in price. Some rather heavy Japanese pieces of dull, grayish stoneware, with a merely indicated decoration of green branches and white flowers, were recently offered at prices ranging from 15 to 35 cents in a certain store, and yet they were decidedly harmonious and tasteful, satisfying even the most artistic eye.

Japanese and Chinese blue, in historic patterns on vases and jardinieres, can often be procured at a very low figure, and yet the decoration is exactly the same as that upon some rare piece of old Hawthorne in an art museum or palace, for which a sum of from $5,000 to $10,000 has been expended, the great age of the latter piece, rather than its superior beauty, accounting for the price.

Among American potteries there are many lovely pieces in dull, pale, opaque glazed effects which, though higher in price than Oriental wares, are yet far from being unattainable treasures.

Brown baskets have recently sprung into favor for decorative uses. As centerpieces upon tables, receptacles for bright colored fruit, or for ferns, these rich, brown-toned wicker works of woven willow or split bamboo are simply irresistible. Very handsome baskets may be procured at from $1 to $5; filled with moss and preserved ferns they afford very artistic ideas in table decoration. Artificial flowers are also used to good advantage in these baskets, as are autumn leaves, dried flowers, cat-tails and prettily colored grasses. Artificial flowers are now recognized as quite correct for home adornment, and, indeed, some of them are so well done as easily to pass for the real. Preserved maiden hair fern is likewise so natural in appearance that one can scarcely tell it from the fresh growing plant. It has proven a boon to the woman who never has any luck with flowers and must constantly send her fernery to the florist to be refilled.

Wicker and basket lamps are among the new things also, and shades of bamboo or wicker, silk-lined, with bases of pottery or bronze. Some very pretty effects in willow lamps for summer homes are obtained by lining the open-work shades with bright flowered cretonne. A lamp and shade of this kind, in willow painted green, had a shade lining of very rich red rose and dark green leaved cretonne, through which the light wrought beautiful effects.

Another idea is the matching of pattern upon the silk or cretonne shade and pottery or porcelain lamp base. In the decorators' window some very pretty effects are displayed in Chinese vases which have been fitted with electric light fixtures, and shades of Chinese cretonne, or silk, matching the pattern of the vase.

Lamps have grown to be objects of art almost within the last two decades, with the rather general adoption of electric light. We have come suddenly from a time when a really beautiful lamp was a rarity to a day of bewildering variety and beauty in illuminaries. Side lighting fixtures and table lamps are given preference today over the central overhead fixtures, so long regarded as essential and inevitable. This is as it should be, for a light more nearly on a level with the face is vastly more becoming than overhead illumination, which throws grotesque dark shadows upon the face. Side fixtures are likewise more artistic and more readily adaptable as motives in the general scheme of decoration.

Lamps and lighting fixtures are very carefully designed to blend harmoniously with interiors of every type and period. Next to color, light is all important in home decoration, and the choice and placing of lights should therefore be most carefully considered.

CHINESE EMBROIDERY ON NEW HANDBAGS.

Chinese and Japanese embroidery in all the rich blues and reds and yellows of the Orient, with long-legged birds and dragons and other queer beasties among the motifs, is quite the newest ornamentation for the handbags. The bags to show off this work properly of course, have to be extremely large and they are solidly embroidered. The shapes are square or oblong.

Velvet bags are strung with deep fringe in silk or chenile. An odd fancy is a fringing of narrow ribbon.

Novel purses and cardcases are covered with gold mesh and bound around the edges with plain gold.

All the colorings of the most gorgeous Oriental rugs are seen in the new trimmings. The foundation is usually net and on this is worked the most elaborate embroidery in beads, in silk, in chenile and in tinsel. Trimming bands are sometimes as much as a foot in width and bodice ornaments of gay passementerie reach from shoulder to shoulder and almost from neck to waist. There is deep edging to match the banding in some of the very rich embroideries. The prices for these wide and heavily worked trimmings are more than the price of fabrics in many instances; $25 or $26 a yard is not considered extreme, and even the edging will bring $20.

In a New York hat store there hangs a picture of Dom Pedro of Brazil receiving a delegation of citizens of Philadelphia on the day when he took part in the closing ceremonies of the centennial exposition. Nearly all the men in the group wore high top hats.

DULUTH STORES OFFER BEWILDERING DISPLAY OF FALL STYLES FOR THE WOMEN OF THE CITY

The Duluth shops this fall are veritable palaces of fine garments and the shopper is kept continually in a whirl of excitement in going from one exquisite assortment to another. Never have the styles been more attractive and never have Duluth merchants made such a showing. The merchants themselves by the displays made, have solved the problem of the people who go to other cities for their clothes.

The coats this season are lovely. The loose warm coats should find a place in every woman's wardrobe and she ought to be able to be pleased for the styles are becoming and so varied that almost any taste can be suited.

For street wear the polo coats are the newest thing. Many of them come in double-faced heavy goods. They are exceedingly pretty in the white combined with the lighter shades for afternoon or evening wear and the reversable coats in two tones are also very popular.

Made of the soft imported materials in mannish style with the trimming on the coat formed from the same color or material as the lining are very practical. Many are belted and many hang loose although they are all rather narrow through the skirt, giving straight rather than flaring lines. They have the regular coat sleeves and many are made in the raglan style with the sleeves cut in one piece with the body of the coat. The plaid back goods is much used in these coats and a new feature in this line are the chinchilla coats for women, which come in tans and in pure white. Camel's hair imported diagonals, are also good in these coats.

For the more dressy wear, velvets, velours and plush are as good and as popular as last season, many handsome models being shown in these materials trimmed with deep silk fringes, wide silk braids or deep lace or embroidered net collars. Deep cuffs and revers of contrasting materials are exceedingly good and coronation purple is perhaps the most used color for this purpose. Black broadcloths are always in place for dress wear and some handsome models are displayed in this goods.

Suits.

The suits this season are changed in few respects from the summer suits although they are slightly longer. The ultra fashionable suits reach in length to the finger tips, but most of the suit coats are shorter.

Velvets and corduroys are very good in dress suits and many have the high waist line with the peasatn sleeves reaching to the elbow but most of them have the regulation coat sleeve, set in with normal waist lines. They are made in diagonal serges, and fancy suitings such as ratine, vicuna, zibeline, etc. The cut-a-way style is coming in and the peplum effect is also introduced in many of the fancy suits. The Norfolk cut is also shown. Braiding is very good in trimming for the suits and contrasting bandings are also good.

In colors, browns are the choice with the ever good navy blues a close second. Black and white suitings are also holding their own and mixed goods are much in favor.

Street Gowns.

The one-piece gowns have taken such a firm hold on the women of today that they have become a staple article in the well-dressed woman's wardrobe. Velvets and corduroys are favorite materials this season and serges, fine mixtures, and henriettas in plain tailored lines are being made up in attractive models.

The sash effects and the draped skirts are among the new fashion notes which appear in the gowns this season and oriental embroideries, large lace collars and high waisted effects are also the new style features.

One pretty gown in which appeared a number of new features was of Coronation purple crepe de chene. It was made with a high belt line finished with a little frill of the goods and the waist was trimmed with velvet and an oriental embroidered front. A large collar of black net embroidered in cream hung nearly to the waist line in back and came down in front with the fichu effect. The skirt was trimmed with a wide band of shirred and puffed goods running down the front and around the hem. This shirred puffing is also very good.

In the evening gowns, the lighter more delicate shades are used this season and the two-tone iridescent effects used so much this summer have given place to the gowns of all one shade. Chiffons, crepe de chenes, soft silks, marquisettes and tissues are the best materials to be used for evening gowns with fringes, shirrings and dainty little individual touches as trimmings. The high waisted effect appears frequently in the evening gowns but the changes in style in this line is never as radical as in other garments.

Millinery.

In the millinery departments in street hats the effects are all high with small brims the rule. In contrast to those some new Tam O'shanter effects are produced in stiff wired hats of velvet, made on the lines of the rakish Scotch caps, only the hats usually have a small brim which sets out from the face and the "tam" tops are wired up.

Velvet, velour, clipped beaver, soft fuzzy beaver and satins are used for the hats in modest soft colors with trimmings in more brilliant hues. Worsted trimmings are among the new touches of style in the hats of this season, oriental colors being worked on the hats or woven or braided into bands. Chenele is also much used on the hats as well as gold and silver trimmings.

Fur touches on the hats are very good for winter and wings and ostrich puffs, plumes and bands are also used.

Maribou Sets.

The maribou sets are extremely becoming to all the ages of women and girls and exquisite sets are displayed in the shops. This fuzzy fur will be used for trimming a great deal again this year.

Corsets.

The new models in the corsets are much lower than they have been for some time. Many new models are shown with the girdle top and extremely low back. The skirts of the corsets, however, are longer than ever and the new feature is the apron front which reaches nearly to the top of the stocking and which is fitted with four pair of hose supporters. A larger waist with straight hip effect is given by the new models.

Some beautiful models are shown in satin brocades and dotted materials and the trimming is of satin bands or flat embroidery.

A fine corset featured in one of the shops is made of a rubber webbing supported with only a few stays which holds the figure down but which gives the natural appearance. It is much used for athletic sports. This same model comes in a silk webbing called the Grecian treco cloth and the shops report a large sale of these models.

SPECIAL TRAINS COMING.

Railway Age Gazette: Trains de luxe, special and not special, are now literally too numerous to mention. The Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Oklahoma City left for Rochester, N. Y., in "the finest train ever sent out from Oklahoma City," steel sleeping cars, dining car, etc., all electric lighted and with a conductor and brakeman who were members of the Shrine. Including their wives and a band of music, the company numbered 100. The train of steel cars, which is to be furnished by the St. Louis & San Francisco and the New York Central for Texas members of the National Ad Men's convention, to be held in Boston the last of July, will be the "most modern ever operated in the Southwest." To turn for a moment from outer to inner delights, the latest novelty in the transportation of merchandise is the "Raspberry Special" of the American Express company, running from New Albany, Ind., to Chicago.

How to Dress the Table

THE custom of bringing to table tureens of soup and platters of meat seems to be falling into disuse in this day and age. At many home tables nowadays the service is quite similar, in this respect, to that of a public eating place, and while this may be most convenient and graceful for the formal dinner, there is something infinitely more homelike about service at the hand of the host, himself, from capacious tureen or well-filled platter. This custom, happily, is not entirely obsolete, it being adhered to by some of the best families.

Among the more pleasing innovations in table dressing is the fashion of presenting each course in a service of different design and coloring. This allows for a series of artistic studies in pretty china, tastefully arranged, and is a relief from the monotony of the large dinner set in one design throughout. It may also prove a great convenience to the woman who finds it impossible to match the pattern of her china and keep a full set, in perfect condition, by replacing breakages with new pieces. It offers an oportunity to utilize odd single course services, which may have come into the housewife's possession as gifts.

Good taste suggests a certain range of color for the different services, though, of course, there is much latitude her for individual predilection. As a rule, white and gold is the best choice for the service plate, as it harmonizes with plates in almost any other color which may be placed upon it. Oyster plates, with a green decoration, are perhaps preferable to all others, as this color is in harmony with the tones of the bivalve and suggests the sea. Gold bands, or traceries, may relieve the plain green and white combination. Soups, which, to be correct, should be in the new, small size, are also well chosen in white and gold, with permissable touches of red or green. The small soup plate not only possesses the advantage of being much daintier in suggestion than the old nine-inch variety, but also allows a better appreciation of the decorated rim of the service plate. Fish plates may be in the natural decoration of live fish, with sparkling waves and aquatic plants, or in simple conventionalized designs, in green and white, or white and gold. The service for game or entree may exhibit a decided red in the border, with strong touches of gold and black. For the body of the meal, simple white and gold usually prevails, though very rich designs in which cobalt or turquoise blue or various shades of rose are blended with intricate gold traceries are also in favor. Pale yellow and soft green are the preferred colors for the salad service, though designs in dull Japanese reds and greens are also appropriate.

Desert plates and demi-tasse cups, in the same design, are often used, which is perfectly proper since they may appear on the table simultaneously. Very dainty patterns are most desirable for dessert services—little rose garlands, scattered small flowers with gold lines or bands, or raised jeweled work, in delicate effects, being always a safe selection. Demitasse cups, in very rich Oriental designs and strong coloring, are also in use, following the dessert course.

In breakfast and luncheon ware, a very different variety of patterns may be chosen. Old English pheasant dsigns, old blue ware and other quaint effects in decided colors may well grace the breakfast or luncheon table.

Afternoon tea service may be either of a quaint type with decorations of strong character or in very dainty, simple designs, the former being most appropriate in the country or in summer, upon the veranda or lawn.

Being no longer limited to a single dinner service of one pattern, the woman with a love for pretty bits of tableware—and what woman is not so blessed?—may gratify her whims quite variously in special course or special occasion services.

Among the newest things in china are the conventionalized designs in soft grays, greens or dull blues upon the simpler and less expensive German pieces. This is a working out of the new art of Germany as applied to household decoration and a most effective demonstration of the charms, superiority and beauty of the pure design.

New Effects in Wall Finishes

(Copyrighted, 1911, by I. J. Robinson.)

COLORS in all fabrics have of late years shown a marked tendency toward improvement—soft mezzo tints having found, it seems, a permanent place in popular fancy. Wall papers nowadays are real dreams of art, designed by true artists, with the proper feeling for tone and right ideas of decoration.

Every period, clime and decorative school is ransacked for worthy inspirations and examples, while much that is distinctly new and original is also offered.

The use of paper and draperies which match, or at least are designed for use together, is a noticeable feature of present day modes in wall treatment. Paneling is another of the distinct characteristics of fashionable wall decorations, very narrow borders being used to outline these panels.

Another dainty arrangement, especially in bedrooms, is the use of narrow borders about the doors, windows, above the baseboard and below the moulding. Pale pink, blue and cream toned papers receive an added touch of delicacy from these narrow, flowered borders, which are often repeated in the pattern of the cretonne draperies, or in cretonne borders, applied to curtains in the plain shades of rose, blue or cream to match the walls, or in plain white to match the ceiling. A dainty idea, where cretonne is not desirable, consists in applying a colored cretonne border to curtains of white net or lace, in this way securing the contrasting touch so desirable in all interior decorations, while doing away with the light obscuring over curtains. The narrow wall paper borders and cretonne borders applied to net are generally cut out around the edge of the pattern.

Where a scheme of period decoration is attempted, the wall papers and draperies are all important factors in carrying it to completion.

When a number of pictures are to be hung in a room, a plain and unobtrusive wall paper shopd be selected and fancy effects in applying it tabooed. Pictures hung upon a paneled wall must be very carefully arranged, with due regard to the paneling.

Plain or striped papers are sometimes carried to the ceiling, with a tiny border at the top, and another two or three feet below marking the top of the panels. These borders are usually of the wreath or garland design, cut out along the lower edge, with the background of plain cream or the tone of the side wall paper along the upper edge.

In broad borders, panel and freize effects prevail. Formal landscapes often appear in these broad borders, or groups of classic figures, repeated at wide intervals. Dutch landscape borders, in deft blue, with quaint figures of Dutch peasant girls and boys, are very pretty for dining room use, with a dull blue side wall. Sometimes, in dining rooms, two borders are used—one above the plate rail and the other just above the moulding, the top border being different from, though in harmony with the lower. Panels of the side wall paper sometimes appear in a broad border.

Absolutely plain walls, with drop ceilings, in lighter shades, are always in unassailable good taste, and a safe choice in a small room, or one well filled with furniture, bric-a-brac or pictures.

SMART STYLES FOR THE SMALL PERSON

By Rene Mansfield.
(Copyrighted, 1911, by I. J. Robinson.)

I WOULD rather wear an inexpensive piece of jewelry," said a well dressed woman the other day, "that was in perfect keeping with my costume, than a more elegant one that did not harmonize with the color scheme and general lines of the gown. It is a simple matter to ruin a good effect by an awkwardly placed coral brooch, for instance, on a rose pink gown, or by a locket suspended at just the wrong distance from the throat."

It is doubtless this increasing fastidiousness in the details of correct costuming that has brought out so many artistic designs in medium priced jewelry. It is usually possible to find exactly the sort of brooch or chain or bracelet that seems to give that necessary last touch to the new gown.

There are the pin sets, for the dressier gowns, that come in every conceivable combination of metals and gems—platinum set with amethysts, or coral, or rhinestone, or inlaid with enamel, and gun metal and gold treated in the same way, although platinum just at present is in the lead for mountings of all kinds.

The prevalence of the collarless waist, which is likely to endure through the winter, and according to some enthusiasts till the crack o' doom, has created a greater demand for beads, chains, necklaces, La Valleres and jeweled velvet bands. Gold beads alternating with beads of onyx, coral, jade, amethyst or any suitable stone are being much worn. Onyx is especially favored this season. A stunning necklace seen in one of the shops was a string of the brilliant onyx and tiny seed pearls, with four pear-shaped pendants of the onyx in the front. Sotair chains appear to have superceded all others for the locket or watch. These are the chains that have a separate piece, about three inches in length, depending from the juncture to which the locket is usually attached. The locket or watch which is often worn in this way, when fastened to the end of this chain thus lies much lower than formerly. Very attractive are the enamel lockets suspended from their slender gold chains, having the enamel also introduced into the chain in small discs.

Nothing could be more fragile and dainty than the Italian filigree silver now so much in evidence. The bracelets and necklaces, simulating tiny gold centered daisies are particularly pretty, although some may prefer those consisting of small squares of the lacy metal that form a solid chain for wrist or neck.

Something new in hair ornaments are the combs and barrettes fashioned from what is called ivoris. It is a sort of ivory-toned celluloid quite elaborately carved, with a line of black following the carving. They are especially designed for wear with the modish black and white costumes, but in gray or white hair they have a very rich effect, appearing much more expensive than they are, since a good sized barrette may be bought for $1.00. Rhinestone hair ornaments mounted on aluminum are also to the fore—or rather decidedly to the back, for the barrette is the principal ornament and need of the present coiffures. The wide velvet bands with jeweled slides will be worn by the younger women this winter. Another pretty ornament for evening wear especially adaptable to the coiled hair dressing is the beaded or filigree band finished at either end with a large flat filigree wheel that comes just back of the ears.

Silk Suits for Early Fall

Just between the linen suit for summer and the cloth suit for winter stands a happy medium for womankind in the form of the silk suit for early fall. Over in Paris it has been the accepted style for the summer and still holds its own. America has gone along the linen way, but is now ready to adopt a fashion that has stood the test of a season. When you consider how cheap are the lovely silks in this country; how satisfactorily silk fills the demand of the dressy occasion; how easily cut and fitted a costume can be in this day of pattern excellence, it is not surprising that silk suits are gaining in favor with us.

Three new touches are shown in an imported model of dark-green silk that is chic and becoming to a slender figure. Deep revers, eyelet embroidery in soft ecru and the high waist line are the features. Remember them. The coat has sleeves that are seven-eights length, ending in deep cuffs. The upper jacket is gathered into the deep fitted peplum, which is buttoned under emerald buttons. The skirt has a tunic that is slashed in front. A deep collar trims the back and the eyelet embroidery gives a freshness at just the right places.

Pongee, with all the possibilities of wearing and washing, is always practical. Natural-colored pongee holds its own. In a bolero model it is brightened with wool embroidery in blues and tans. The jacket buttons under the arms and an effect of a dress is thus obtained. Plastrons of embroidery decorate the half-length sleeves and the collarless top.

Practical and inexpensive foulard is shown in a fitted model. Foulard-covered buttons fasten the coat, that has a pointed lower edge. A wide shawl collar is trimmed with an extra one of filet edged with dark silk. There are turned-back cuffs on the sleeves and just a hint of filet subcuffs. A double skirt—a new note, by the way—is shown.

Once again we have changeable taffeta. It is soft and satiny in finish and needs little trimming. A blue-and-gold model is trimmed with a shawl collar and revers and wide cuffs. Silk-covered buttons weight down the collar, and a row of them trims the bands that finish the bottom of the skirt.

You must not forget striped silk, if you prefer it—and can wear it. A particularly neat model is shown in black and white, with a short collar and revers of black and three pearl buttons on the single-breasted fastening. The sleeves are three-quarter length and the skirt is perfectly plain.

Coarse blue rajah is the material for another suit. It is trimmed with deep revers and cuffs of blue-and-white striped silk, with tabs of velvet to suggest fall. The coat sleeves are full-length and trimmed with stripes and buttons. A circular skirt is fastened in front with cord frogs, as is the coat also.

In this day, when we are "silk poor," why not take advantage of marvelously low prices and feel well dressed in the afternoon hours in a stunning silk suit of a conservative color and cut? Let this collection guide you.

Feminine Fancies in Fall Vanities

IN THESE days when fashion seems to cater almost exclusively to the tall and willowy, the woman of the height referred to as "coming just up to his heart" has one advantage that her big sisters are denied, and that is the misses' department, where, from coats to evening gowns, she may often find exactly what is suited to her needs.

"I buy almost all my gowns and coats there," said a youthful looking woman of something under five feet, "and sometimes my suits. I find that in the misses' garments all the prevailing modes are modified into simpler effects, so that one may feel in style without being extreme, which is not always possible if one has to depend on the regular offerings of women's apparel."

In a word, the styles for the growing daughter follow very closely those favored by her modish mother this fall, with the slight modifications just mentioned. Skirts moderately narrow, jackets medium length, coats cut on straight, long lines, a prevalence of sailor collar and wide rever effects—there you have the characteristics of the young girl's winter outfit.

Her party frocks are simple and dainty with a preference for floral effects, carried out in bordered chiffon or tiny artificial flowers. One attractive little gown in pale blue messaline showed a happy use of the bordered chiffon scarf. Four of these scarfs which were not very wide, were used to form a sort of paneled tunic, being allowed to hang loose in the front and back and on either side, caught in at the waist by a blue silk cord. The border was a vague clouded effect in pale brown roses on a blue ground, with a shimmery satin stripe running through it.

For the tiny tots there is a surfeit of practical, pretty garments. The new fall and winter coats show almost invariably adaptations of the sailor or shawl collar, with very wide revers. Many models are so fashioned, however, that they may be fastened up snugly about the little throats. Rough materials will predominate—cheviots, Scotch mixtures and particularly double-faced cloths. These latter are very smart when the garment is made up with the reverse side, either in a plain color or plaid, used for trimming. The trimmings this season are very simple, consisting usually of self-color braids, or big buttons. Of course, velvets and plushes and broadcloth will be used for the dressier coats, with trimmings of fur, or having elaborate lace collars.

In wash dresses, although a few mimic the extremely narrow lines of grown-up fashions, most of them are boxplaited all around, at the side, or in clusters. A boon for the woman who makes the kiddies' play dresses herself are the dress patterns in ginghams and other material which may now be obtained put up in packages which contain the required amount of trimming, even to the buttons, and full directions for making up the goods that is already cut out.

Hats and bonnets are demure little affairs this season, framing the face bewitchingly. For ordinary wear the close-fitting beaver or felt, with simple bow trimming, is most practicable. With the plush or caracul coats bonnets or hats fashioned of the same material are attractive. Velvet hoods, with odd little turned-up points over the ears, are trimmed with soft bows of light ribbon matching the bonnet lining. Delicate chiffon-lined and draped bonnets trimmed with tiny flowers or feathers are among the dressier models.

FLUFFY FEATHERS IN SHADES OF ONE COLOR.

New York Sun: There are masses of shaded fluffy feathers on some of the prettiest hats, ostrich plumes, vulture plumes, any and all of the nondescript, fancy plumage evolved by the manufactures of millinery trimmings. These often cover the entire crown and rise high at the side or back and a popular trimming on a narrow brim shape with moderately high crown is that pictured in the sketch, a mass of soft plumes covering the crown and rising above it and at tuft of similar plumes rising to the highest point of the trimming scheme at the back and curving backward in a soft shower. An uncommonly distinguished hat of this type was in white bengaline faced with a deep mulberry velvet and covered with soft plumes shading from deepest mulberry up through all the fruity red tones to berry pinks softened by a grayish bloom.

New Notes in Lingerie and Negligees

MISTS of sheer, snowy fabric webs of fine, dainty lace, shot through with delicate rainbows of ribbon—that's the way the lingerie counters look these days. In one of the recent novels a deserted wife is led to wonder if wearing dingy Mother Hubbards and rick-rack on her underwear may have not been partly responsible for her husband's delinquency. Surely with the attractive embroidery and lace-trimmed lingerie, and the graceful, warm-hued negligees that it is now possible to obtain at very moderate prices every woman should be able to keep herself freshly dainty at all times.

Combination garments, in an infinite variety of new designs, continue to fulfill most satisfactorily the demands of the present styles for the minimum of bulk in undermuslins. In the higher priced sets for both corset cover and drawers are flimy with rows and rows of lace and exquisite hand embroidery. Simpler, but quite as effective, are those in which the very wide embroidery forms the entire corset cover and the scant drawer ruffle, which are joined with a narrow hip yoke. White crepe is also being used for these combinations, simply finished with a narrow edge of torchon lace. These are especially practicable for the woman who travels, as they can be washed very easily and worn without ironing. Instead of lace beading some of the new models in lawn have a fine puffing of batiste about the neck and armholes and for trimming on the drawers through which the ribbon is to run.

The popularity of the sailor collar for dinner gowns and street gowns and every sort of gown is noticeable in slight gowns as well. Medium size collars and cuffs and tiny ties in pale blue or pink batiste, lace trimmed or with a hemstitched edge, are among the bewitchingly novel trimming of some of the less expensive gowns.

Yoke effects are much used, the peasant sleeve making very simple lines possible. All-over embroidery, sometimes having tiny tucks at the shoulders, sometimes insets of Val lace, is particularly favored. A pretty empire gown with the yoke formed of rows of insertion put on in lengthwise fashion had, instead of beading, inch slits left where the insertion was joined through which the wide ribbon was laced.

Almost every woman has discarded the heavy wool or cotton union suit along with rick-rack and Mother Hubbards, so that now her winter flannels differ very little from her summer gauzes. When a male being warns hers of speedy dissolution as a result of going about in zero weather half clad, she hurls pneumonia statistics at him, proving that twice as many men as women succumb to it, and then blithely goes about buying mere nothings in the way of Italian silk lisle union suits with which to defy Jack Frost. Fine-ribbed cotton or lisle garments, cut low necked and short sleeved, with the drawers reaching just below the knee are among the most popular styles of under garments for winter wear. These are usually formed all in one piece, and come as low as $1.00 apiece. In the Italian silk it is possible to obtain the plain sets, knee length, for $3.75.

The petticoats with the silk jersey tops and messaline flounces promise to be very well liked for wear with the tailored suits this fall. One economical little woman made several detachable flounces of different colors that she fastened to the jersey top by means of patent buttons, thus securing a petticoat to match her house and street gowns at very little cost.

Many of the silk petticoats have no bottom flounce at all, but are simply trimmed with bands. A smart black and white check one was noticed with a straight band of black silk around the bottom that was brought up in points at each seam. It was piped with scarlet satin and had tiny buttons of the same on the points.

Another striking model of which the body part was of black and white check silk had a band fully twenty inches wide of brilliant green satin that formed the bottom of the skirt. This had the appearance of being slashed almost to the knee at each seam, but a scant pleating was inserted that gave a little additional fullness to the skirt. A wide binding of the check silk finished the bottom of the skirt and was carried around the slashes.

Empire Lines in Negligees.

No style is quite so well adapted to the lounging robe or negligee as the Empire mode. A majority of these fascinating garments have the Empire waist, although often in combination with the sailor collar or fichu arrangement. The soft silks, china or messaline, crepes and challies are the preferred materials. Accordion pleating is used a great deal for the skirts, and nearly all the models show the kimono or peasant sleeve.

One charming robe of pale blue satin, cut on straight coat lines, was fastened at the side with a single huge embroidered button. The big revers turning back low from the throat were embroidered with blue silk poppies into which had been worked a thread of cerise.

A simple but effective lounging robe of pink veiling was lined with china silk and had a large sailor collar and generous cuffs of black satin. Covering the line of shirring just below the bust was a black silk cord that tied in the front and was finished with heavy tassels.

In the more elaborate negligees the bordered silks are happily employed, as well as the delicate flower-printed chiffons over satin or silk. An adorable confection of white silk voile had a fichu arrangement of white chiffon that was bordered with moss roses in the most delicate shades of pink and soft green. The points of the fichu reached almost to the hem in the front and were weighted with tassels. A girdle of green velvet with a soft bow at the side, drew in the fichu several inches above the waist line.

New Corsets Show Modifications.

A little shorter in the skirt, a little lower in the bust, a little more curve to the back, a greater pliability of boning—there you have the main changes noticeable in the fall corsets. To be sure, the lady of ample avoirdupois will have no difficulty in finding models so long that she may not sit down with impunity, and the lithe lady may lace herself into extra long corsets that make her look lither, but moderation in cut is the characteristic of the moderate priced corset for the woman with moderate taste.

Although many styles show a lowering of the entire top of the corset, not a few remain high in the back to remove any possibility of the ugly roll of flesh that is likely to be in evidence if the corset is too low in the back. The fronts, however, are curved to follow the line of the bust, and are cut considerably lower than the summer models.

The increasing demand of the fashionable woman for corsets that allow her perfect freedom of movement and give her the appearance of being quite uncorseted, has resulted in revived interest in the girdle. These are now made with comparatively long, unboned skirts, and extend only two and a half inches above the waist line. They are particularly well adapted for wear with the brassieres that are gaining constantly in favor.

FORETELL WINTER FASHIONS

Costumes of Paris Fashionables Show What Will Be Worn This Winter—Dashing Empire Silk Coat Holds Its Own.

ALL SUMMER long the styles that will rule America in the autumn are in the making in Paris. New ideas are launched by the couturiers in the spring and little by little these ideas are winnowed, the wheat from the chaff, leaving the dominant style features that have "caught" feminine fancy and that will remain to make the fashions for the entire civilized world for six months at least.

There are so many places in Paris to wear charming clothes; and everybody is so exquisitely dressed that there is an incentive to look one's very spic and span best all the time. The Parisian woman manages to look chic every minute—even after a day's shopping she is calm, serene and not a bit untidy or disheveled. Part of the secret of this may be due to the fact that she is never without her little vanity kit of pet cosmetics, which are skillfully applied at intervals during the day when a stop is made for refreshment. The Parisienne, like the English woman, believes in refreshments and rest, and many moments are spent pleasantly in tearooms, where eyes may be rested, nerves calmed and quieted and bodies relaxed while a cup of tea or some other exhilarating "pick-me-up" is sipped—moments which the American shopper would never think of snatching from the mad pursuit of bargain hunting.

On the Bois and at the charming out-of-door restaurants—Doyon's on the Champs Elysee, the Pre Catalin out in the Bois, the smart Ritz, where the tea tables are set under cool green and white striped awning umbrellas—one may study costumes to heart's content —and every costume is well worth studying. At the salon exhibition in early spring special frocks are worn, and the little tea tables in the tea rooms near the exhibition are filled with smart folk who all seem to know each other, and chatter and discuss the pictures and the artists as they drink tea.

But it is at the races that the important costumes are worn. The grand monde and the demi-monde alike attend these affairs, motor cars by the hundreds are there; the men are arrayed like the lilies of the field in purple and fine linen and tall silk hats, and the women wear frocks that run into the three-figure mark and bear the hallmark of the style dictators of the world. Every couturier is expected to launch something new, individual and interesting in the way of modes at the races, and many of the couturiers employ professional mannequins, or costume models, who parade up and down in gorgeous gowns and hats expressive of the latest ideas in the sartorial art.

The premier race of the season is held at Longchamps, just out of Paris, and the racing season ends with the Brittany circuit, when the fashionables go to Trouville and Deauville to enjoy the cool breezes and attend the Grand Prix. Here one may see the bizarre and daring costumes of the fashionable half world, as well as the exquisite frocks and well chosen hats of the real fashionables; and as Trouville is almost invariably cool and windy in August forecasts of winter fashions are to be noted in smart coats, two-piece suits and felt hats. In the evenings wonderful gowns are worn at the Casino and in the mornings on the gay Rue de Paris, which is lined with fascinating little shops, are to be seen delightful tailored frocks of linen and other summery materials. All the important Paris dressmakers have branch shops on the Rue de Paris at Trouville, and orders are taken for autumn and winter costumes like the chic models displayed by the busy mannequins.

Two style movements have come together on the fashion field and each is contending for first place. One of these is the early Victorian style movement and the other the East Indian. The Victorian fashions were to be expected and follow in orderly sequence after the empire modes which have held sway for several seasons; but the East Indian influence has come quite unexpectedly, being a fad resulting from the furore created by the costumes of East Indian princesses visiting Paris and London at the coronation. The clash of the two styles, one so brilliant and sensuously oriental and the other so prim and old-fashioned, has brought out some odd, not to say weird, effects.

Tailored wear grows more and more orante—as far as the French conception is concerned. French women have taken to wearing tailored costumes at the races, pattering after the English women who look so chic and trim in the costumes they wear at Goodwood late in the summer. Two typically French tailored suits which are being much copied by American manufacturers were noted at the Grand Prix. One was of king's blue corduroy and had a fetching cutaway coat buttoned obliquely from the waist line to the hip with large black crochet buttons. Oblique rows of smaller crochet buttons were set across each wide rever and up the side of the cuff. The skirt was a new model, straight in line but rather narrow and with the half flounce, reaching only around the back and sides, which promises to be very fashionable this winter. With this charming blue corduroy suit was worn a blue velvet toque entirely covered on top with folds of fringed-out white taffeta. A blue corduroy reticule matching the suit hung from one shoulder. This tailored model was by Bernard.

Another Bernard suit, more mannish in type, was of ratine with black stripes on a white ground. The coat of this suit was double-breasted, with a cutaway opening and black moire facings on the shawl collar and cuffs. The narrow skirt was slashed from belt to hem and buttoned together, the last two buttons being left unfastened to show the foot and ankle—a very fetching French trick at the moment.

One of the odd effects resulting from the East Indian styles is the combination of a draped and knotted sash and a coat cut on formal tailored lines. Several tailormades of dark serge, noted at the Grand Prix, though trimmed in the conventional way with button and satin faced revers, had broad, soft sashes knotted over the coat at the waist line, the sash hanging almost to the knees at one side of the back. These sashes are really prettier when worn with the graceful Indian tunics, or with satin suits which do not seem as uncompromisingly tailored and mannish in suggestion as tailored wear of serge or ratin. Satin suits are much the vogue, and very chic are some of these little models, which make the figure look especially trim and slender when the lines of the costume are good and the material rich.

Satin frocks in tailored style have short-waisted bodices with a flat pleating set below the high draped belt, and straight skirts trimmed with three scant puffings run along both edges with cording. Puffings, cordings and fringes—fringes innumerable — mark the beginning of the Victorian era in dress, and these trimmings hold their own in spite of the onslaughts of the gaudy colors and voluminous draperies of the oriental style influence.

One of the prettiest styles seen on the Rue de Paris at Trouville was the little silk coat worn over lingerie gowns. For some reason or other these coats have not been taken up by the masses, but almost every smartly dressed woman in Paris numbered such a coat among her wearables this summer. Over frocks of white or cream lingerie stuff, and worn with hats and sunshades to match, these gay little coats were delectable and the long tails at the back invariably lent height to the figure. These coats have been retained in favor for autumn and, made of black satin, they are worn over little tailored frocks of the same material or black and white striped wool fabric with puffings of the satin at the knees.

All the photographs on today's page have been enlarged from snap shots taken at Grand Prix, and every detail of the costumes pictured is authoritative and new.

One of the photographs shows a tailored costume of white fabrics with heavy Venice lace. The back of the costume is illustrated and a peculiar feature is the "movement" of the lines at the foot of the tunic and edge of the jacket. The jacket scallops up and the tunic down; and in front the opposite effect is achieved, the jacked pointing downward and the tunic rising almost to the knee. The material of this suit is a lustrous, pliable mixture of wool with mohair, and the heavy lace trimming adds much effectiveness to the simple lines. The collar is made of green velvet, with a center of lighter green and narrow trimming of green and gold gimp—the concession of East Indian modes made by the couturier.

Very oriental in suggestion are two of the costumes shown; one a voile frock embroidered with worsted in deep red and blue colors and dropped over a jupe of blue satin, and the other a tunic gown of printed Indian crepe in shades of orange and brown. This latter costume excited much interest wherever it was seen. Two tunics were used, the lower one being slashed to show a trailing skirt of yellow brocade. At the foot of the upper tunic, which was made of yellow crepe printed in a brown design, was a band of dull gold tissue. The printed tunic reached up over a bodice of pale yellow chiffon and the short sleeves were met by long pale yellow silk gloves embroidered in white.

Simple but Massive are Coiffure Effects

By Rene Mansfield.
(Copyrighted, 1911, by I. J. Robinson.)

DAME fashion has a relenting heart concealed somewhere about her modish person, after all. Just when our tortured locks were beginning to stand on end, so to speak, from constant puffing and stuffing and roughing the lady graciously permits us to coax them back to docility by speaking up for the most simple effects possible in hairdressing.

At the same time, she is never deaf to the plaints of the wig-makers, who must go right on making a living, so that unless nature has given us as much hair as a Lady Godiva most of us will find that the present styles demand a luxuriance of tresses only to be obtained by the yard. Whereas the hair about the face must be fluffily guiltless of pads or roughing, the generous knots and twists and coils at the back of the head require the addition of at least a switch or two.

Very quaint and youthful is the most popular mode of the moment which is a charming adaptation of the peasant hairdress. After the hair is parted and loosely waved the long strands over the ears are wound about in flat spiral twists, just back of the ears, and the back portion is formed into a similar twist, or into a Psyche knot. Sometimes the hair is simply coiled in irregular strands, brought well to the front over the ears, and always with the contour of the head exposed. What is called the Flemish style is particularly becoming to a round, young face. The hair is parted from the forehead down to the back of the neck and the two sections are then braided and coiled into circles that almost cover the sides of the head. These braids are drawn together in the back, but the long line of parting is preserved.

Still another variation may be obtained by having a fall of curls in the back with the circle twists at either side. Although curls and puffs are little used these days there are many women to whom nothing is more becoming, and in hairdressing, above all, a woman should consider becoming rather than style. A stray curl or two resting on the neck or just escaping from a coil braid will do much to soften the features. At the same time nothing will impart that old maid look so successfully as anything resembling a corkscrew curl too near the face.

There is a marked tendency toward higher effects in coiffures and it is quite likely that the banished pompadour will return again to favor. The Psyche knot placed quite high on the back of the head with a moderate pompadour will be considerably worn this winter.

Thus it will be seen that a woman may dress her hair in any style best suited to her face and consider herself quite a la mode if she but maintains a certain simplicity of contour, and though she may use as much false hair as ever, if she endeavors to obtain as natural effects as possible, striving to conceal its use rather than flagrantly revealing it as heretofore.

The Ohio river claims among its treasures the Jenny Lind rock. The singer was a passenger on a steamer which struck on a sandbar near the rock, and while waiting for the boat to be floated Miss Lind had boatmen row her out to the rock, where she stood alone and sang.

Men's Fancies in Furnishings

By Orville G. Victor.
(Copyrighted, 1911, by I. J. Robinson.)

NEVER before in the history of the trade have haberdashers provided for the well-dressed American such a remarkable variety of shirts, neckties and minor accessories to the toilet as they have in store for the fall and winter season of 1911-1912.

The soft shirt, in all sorts of nice fabrics, continues to hold the market, in exclusive and ordinary wear alike. But the much-vaunted soft collar has failed to meet the expectations of its progenitors. During the past summer it was worn very little by men of taste; for its appearance is untidy and it proved no more comfortable than the usual starched linen collar. For the fall and winter it is not in evidence at all, and probably will not be revived next spring.

Practically all shirts carry the French cuffs—that is, the unstarched, turned-back kind. These are worn almost universally at all times except for more or less formal functions that call for starched white linen. They may be obtained at all prices, from $1.50 up. Light-weight French batiste shirts average $5.50, so do silk negligees, custom made. These, and the less expensive grades, made from linen, muslin, and other fabrics, including percales, madras and surah silks, are worn to business by young and old, by men of moderate income and those who can afford to gratify expensive tastes.

A swell shirting, which will be made up for the fall and winter in both negligee and pleated, is the Russian cord. This is found mostly in lavender, blue and tan, and will undoubtedly be extremely popular among the high-class trade. Pique and mercerized detachable collars are on sale, but haberdashers do not predict any extensive demand for them.

Neckwear is shown in an astonishing variety of weaves and patterns, both in four-in-hands and "bat wing" ties. The latter are in great favor for early fall, and may be had in accordeon weaves, solid colors, stripes, diagonals and "polke dots."

The latter pattern has come into style again, and will be worn extensively during the coming season, especially in four-in-hands. So far, the dots are confined to white against dark blue or some other solid color; they vary in size from a quarter to half an inche in diameter.

The newest thing in neckwear, designed especially for the fall trade, is known as the handkerchief scarf. This is a four-in-hand, of generous size; most of them are exceedingly gaudy, carrying brilliant combinations of colors in what is designated as Persian designs. "It is astonishing," said a prominent haberdasher, "to see how men's tastes change; this is no longer a feminine prerogative. Thousands of men are wearing today the brightest combinations of color imaginable—men who a short while ago would not have thought of wearing anything but black, white, gray, or the soberest combinations."

But the preference for the quieter combinations still exerts an influence, and for the fall, besides the brilliant Persian designs in rumchundas and foulards, are many plain colors and combinations with neat, attractive effects in stripes and diagonals. In fact, I have been informed that fully 60 per cent of the neckties sold of late have been in solid colors or in "self" stripes—that is, stripes of the same color, but different shade, as the body of the tie.

In the more exclusive trade—exclusive, in this connection, usually means nothing more than expensive—some houses show a striking novelty in a four-in-hand of bright scarlet, made of Irish muslin, which sells for $1.50. Netted neckwear is practically de trop. A new design, created especially for autumn, is of alternating stripes of gray and green, each stripe being ¾-inch wide, and composed of countless smaller stripes in the weave. This is a decided novelty, and extremely attractive to the eye.

Fancy waistcoats are to be had practically without restriction as to style or pattern. Perhaps the most popular, and certainly one of the nicest in appearance, is made of silk or velvet, with perpendicular stripes, less than a quarter of an inch wide, of black and silver gray. For autumn wear are some of white vyelle flannel, with narrow stripes of blue or black. The Tuxedo and dress vest is of white French pique; with the dinner coat simple effects in gray and in black-and-white may be worn.

In underwear, union suits vie with two-piece suits in about equal ratio; in the former, the suit with half arms and ankle-length drawers, which costs from $1.50 up, seems to be in great favor. These come in crepe, soisette and heavier fabrics.

Hardly any socks are to be seen except silk and silk-and-lisle. It is actually true that real silk socks have been sold for 25 cents a pair; the average price for the fall trade is 35 cents, or three pairs for a dollar. Cotton and woolen socks are shown only when called for. They are all in solid colors, no stripes or other combinations being on view.

Jewelry for men's wear, for formal dress or otherwise, is measured only by the contents of the buyer's purse. Almost everything is "matched" nowadays—comes in "sets," including shirt studs, vest buttons, cuff links, and, when the studs are not worn, stickpin as well. These sets may be bought expensively or otherwise. The latest offering for fall has a tiny bit of platinum in the center of a button of mother-of-pearl. Cat's-eyes, moon-stones and amethysts are all popular and not very expensive. Stickpins for the necktie may be selected from a million designs, at all prices. The same is true of the watchfob—but it must be pendant from a black silk ribbon.

A plain, unadorned cane, with bent handle, will be carried this fall, but at the same time the buyer can indulge his individual fancy for decoration in silver or gold. Malacca, pimento and snakewood are among the more expensive sticks, while bamboo and olive-wood are inexpensive and entirely proper. The latest novelty in canes is one with an electric light, which enables the late home-comer to find the keyhole in the wee sma' hours o' th' marning.

CHENILLE AND OSTRICH IN MUFFS AND NECKWEAR.

Until the season for heavy furs there will be a great deal of ostrich and marabout, combined with chenille in muffs, scarfs, stoles and trimmings. Chenille tassels and fringes deck the handsomest feather articles, and chenille is sometimes woven in with the body of the scarf or muff, as the case may be. Gray or brown chenille mingled with the soft natural marabout or with gray ostrich makes a beautiful set.

Two colors of ostrich in the one set are attractive. While in the center, with brown or black or tinted ostrich looks well, especially in the muff, and white trimmings on colored sets are liked. Ostrich feathers are dyed in every modish shade—green, red, gray and the like.

Brocaded velvet with a very light year background is used for the loop against very dark velvet in one of the new large sized bow ties for wear with a stiff collar.

Single ornaments of passementerie are attached to the linen collars in some cases in place of the ordinary ties or bows.

Poke Bonnets With Velvet Crowns.

New York Sun: The Georgian poke of narrow brim drooping at the sides and rounding up a little at front and back is often allied with very high crowns in draped silk, or velvet, or in silk, velvet, beaver or felt, trimmed high. Bandeaux of feathery egrets, espreys or other fluffy plumage may entirely encircle the crown, giving great height or pointed wings may be used in a similar way, or finely plaited tulle cut in winglike points and closely pressed may be placed around the crown of a velvet hat with admirable effect.

OUR NON-CONTIGUOUS TERRITORY.

American Asiatic Association's Journal: Trade of the United States with its non-contiguous territories in the fiscal year which ended with June will exceed $200,000,000, against less than $1,000,000 in 1904. In this trade merchandise received in the United States slightly exceeds in value that sent to the territiories in question, though shipments from the United States show larger and more rapid growth.

In 1903, the earliest year for which complete records are available, the shipments from the United States to the territories under discussion—Alaska, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines—aggregated $36,000,000; in 1910 $83,000,000, and in 1911 seem likely to be $96,000,000, a gain of $60,000,000, or nearly 170 per cent.

Inward shipments from the territories were $50,00,000 in 1903, $108,000,000 in 1910 and at the rate of $107,000,000 in the ten months of 1911, a gain of $45,000,000, or 80 per cent over 1903. The largest gain in outward trade with non-contiguous territories was in shipments to Porto Rico.

SAVED A DIFFICULT SITUATION.

Glasgow Herald: "Not long ago," writes a correspondent from an Australian township, "the zeal of a lady out here who was collecting for some pious object ate up so much of her race prejudice that she invaded the dwelling of a wealthy Chinaman.

"Being received in the drawing room by a lady who was unmistakably English she stammered out that it was Mrs. Ah Sin she wanted to see. 'I am Mrs. Ah Sin,' said the lady. The visitor blushed furiously and studied the matting—there was no carpet. Then a bright and reassuring recollection came to her. She looked up, extended a friendly hand and said beamingly: 'Oh! How d'ye do? I—I had a sister who married a Scotchman.'"

HOME BUILDING and ADORNMENT

By Evelyn Marie Stuart.

ONE of the hopeful signs of the times is the improvement in taste to be noted in the American home of today over that of a few decades ago. The key-note of this happy strain is simplicity, the substantial, unpretentious, honestly made and sparingly adorned in all things, replacing the florid, illy-constructed and over-ornate effects, which enjoyed a passing popularity from the day when the perfection of machinery made elaboration of detail easy, to the day when good taste began to demand, in place of the facile, machine-made adornment, the simpler, hand-wrought designs.

Perhaps because America is the land of invention, where mechanical contrivances of every kind have been most abundantly perfected, it was the American home that suffered most from the ease with which machinery could construct decoration. Thus it was that the revolt against red plush and machine carving, pink and green rose garlanded rugs, silver massed with intricate flower designs, and other exhibitions of a taste for all that glitters was here most marked—resulting, at first, in a reversion to the heaviest and most crude effects, which gradually took on grace and lightness without losing simplicity.

It would be difficult to single out the individual, or individuals, to whom belong the laurels as champions of the new order of things; for, as in all other revolutions of popular taste or sentiment, it was not the leaders who created the ideal, actuating the masses, but rather a growing ideal among the masses that brought forth the leaders, urging them forward as representatives.

William Morris is, of course, generally recognized as the greatest prophet of a day of growing grace in home building and adornment, and Ruskin, with those of the elect who have received and understood his message, has foreshadowed a time when the aesthetic should play a greater part in our daily lives.

The arts and craft movement in America, and the new art movement in Germany, both had the same end in view—a general improvement in public taste to a point where only well-designed houses, furniture, hangings and rugs could be tolerated.

There is a difference of opinion as to the American and German claims of priority in this thought, but, at any rate, it is apparent that a relation exists between the arts and crafts movement here and the new art movement abroad.

It is interesting to note how the efforts of the craftsmen have affected machine-made furniture, silver and rugs, which now equal craftsmen's work in all the essentials of tasteful design and chaste simplicity, while excelling it in general practical utility and reasonable price.

That a school of American architecture and decorative art is now in the process of formation is apparent to anyone who studies the pretty cottages and bungalows erected within the last ten or fifteen years, and the rather low, wide-spreading type of house, favored at present even by the wealthy builder.

Period decoration has its friends and prophets, of course, and many are its undeniable charms and advantages; yet to other students of home-making the connection between a Francis I. or Louis XIV. interior and an American family, of Anglo-Saxon, Germanic or Hibernian descent, is not readily apparent. Some architects, indeed, go so far as to design houses to fit the appearance and character of the occupants, even as one might thus design wearing apparel, and, after all, though a trifle extreme, the idea is far from illogical.

Many of the older and well-defined decorative periods, however, offer a setting quite generally suitable to the average American family. Sheraton, Chippendale, Adams, Hepplewhite and William and Mary designs, in furniture, are of such a delightfully graceful and simple character as to be almost universally acceptable. Colonial fashions in architecture and furniture, are an adaptation of English and French designs also widely appropriate throughout the states descended from the colonies.

Often composite effects prove pleasing, a mingling of decorative elements from different periods, if judiciously handled, possessing both harmony and charm. Many decorators, in fact, advocate a not too strict adherence to period, claiming that to break up the period a bit relieves monotony.

Color is an ever important factor in decoration and furnishing; for a color scheme, well chosen, will render attractive any but an exceptionally unfortunate selection, or collection, of household goods. Soft, neutral tones for the large expanses, such as walls and floors, and even curtains and upholstery, relieved with bright bits of color in pottery, tapestry and pictures, is, perhaps, the happiest and most reliable arrangement.

Elaborate schemes involving daring, rich or brilliant colors, should be entrusted only to the expert, by whose skilled hands they may be safely accomplished.

A not too lively shade of autumnal brown, for living room walls, is delightful with the many shades of oak furniture, now so popular, such as fumed oak, mission oak, weathered oak or Flemish oak. Early English oak, slightly lighter and richer in tone, goes well with tapestry effects in mingled green and brown, leaf designs as a background in the wall covering. With mahogany furniture, pale gray or gold, and white enamel is very pretty for walls and woodwork, while Circassian walnut allows a background of dull rose or bluish hue. Dark oak is likewise handsome with rather brilliant blue, even a delft being permissible, though such strong colors are not generally advisable.

In decorating and furnishing the home, it is well to bear in mind the variety of colors and costume which season and occasion may assemble within its walls, and to keep the broader tones of living room and dining room, at least, of so neutral a character as to afford a charming background for any well-chosen costume. Color and light are the main elements in determining whether the atmosphere of an interior shall at all times receive first consideration.

Another important factor is the balancing of plain and figured surfaces. Wall paper, rugs, hangings, upholstery, all of a decided and different pattern, produce a most violent effect, in spite of good color. Monotone hangings, wall decoration, upholstery and rugs, on the contrary, with their unrelieved plain surfaces, tend to produce a feeling of monotony, though not of necessity depressing. A room otherwise in plain surfaces gains greatly in charm when relieved by Oriental rugs, embroidered cushions, in arts and crafts, or Oriental patterns and rich colors, with an abundance of pictures and bric-a-brac. After all, some of the best effects in home adornment are an outgrowth of necessity, for often the woman who has little money to spend must spend so much more thought upon her purchases, and all of her acquisitions must be so carefully considered, that the result is perfect harmony, brought about by an assembling of exactly the right and rightly chosen objects of adornment. Perhaps it is this sweetest of the uses of adversity which imparts to the simplest homes a cozy and homelike atmosphere, so often sadly missing in more pretentious dwellings.

How to Clean Lace

In washing lace it is a good plan to pin it to a cushion or thickly padded board, pull out all points and edges and fasten them carefully to the cushion or padding and allow to remain until perfectly dry. Instead of adding biuing to water in which lace has been rinsed try making the final rinsing in milk. It gives a lovely creamy tone to the lace. Rinsing in weak tea or coffee will also give that creamy tone.

Irish crochet lace may be easily laundered. When ironing have several thicknesses of blanket covered by an ironing sheet on the table. Lay the lace right side down on it, cover with a cloth and iron until dry, pressing down hard. Then take your crochet hook and carefully pull out each little picot, raise all the petals of the flowers, then press the balls into shape with your fingers. Even a large piece like a coat or waist can be done at home just as well as at the cleaner's.

To keep the color of ecru lace when washing it add a little yellow ocher to the starch. Mix a small amount of the ocher with boiling water and add it to the starch or to the last rinsing water if starch is not used. Ocher may be bought at any paint store.

To restore black lace to its original luster squeeze it through a mixture made of half a cupful of water and one teaspoonful each of borax and alcohol, then rinse it in a cup of water with an old black kid glove that has been boiled. Pull out the edges of the lace until it is almost dry, then lay between two cloths and press with a hot iron.

When cleaning rare old lace do not wring it, for the twisting of the fine threads breaks them. Make a suds of shaved soap and boiling water, squeeze the lace between the hands in this water, rinse it in two or three other waters and then steep it in milk for twenty-five minutes to give it the correct yellowish tint.

The following is a French method of doing up laces: After having plaited them in several folds place them in a small linen bag and sew up the opening. Immerse the bag in pure olive oil. At the end of twenty-four hours take the bag out and put it in soapy boiling water. After it has soaked for a good quarter of an hour rinse it in tepid water and then pass it through a weak solution of mucilage and water. Take the lace out of the bag and iron. If it is desired to make the lace look like new place it on a frame covered with flannel until it is dry, taking care to stretch it delicately on both edges with the aid of pins.

Pretty Motor Bonnet.

Among the latest motor bonnets are airy and very fascinating models, made entirely of pleated frills, some broad, others narrow. In one case the ruffles were made of blue and white ribbon, attached to a thin gauze foundation, and cleverly stiffened with wire to keep crisply pleated. Between each row of frills a fold of blue satin was set, and the little bonnet fitted the head closely, being tied beneath the chin with blue ribbon.

Chinese Slippers for Boudoir.

Smarter even than the coquettish French mules with their pointed toes and precarious high heels, are now the funny, flat-soled shoes that ladies of high degree wear in China. In the days when the feet of Chinese women were not allowed to grow beyond the size of childhood these soft silken slippers were the only sort that could be borne on the fortured little feet. The Chinese slippers are really delightfully comfortable and very pretty, too—in delicate shades of silk embroidered with flower patterns in gay pinks, greens and yellows.

MEN'S FASHIONS FEATURED FOR FALL

THE advent of autumn brings with it a surprising variety of fine fabrics from which the well-dressed man may select the "makings" of his suit and overcoat. Rich, elegant worsteds, handsome cheviots, refined saxonies, in most attractive weaves and a riot of color combinations. But the latter are far from gaudy; a general tone of quiet and refinement is everywhere noticeable. As usual, stripes and diagonals form the principal patterns, but they do not stand out vividly, nor are they broadly contrasting. There are to be seen many ingenious combinations that give the impression of small, neat effects, while diagonals and shadow stripes vie with each other for first place. Grays, as usual, are in the lead in all color designs, the lighter shades predominating, while many very pleasing patterns are composed of various combinations of light and dark shades. The choice of men who are never without a dark blue suit has been consulted too; very dark shades of this standard color are to be had in any of the fabrics mentioned. Browns will be very popular, in several different shades, and with just a hint of some other color, caused by the introduction of a single thread of red, green, blue or purple silk. These make up into decidedly nobby suits, and will no doubt be accepted by men who never before wore anything but black, blue or gray.

The influence of the English style of dress is strongly evident in the styles prepared for the coming season; without in the least surrendering his independence, the American gentleman appreciates the propriety of dress as adopted by his brother across the pond, for the Englishman insists upon being properly and comfortably attired for all occasions, both as to cut of garments and quality of cloth used in their making.

Of course, the designers have modified the English styles in a manner to suit the marked personality of the American. Another reason for this modification is found in the fact that here in America we have no such leisure class as in England, despite demagogic ranting about the "idle rich." The American business men lack the opportunity, or the desire, to change their attires as frequently as men who have little else to do; therefore, the clothes provided for Americans, whether of custom make or "ready-to wear," are built well, for wear as well as looks.

During the coming season the sack or lounge suit will be as popular as ever, and will continue to predominate largely for business wear. It will be of medium length—about thirty inches—moderately form fitting, a vent in the center seam, with regulation pockets, with flaps to go in or out. This coat has three buttons, and is cut at a slight angle from the bottom button to the bottom of the garment, with slightly rounded corners. The sleeves will have either real or simulated cuffs with three buttons. The vest, of the same material as the coat, will carry five buttons, and will appear nearly an inch above the coat opening. The morning coat, or cutaway, as it is better known, is popular with a certain element, especially among professional men who do not care to wear the double-breasted frock—the "Prince Albert"—during business hours. This coat will also be largely in evidence for afternoon wear.

The former habit of appearing in the afternoon, at any sort of function, no matter how informal, in a sack or lounge suit, has practically disappeared. It was due partly to carelessness and partly to want of knowledge as to the demands of propriety. But the American public is now so widely informed as to these things, that the former excuses no longer exist, and the custom is now a thing of the past. Today, a man with social pretensions, even of the humblest, feels entirely out of place unless clad in a cutaway or frock in the social centers of the country, and this is especially true when he is in the company of ladies. In other words, the American now heeds the edicts of fashion, and appears properly accoutered for business and social engagements.

For town clothes, certainly the most popular of all is the morning or cutaway coat. The correct morning suit for the coming season will be a black or dark gray coat, with waistcoat of the same material, and gray trousers with a narrow stripe. If the coat is of gray, the trousers should match. A narrow strip of black braid, set in a quarter of an inch from the edge of both coat and waistcoat, forms an attractive and pleasing novelty. The braid is also set on the pocket flaps, the same distance from the edge. The coat has a welted breast pocket.

One of the things which makes the morning coat so popular is the fact that it is better suited to the average man's figure than the frock. The latter are smart on corpulent men; but when one is possessed of a good figure, he much prefers wearing the morning or cutaway coat.

For semi-formal wear, the double-breasted frock has not yet been displaced, nor is it likely to be for many seasons. In fact, it is coming into its own again to a greater degree this winter than for several seasons past. Men of middle age and past will wear it more than ever. During the coronation period this coat and the black silk hat were more in evidence in London than for several years before; the most prominent tailors of the West end, in the English metropolis, predict that they will be fully as popular, if not more so, from now until next spring.

For the coming season the morning or cutaway coat will be made to roll, with three buttons, set in closely together. The roll is quite soft to the first button. Only the second button of this coat is designed to button. The buttons are not silk-covered, but are of bone, black of course. Some of these coats will be shown, especially among the custom trade, with a double-breasted lapel with soft roll; but this style will be the exception and not the rule.

The sleeves are finished with four buttons close together, and a real cuff; they are cut very narrow, 10 or 12½ inches at the outside, and short enough in length to show at least a half inch of the starched shirt cuff. The buttons on the sleeve must button through, with worked button holes. This coat is very waisty, or form-fitting, and is usually worn buttoned.

The tendency to button the waistcoat high has been somewhat modified for the fall season. It must not be cut too high nor too low, but at a happy medium, and must be in a direct line with the roll of the coat. The waistcoat opening is a moderate V in shape. Five buttons are correct for a coat cut not too long, and the last button of the waistcoat should never be buttoned. There is positively no excuse for a chain hole.

Trousers will be a little more on the order of the pegged top for the coming season. They should taper nicely to the bottom, and care should be taken to see that the back of the trousers come within an inch of the ground. They should not bag nor bulge over the front of the boot, which means that there should be a good slope in the cut. Raised side seams of the wide type are fashionable.

There is a decided revival of the demand for striped effects in the darker shades for the coming season, as these designs are more adapted for autumn and winter. Those new effects are heavier looking than the old style, and, in many instances, there is a very distant double stripe which gives the cloth a most pronounced appearance. The popular shades will be brown, green and gray.

The indications are that heavier cloth will be quite fashionable for overcoats for the approaching cool weather. Manufacturers are opposed to this return to beaver, but popular demand makes it imperative that they once more place it on the market.

The new style of overcoat of the robust order lends itself to beaver cloth. This coat, it is proposed, will be of dark blue, will be long and will have wide pockets and flaps. The collar and lapels will be bold. A broad band of cloth, not a stripe, without buttons and put on flat, will be a feature. This band will not reduce the size of the waist, which is well defined without being gathered, but it gives an easy and comfortable appearance to the coat, which will be made with a cloth collar instead of velvet. This coat will be entirely correct for any wear, day or evening. The overcoat for the conservative man will be of very dark Oxford blue, Oxford gray, or of brown. The blue shades will be used largely for Chesterfield and box overcoats, while the gray and brown will be used more for paddock.

Nobody Loves a Fat Man Anyway— New Styles Call for String Bean Figures

Fat men are doomed.

At least, they cannot play to so much popularity during the coming fall and winter as formerly for the thin man with the stove-pipe effect, recently thrown over by the women for the beer-bottle effect, is coming into his own.

Unless the generously proportioned person will take anti-fat and run around the boulevard both morning and evening he cannot hope to compete with his thin, lean lanky, hungry-looking brother, who can climb into the latest there is in men's wear and appear at ease.

The new fall and winter styles, we are told, are for thin men and portly persons will do well to begin on the physical culture while "there is yet time" to use the urgent words of the heroine.

The man who looks like a string bean is destined for great things if he adheres strictly to fashion and allows the tailor to mould him into a veritable sliver.

If it is desired to be the headline attraction at any dressy function the subject will first make himself eligible by getting thin enough to be looked through without the X-ray or other modern inventions.

After this has been accomplished he will have a tight-fitting pair of trousers, a short and close-fitting coat that will at least cover the gap, a broad rimmed, low-crowned hat, a high collar and then he can consider himself Beau Brummel up-to-date.

After years of popularity the fat man gives way to the lean. The new fashions have decreed it so. While the portly person sheds copious tears, the lightweight comes at last into his own.

In accordance with an executive decree of July 21, 1911, the importation of arms and ammunition into Mexico is prohibited for a period of six months.

What She Will Buy at the Bootery

WHEN she thrusts forth her little silk-stockinged foot to have the newest footwear slipped upon it, the bride-to-be this fall will be delighted with the wide choice of styles offered for her selection. If she is a wise little bride-to-be she will give much attention to this part of her trousseau and economize on anything else rather than shoes. Because nothing so quickly and loudly proclaims a woman's taste and fastidiousness—or lack of it—as the style and condition of her pedal coverings.

First, she will select a sensible boot for street wear with the tailored suit. Patent leather, eclipsed for a while by the leathers of dull finish, is gaining again in favor. Some of the smartest button shoes are fashioned entirely from the patent leather or patent kid. Many have the cloth top, though these are seen more often on the dressier models.

The short vamp shoe seems to have won a permanent place in the affections of every woman who likes her foot to look as short as possible—and her name is legion, you may be sure—so that while not so extreme as some of the styles a while ago, the short vamp is much in evidence. Toes have a tendency to round out a bit, some of the mannish looking models being exaggerated in this respect.

Gaiters to match the suit, worn with street pumps of calf or patent leathers will be prominent this winter. For wear with the dressy afternoon frock the black patent, turned sole, with the white kid top, is dashing—perhaps too much so for the conservative taste.

It is when she chooses the evening slippers and the dainty bridal pair that the bride-to-be will become enthusiastically admiring. White satin, of course, is preferred for the latter, finished with a tiny bow. One pair fit for a Cinderella had a little true lover's knot worked out in seed pearls.

The Colonial slippers, with buckle of cut steel, rhinestones, or gilt are in black or a color matching the gown. Very beautiful, if a little bizarre and barbarous, are the slippers of gold or silver cloth, embroidered in metals or silk. These are toned down by a thread of black or color woven into the fabric. The embroidering has taken on the popular Oriental character, in both design and coloring, though the use of color is usually restricted to one shade so that the slippers may harmonize with the gown. Metal embroidery is also seen on the satin slippers, while metal buckles of every description ornament street as well as dress slippers.

The trousseau will not be complete without at least a pair or two of the adorable boudoir slippers. These may be obtained in a soft fine kid, with a big fluffy pom pom, as low as $1.00.

Hosiery Suggestions.

There is a stocking on the market especially designed for the stout woman which is of pure thread silk with mercerized lisle sole and tops, that has extra wide knees and tops and sells for $1.35.

Very practical and satisfactory are the "silk boot" stockings, with the soles and entire upper part of lisle.

Hosiery of vivid shade—emerald green, cerise, royal purple, crimson—is permissible for evening wear, but black and brown continue most desirable for ordinary use.

Nobby Apparel for Young America

By ORVILLE G. VICTOR

THE boy is father to the man," so an old proverb says. At any rate, the American boy is catered to by clothiers and haberdashers, hatters and boot-makers, quite as carefully as is his daddy, even though comparatively few of the various trades carry juvenile departments. Probably the best place to provide for the wants of the growing youth, from infancy to young manhood, is at one of the big ready-made stores that make a specialty of boys' apparel. In almost any one of these may be found practically everything the youth needs for school, outing or dress wear. Of course, many boys, like their fathers, have their clothes "made to order;" but there is practically no difference between the custom-made and "ready-made" boyish styles for the fall and winter.

For the lad from 12 to 14 years old, the most popular everyday suit for fall is a double-breasted blue or gray coat with trousers to match, knee length. The time when the boy abandons his knickerbockers and dons long "pants" depends not so much upon his age as upon his height; but the period usually arrives when he is about 15 years old. When he attains to this important event, he exchanges his double-breasted coat for a single-breasted one. He also lays aside his blouse, puts on a shirt and suspenders, and wears a vest for the first time.

Saxonies and cheviots, cassimeres and worsteds, are made up in enticing styles for the boys this fall, mostly in grays and blues, the former predominating. For the late fall and the winter brown will be the most popular color, some plain, some in attractive plaids, with just a suggestion of red or other color. Many of the grays are in stripes or diagonals, and some in plaids of lighter shade.

For the little fellows, 10 years of age or less, Russian blouses are au fait; even 2-year-olds don "rompers" and blouses. The once familiar kilts are no longer in evidence.

The older boy wears shirtwaists, too, made from cambric, percales and china silk. His neckties are just like dad's, except they are a trifle shorter and narrower. Socks for little ones, of knit or crocheted worsted, are so attractive that many mothers buy them for the girls as well. The older lad who has not yet put away his knickers wears a nice ribbed stocking of cotton or woolen, black, in medium weight for fall and heavier for winter. Good, serviceable stockings of this class cost about 35 cents per pair, the price varying a few cents with the size.

Some clothiers just now are showing a fine line of double-breasted Norfolk jackets with trousers to match, for boys small and big; they are made from serges, tweeds and cassimeres, in grays, blues and browns. For the smaller chaps Russian blouses and sailor suits prevail, made of cloth for fall and winter, although some parents prefer to dress the little fellows in wash fabrics the year round, depending more upon the underclothing for necessary warmth. Among the Norfolks are many very pretty patterns in a small black-and-white check, and others in a broader check with a silk thread, which gives the garment a decidedly "tony" effect.

The boy who goes into society, if he is 14 years of age or more, wears what is known as a Tuxedo suit; this is not like an adult's Tuxedo. The coat is practically a one-button cutaway; the vest is full dress, with V-shaped opening and four buttons; the trousers are long or knee-length according to the height of the wearer. These suits are made of black unfinished worsteds or Venetian cloth. A white starched shirt, with regulation "poke" collar and white bow tie, black stockings and patent leather pumps, complete the costume.

Hats galore are provided for Young America; the bigger boys wear all sorts of headgear, just like their fathers or older brothers; for the smaller ones a popular fall hat is the "khaki," much like those worn by the Boy Scouts. These are light brown in color, made of khaki cloth or linen. The little chaps are provided with the "Tyrolean," in colors, with contrasting ribbons.

A hat which will undoubtedly "take" greatly with the boys this fall is the "English walking hat," made of cloth, with soft, rounded crown and roll brim, and band of the same material. These hats are well made and will stand for almost any sort of usage. They are mostly in grays or black-and-white check designs.

Another hat, more dressy in appearance than the one just described, is shaped much like father's "King Alphonso," with telescope crown and flat brim, in grays and browns. Caps, of course, are always in demand, and may be bought in infinite variety of color and combinations.

Shoes, for fall and winter wear, are built for the most part on lasts of broad, comfortable shape; the soles are moderately heavy; the heels are low and flat. Extra heavy soles are provided for skating shoes, made for the most part in calfskin with the same broad, flat heel, to allow the clamps of the skate to secure a firm hold.

The property of the English crown has been marked with the broad arrow from times so early that no one can now tell when it was first used for this purpose or what was its meaning.

Footwear for Fall and Winter

HE who has pretentions to the title of "well-dressed" cannot be too careful about his footwear; a shabby or misshapen shoe on a gentleman's foot is as inexcusable as soiled linen on the body. The shoes provided by standard makers for the coming season are the most shapely that have been seen for a long time. No extremes are shown in toe or heel, or other points. The "bulldog" effect is popular throughout the West, but is seen not at all on the new shoes in the East which are now on exhibition for fall and winter custom.

It is surprising to observe how the tan shoe has superseded the dull black—meaning the ordinary black calf or kid shoe that has to be "shined" in order to present a decent appearance. In most of our larger cities men of business and social affairs have practically abandoned that; they wear tan shoes until six o'clock in the evening, and then put on the patent leathers if they are going out; otherwise they don comfortable slippers or "Juliets." Laced tan shoes, medium weight for early fall and heavier weight for later, stormy days, are now on exhibition. Shoe dealers tell me that they expect to sell them all winter long and have four or five new lines on hand.

The patent leather shoe for dress or semi-dress this fall will have five buttons, flat and black. The shapes of all shoes are what the dealers designate as "conservative," and show the effect of the English last. The toes are narower and thinner than last season, while the high military heel has been replaced with one flatter and not more than one and one-quarter inches high. For formal evening wear kid or cloth tops, and plain toes are demanded by the fall fashions. Vici kids run from medium to broad.

Pumps, to accompany full dress, are in patent leather, with heavier soles than those in vogue last season. With dinner clothes, however, dull pumps are coming into favor. For afternoon functions dull leather shoes with colored tops are both popular and proper. This pertains more to black leather than to the tans.

Great variety is shown in sportsmen's shoes; a popular one is made of horsehide, with double soles and Goodyear welt. For "tramping" and general country wear a shoe that will undoubtedly meet with high favor this fall is of heavy Rusian calf, with scafe sole and heel. This shoe has a layer of rubber between the insole and outsole, and is declared to be absolutely waterproof.

A handy novelty in footwear (and that is not intended for a pun) is in travel slippers, made of kid, so soft and pliable that they may be slipped into the hip pocket; small cases are also furnished for them; they come in black, tan and oxblood, and are worn mostly during long automobile journeys, but are also in favor for Pullman car and steamboat travel.

Another Electrical Story

The Dream of Benjamin Holdsworthy

This past night I, Benjamin Holdsworthy, have had a most remarkable dream: so remarkable, indeed, that I will here set it down for my children and my children's children, until it may chance that that which I beheld in my dream may become truth.

Column One.

The day had been long, and my work had drawn more than usual upon my bodily powers, so that, although it was exceeding cold as I sat in my chair in the gloaming, yet had I not sufficient energy to go forth and cut wood wherewith to kindle a fire.

It seems, often, when the body is completely exhausted the brain secures greater freedom; roaming hither and yon over the world of created things, and even beyond. * * *

I sat there a long time, revolving many matters, until I was aroused by someone entering the room. "All alone in the dark?" inquired a voice strange to me and that yet seemed to touch a responsive chord in my memory.

In my dream, it seemed that I sat up and opened my eyes to behold before me a young lady most strangely attired! All in white, of exceeding fair appearance with a great crown of golden hair, yet, withal, something, I knew not what, seemed lacking.

And then it came to me that it was her body that seemed so strange—why, she appeared like a long thin roll of white paper from her shoulders to her feet; her head appearing from the upper end of the roll, and from the lower, as dainty a little pair of shoes as I had ever clappt eyes on!

"I fear, Madame, there is some error," I found voice to say at length, "this is the home of Benjamin Holdsworthy, the printer; for whom do you seek? Perchance I may put you upon your right path."

A silvery little laugh was my only answer, and then—"Why, Grandaddy, how funny you are tonight! Confess now, you were dreaming when I came in, weren't you?"

Column Two.

Grandaddy she had called me! Why, who could this strangely attired visitor be? I remember thinking in my ream that I would soon awake and that she would vanish!

Yet I now seemed to grow only the more alert, and, as I looked about me, found a great change in all around; nothing seemed to be as I had left it before my nap—where the great open fireplace built of giant logs had been, I saw instead just such a carven mantle as I remember having wondered at in the home of Cousin Simon when I visited him in the city!

Instead of the iron grate in his mantle, however, mine now contained only a row of strange glass tubes, the purpose of which I could in no way comprehend, until this strange visitant who called me "Grandaddy" leaned over and did somewhat to a small black button let into the woodwork at the side; whereupon, to my most intense amazement, each of the tubes became instantly filled with fire, the which flickered not, nor could I see upon what it fed, nor did it seem in any way to become consumed; and yet, which gave forth a most pleasant warmth.

"What magic is this?" I enquired, starting up in affright; my visitor looked up at me in surprise, and, stepping to my side, said: "Well, you HAVE been dreaming, haven't you, Grandaddy? Just as if you didn't know a luminous electric radiator by now!"

Before I could find words to express my perplexity, she stepped lightly to a corner of the room and, turning another of those tiny black buttons, on the minute the room was flooded with light as of day from a cluster of glass tubes, similar to those in the grate, only much smaller, which I now observed for the first time suspended from the center of the room over the table.

C. H. MACKINTOSH.

So overcome was I by these marvels that I could do nothing but subside weakly into my chair, greatly misdoubting the verity of my eyesight.

Meanwhile this phantom whom by now I was assured was a visitor from another world, hastened about the room in a most unphantom-like way, apparently engaged about the preparation of the eventide meal.

Column Three.

In a sort of stupor I watched her as she took a large copper kettle (which I could not remember to have seen in the house before) and carried it into the back room, from whence came shortly the sound of running water.

At this I sprang up hastily, thinking that it had come on to rain and that the roof had sprung a leak, only to find fresh marvels as I followed her into my little back room.

A flat dish of some white material was suspended from the wall, and, above it were two objects somewhat resembling the taps used in wine-casks, save only that these were of some bright metal, having the appearance of gold.

From one of these taps, a steady stream of what appeared to be water poured into the copper kettle held below it; though, if it were water, from whence it came or how I could in no way discover.

Having by this time progressed far beyond all power of voicing my astonishment, I returned slowly to the other room, followed by my strange visitor bearing the full kettle.

Placing this upon a small stand, she touched another of the diabolical black buttons, upon which I expected another flash of flame under the kettle. Nothing of the sort happened, however, and it was not until she had busied herself for some time with sundry other weird utensils, which seemed (from the uses she put them to) to be cooking utensils of some unknown kind, that a sudden purring from the kettle told me that the water had been brought to a boil in some mysterious way.

And so she went on about her duties, until she had spread before me the most amazing meal ever I had clappt eyes on. Half the things spread before me I had no names for, neither had I ever seen them before.

Even the dishes were strange to me—not the old, heavy ones I had been wont to use because of their excellent wearing qualities, but others light as an eggshell and no thicker!

Half afraid to taste of this provender, so magically provided, I yet permitted mine hunger to prevail on me to partake; and I must in truth admit that never in my life have I tasted food one half as delicious!

Everything had arrived at that stage of perfection obtained by mortal cooks, perhaps, once in a year's time! The meats were quite dissimilar to those I had become accustomed to, being cooked apparently at the same degree of heat both inwardly and outwardly, instead of being burned on the one side, half raw on the other, and quite raw within, as always when cooked in her great brick oven by my good wife.

The toast was browned to a rich golden color; the tea of delicious aroma, quite unlike the heavy stewed infusion I had become used to, on the few occasions when I permitted myself the luxury.

So absorbed did I become in this strange and unbelievably delicious feast that I did not think to address any questions to my mysterious hostess as to the method of its preparation or the manner of its obtaining.

Some fragment of information she volunteered; but for all the meaning it conveyed to my astounded senses, as well might she have remained silent.

"There, Grandaddy," she said when I had signified that all my wants were well supplied, "you've had your first all-electric meal! Every last thing was cooked by electricity. You know, I just got the chafing-dish, the stove and the kettle today. Don't you think everything was much nicer than

I suppose I must have made some noise which sounded like a response, for she went on—"and I bought you an electric shaving mug when I was down town, so you won't ever have to muss with tepid water for shaving any more. Whenever you want to shave you will just have to screw the connection into the electric light socket in your room, and in a few minutes your shaving water will be piping hot!"

And so she went on with her quite unintelligible chatter for some time, the whiles I remained sunk in profound amazement. Rising at length, she applied herself to removing the traces of our late repast.

Retiring, she attired herself in an outer garment of strange shape, apparently made of the skin of some black fur-bearing animal (which, however, I could not recognize), and she then informed me that she was going to run the "electric" over to "Mrs. Jones'" (a name I did not remember in our neighborhood) and that they were then to go to the "show" together!

Saluting me with a hasty kiss, she had slipped from the room before I could find voice to demand a translation; and, on following her to the door, I was yet further astounded to observe her mount into a vehicle of most strange shape, not altogether unlike a coach, but smaller and, marvel of marvels —without horses!

Seating herself in this strange vehicle, she took hold of a lever, stooped over and did something I could not note, waved to me from the window, and then away she went down the street as though blown by the wind!

With my mind in a sorry puzzle, I returned slowly to the house and sank once again into my chair, to reflect on the happenings of this amazing night.

As my eyes roved over the apartment, it seemed that not one thing, save only the chair in which I sat, was in any way familiar to me; and suddenly, with a greater shock than ever, my eyes rested from their search on somewhat having the appearance of a calendar, used to remind one of the day of the month and the year.

"September 25th, 1911," it said! Just one hundred years to the day from the time when I had fallen asleep in my chair.

At this capping marvel, I rose from my seat with great suddenness, determined to find the meaning of this riddle. Crossing to the fireplace I sought the black button, the turning of which had been the signal for all that had happened since, and, feeling it yield in my grip, I turned it sharply to the right.

A sharp crack—and I awoke in the darkness with the fragments of my pipe around me, and the cold gray of the morning breaking through the little window on all the old familiar objects!

I attempt no explanation of this, my dream. It is all so completely strange to me that I could not explain it if I would. So I have set it down as it was, to remain in the family archives until the arrival of the year of my dream.

Perhaps it has been granted to me to look forward into the future, who shall say? Only the passing of the century will reveal the truth or otherwise of this wild supposition.

Yet, if our children's children are indeed to have constantly with them all those strange and miraculous aids to their comfort and well-being, then would I wish most heartily that I had not been born until the dawning of that Age of Miracle!

SLAYER IS SORRY FOR HER SISTER

That Is Only Worry of Mrs. C. A. Patterson in Denver Jail.

Fears Murder of Husband May Spoil Wedding Plans.

Marital Troubles End in Crime in Colorado City.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 26.—How the publicity attending the killing of her husband, Charles A. Patterson, may affect the wedding plans of her sister, who is to marry a wealthy St. Louis man Thanksgiving day, appeared to be the greatest worry of Mrs. Gertrude Gibson Patterson today as she walked jauntily into the matron's room at the jail after a refreshing night's sleep.

When informed that an account of the shooting was printed in this morning's St. Louis papers, Mrs. Patterson became excited. Then she regained her composure and remarked simply: "It is awful!"

Husband Furnished Revolver.

Mrs. Patterson refused to talk further about the case, and she closed the interview with the remark:

"I must not say anything more. Perhaps when I have consulted my attorney I may have something to say, but not until then."

Mrs. Patterson told the police that while walking with her husband yesterday the latter handed her a revolver, with the words:

"There, go blow your head off."

She said that what followed is blank to her.

Patterson, who formerly was a wealthy broker of Chicago, was shot and killed yesterday by his wife. Charges of infidelity, threatened divorce suits and other marital troubles are given as the cause.

Said It Was a Suicide.

The shooting occurred in Monteclair, a suburb, two shots striking Patterson in the back. Mrs. Patterson then thrust the revolver under her husband's body and informed bystanders that her husband had shot himself. Later she confessed to the police, when

TAFT TALKS TO KANSANS

Helps in Celebration of the State's Fiftieth Anniversary.

Praises People of the Sunflower State at Hutchinson.

Hutchinson, Kan., Sept. 26.—President Taft was the central figure here today in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Kansas as a state. Governor Stubbs, Senators Curtis and Bristow, and several members of the Kansas delegation in congress were present and again politics was laid aside.

All parties and all factions joined in the greeting to the president, and all applauded his tribute to the Sunflower state. Mr. Taft also had something to say of the independence of thought in Kansas.

Praise for Kansas.

"Trials through which the state has come," he declared, "undoubtedly have given a character to its inhabitants They are bold and original in thought, courageous in execution."

The president arrived in Hutchinson early this morning and will spend the entire day here, leaving at midnight for Topeka. His program included the review of a big parade, the address at the state fair grounds, and an inspection of the more important exhibits at the show, the laying of the

SEEKING TO REMAIN SAN FRANCISCO'S MAYOR

TRYING NEW BALLOT IDEA

San Francisco Holds Election Without Party Designations.

McCarthy Is Opposed By James Rolph, Jr., for Mayor.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 26.—New and untried election machinery was set in motion at a non-partisan election here today for the selection of a full complement of municipal officers, and for the first time in San Francisco's history neither party names nor insignia have a place on the ballot.

In the event of a candidate receiving a majority vote he will be declared elected without having to take part in the general election to follow.

The contest for the mayoralty outweighs all other issues. There are but two prominent candidates—James Rolph, Jr., and P. H. McCarthy, incumbent. Ostensibly at least, Mayor McCarthy's ambition to succeed himself is backed by the Union Labor party, which placed him in office two years ago, while Rolph has the support of both the Republican and Democratic parties.

An Orderly Campaign.

Although the campaign has aroused intense interest, it is peculiarly lacking in exchanges of discourtesies among the candidates and their supporters. One city paper has given its support to McCarthy.

There are no direct issues involved. Both candidates are pledged to work for the success of the Panama-Pacific international exposition in 1915.

Rolph is a newcomer to political life. He is a merchant of large local interests and has never before sought public office, though long active in civic affairs.

McCarthy has risen from the ranks of labor to the leadership of the labor council. At the last municipal election he polled a decided plurality over the Republican and Democratic aspirants, and carried with him into office a majority of his ticket.

CHICAGO BLAST FURNACE EXPLODES

No Lives Lost in Accident at the Illinois Steel Works.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Blast Furnace No. 6 at the plant of the Illinois Steel works at South Chicago exploded late last night with a detonation which startled people from their beds, broke windows in all parts of the town and caused a report that the vicinity had been shaken by an earthquake.

The company, which maintains a private hospital within the walls which inclose the plant, withheld the amount of damage and the number injured. Soon after the explosion the gates were besieged by relatives of employes frantically seeking information. It was announced that no one had been killed.

The explosion was said to have been caused by what is known as a "slip"—cold water leaking through the furnace and coming in contact with the hot metal.

TERRIER STEALS MISTRESS' JEWELS

Scatters Gems Around Yard of Washington Home.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Diamonds alleged to be worth $14,000 were smuggled out of the home of its mistress, Mrs. Robert I. Miller, yesterday, by her little fox-terrier. Last night Mrs. Miller discovered that the chamois bag containing the gems had disappeared from her bed, where she had kept it for safety.

Distracted appeal to the police was made. Search resulted in discovering the gems in the yard, where the terrier had scattered them. All but two or three of the jewels were recovered and it was thought that further search would reveal those still missing.

Uncle Sam Will Seek Punishment of Alleged Conspirators.

Several Such Appeals to Come Before Supreme Court.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The federal government will mark the opening of the coming term of the supreme court of the United States by appealing for punishment of several alleged instances of attempts to defraud the United States. These have been advanced for early hearing.

That likely to be the hardest fought is the so-called "Stracey coal land case." The United States has appealed to the court to reverse the action of the United States circuit court for Western Washington in quashing an indictment against Charles F. Munday and Archie W. Shields, charged, with others, with a conspiracy to defraud the United States of approximately 5,000 acres of coal lands in Alaska by means of false and fictitious locations and entries, ostensibly for the benefit of the persons, respectively, in whose names the entries were to be made, but in fact for the benefit of two corporations.

The lower court held that the coal

Richmond, Va., Sept. 26.—An effort is being made to obtain a commutation of the death sentence imposed upon Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., for the murder of his wife on the Midlothian turnpike on the night of July 18, if the appeal to the supreme court for a new trial should not be successful.

It is said that several of the jurors who tried and convicted Beattie have been approached with a view to their signatures on the petition for commutation, but that all refused.

Critic of Statute Calls Taft's Position Simply Bluff.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 26.—Answering the challenge of President Taft that he produce an example of restraint of trade which would not come within the purview of the supreme court, W. J. Bryan said last night before his departure for Cincinnati:

"If President Taft would take time to read the dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan in the oil case and a report of the judiciary committee of the senate, filed by Senator Nelson, in which the committee refused to recommend the amendment which the supreme court injected into the law, he will understand my view on the subject.

"I believe with Justice Harlan and the Nelson report, that the supreme court practically has nullified the criminal clause of the anti-trust law, and will wait until the president succeeds in putting a trust magnate in the penitentiary before I give any weight to the president's defense of the decision of the supreme court.

"It took four years and a half to get the decision in the Standard Oil case. If it takes that long to find out whether a trust magnate can be sent to the penitentiary under the law as emasculated by the supreme court, the president may be able to bluff his way through another campaign on the trust question as he did through the last, but the bluff ought not to deceive anybody who is really opposed to the trusts."

WOMEN TALK OF FARM LIFE

Have Prominent Part at the Conservation Congress.

Dr. Wallace Says Food Prices Never Will Be Any Lower.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 26.—Women had an important part in the program of the third national conservation congress here today, in the discussion of one of the important subjects under consideration this year—the improvement of the conditions of rural life.

Plans for the organization of community clubs and to improve the educational and religious facilities in the country districts were put forward by leaders in the movement to check the tendency of country boys and girls to leave their farm homes and go to the large cities. It is planned to make rural life so pleasant that the young people will be attracted by it.

Mrs. Phillip N. Moore of St. Louis, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, delivered an address on the subject, "The Community Club," and "The Farmer's Wife," was discussed by Mrs. Harriet Wallace Ashby of Des Moines, Iowa.

Wiley on Program.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture, is scheduled to deliver one of the important speeches of the congress tonight. His subject will be "The Health of the People."

Others on the program today were Prof. P. G. Holden of the Iowa State college at Ames, Iowa; Herbert Quick of Madison, Wis., Dr. Warren H. Wilson of New York, and Dr. Frederick B. Mumford, dean of the University of Missouri.

Says Chicagoan Overdrew, But Stated Some Serious Truths.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 26.—Decrying the abuse of intoxicants at university social functions, Chancellor Samuel Avery, at the convocation of the University of Nebraska, today declared he agreed with R. T. Crane of Chicago, as to intemperance in educational institutions.

"Picking up a newspaper the other morning," said Chancellor Avery, "I noticed an attack on the moral conditions prevailing in American universities. Mr. Crane of Chicago, though he doubtless knows more about the manufacture of plumbing supplies than he does about higher education, nevertheless has written some things that demand more than a passing notice.

"It is true that student life is everywhere characterized by some undesirable features, and always will be, since education cannot well be deferred until the student has become as staid as his parents.

In Other Countries.

"In Russian universities we see exhibitions of the highest form of idealism, mingled with out and out materialism and pervaded by a spirit of anarchy.

"In the German institutions respect for law and order reigns supreme, but it is coupled with an abused personal liberty which too often degenerates into the grossest forms of living.

"The great institutions of the East, which Mr. Crane so fiercely attacked, are far superior in point of morals to many institutions on the other side of the Atlantic.

They found a .22-caliber revolver, and the Hedland girl, not knowing it was loaded, pointed it at the other girl.

"Oh, don't you shoot me!" said the latter.

The Hedland girl pulled the trigger. Her victim has only a slight chance to recover.

Viterbo, Italy, Sept. 26.—A further attempt to break down the alibi of Giovanni Rapi, the alleged treasurer of the Camorra, who conducted gambling houses in Naples and Paris, was made today at the trial of the Camorrists for the murder of Gennaro Cuoccolo and his wife.

Genarro Abbatemaggio, the informer, has sworn that in May and June of 1902 Rapi was in Naples selling stolen goods. Rapi insists he did not return from Paris to Naples until the following November. Today several men testified that they had met Rapi during the hot weather of 1902 in Naples.

Story of Discipline on Burning Vessel Told By Officer.

Toulon, France, Sept. 26.—It was a pitiable ship's company that was drawn up on the deck of the battleship Suffren this morning to answer to the roll call of the crew of the ill-fated Liberte, which was destroyed by an explosion and fire twenty-four hours earlier.

The survivors of the disaster—less than half the ship's complement—with the exception of those in the hospital, are temporarily quartered on the sister ship.

An official statement giving the casualties in the loss of the Liberte places the dead at 235 and the injured at 88, with one man missing.

The search of the wreckage of the battleship continued throughout the night with the aid of great torches. Occasionally a launch drew away from the illuminated spot in the harbor, disappearing in the darkness, to reappear presently at the pier with its load of wounded for the hospitals and dead for the mortuary.

Some Rescued From the Wreck.

During the night fifty bodies were recovered and eight wounded men were rescued from that part of the vessel which remained exposed when the hull sank. These men had been pinned in the ruins from sixteen to twenty-four hours. Most of them were unconscious from pain, and their rescuers lacked the assistance that

Chicago Labor Murder Case Will Go to the Grand Jury.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—William J. Boener, an organizer for Typographical Union No. 16, and Samuel Olsen, a union printer, were held to the grand jury today charged with instigating the murder of Rush V. Denon, a non-union printer, Jan. 16, 1911.

The men were held as the result of testimony of John Daly, a former pugilist, who said he had been hired by Boener and Olsen to "do up" Denon. He testified he had been given $50 and that he had employed Samuel Cassidy, a former organizer for the union, for $10 "to do the job."

All members of the clerks' union employed by the Illinois Central railroad are ordered to strike today by an order issued last night by J. J. Carrigan, president of the union.

While many union clerks in Southern cities struck last night, officers of the railroad said that they did not fear a general strike of employes, although the recent threatened strike of federated shop employes might be reviewed by way of sympathy.

President Markham of the Illinois Central said the strike of clerks thus far was of little consequence.

MILITIA MEN NO LONGER REGARDED AS TIN SOLDIERS

Importance of National Guard Now Recognized, Say Speakers.

Monumental Folly Not to Fortify Panama, Says Congressman.

The day of the "tin soldier" has passed. From the stage at which the National Guard was regarded as an organization "to march on Decoration day and the Fourth of July and be applauded by the ladies," as Congressman Miller expressed it, development has brought it to a point where it is in fact, and is so regarded by the public, a great factor in the nation's defense, a school for the instruction and training of citizen reserves in the science of warfare.

That was the attitude taken by speakers this morning at the second day's session of the annual meeting of the Minnesota National Guard association at the Commercial club. Col. Arthur W. Wright of Austin, Capt. Albert W. Pfaender of New Ulm, Congressman Miller and Representative John P. Lennon of Minneapolis, all referred to the derision with which "tin soldiers" was hurled at the National Guard in years past and the change that has come about in the development of the organization.

On account of the fact that no business session was held on board the Gopher yesterday afternoon as intended, the program was behind this morning and only the program as laid out for yesterday afternoon was carried out. In addition, Congressman Clarence B. Miller and Representative Lennon, who dropped into the meeting, were called upon and gave stirring talks in commendation of the aims of the National Guard.

At noon an adjournment was taken until 1 o'clock and the remainder of the program will be carried out today, with an automobile ride around the boulevard sandwiched between the two sessions this afternoon.

The meeting this morning decided to continue the Indoor Rifle association and added stimulus was given the work of that organization by the offer by Maj. Nyman of the governor's staff to donate a silver cup for competition on the indoor rifle ranges of the state. Maj. Lee made a strong plea for the continuation of the Rifle association and the commanding officers of the companies pledged themselves to have their commands take a greater interest in the work. The following officers of the Rifle association were elected: President, Capt. Krembs, First infantry; vice president, new inspector of small arms for Second regiment; secretary and treasurer, Capt. Caley of the Third infantry; executive officer, Capt. Clark.

The Two Johnsons.

Col. Arthur W. Wright of the Second infantry, who was down for a few remarks, took for his subject, "What Are We Going to Do With Johnson?" The Johnson referred to is Maj. Johnson of the Nineteenth infantry, U. S. A., who is detailed to service with the Minnesota National Guard. Col. Wright urged that the opportunity for obtaining Maj. Johnson's services in instructing officers in their duties on the field be grasped by every company and by the higher officers in the state. Maj. Johnson seconded Col. Johnson's plea and declared himself always ready to meet the officers and assist them.

Maj. Nicholas Nicholsen of Austin gave a short paper on "Battle Exercises," going into technical details in the giving and execution of orders.

Adjt. Gen. Fred B. Wood, who was unable to be at yesterday's session, was present this morning and talked briefly, his remarks being in the nature of announcements and instructions.

"National Guard Legislation," was the subject assigned to Capt. Albert Phaender of New Ulm, Democratic leader in the state house of representatives at the last session. Capt. Phaender took the occasion to defend the "late lamented legislature," or that part of it in which he was most concerned. He also pointed out that the National Guard had warm friends in the legislature, who obtained almost every piece of legislation desired.

Capt. Pfaender said:

"It is natural that one who was a member of the Minnesota legislature in the session of 1911 should approach the discussion of any subject connected with that body with a certain degree of reluctance. However, as one who is serving his second term in the house of representatives and at the same time has been an officer of the Minnesota National Guard for little short of ten years, I hope that credit will be given me in this body at least, for impartial views on the subject of the relation between these two organizations. I am informed of a time limit placed upon this paper, but if perchance I should run over that limit I beg of you to believe that this is done in a legislative and not a military capacity, for it has become well known since the last session of the legislature that the time pieces of legislators do not move with the same speed as those of ordinary mortals, at least I have not heard the last legislature charged with exceeding the speed limit. The fact is that to do justice to my subject I feel called upon to make some observations of a general nature pertaining to the legislature and to the National Guard of our state.

Much in Common.

"A member of the legislature and an officer of the National Guard have much in common. Both are the holders of elective offices and take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and the state of Minnesota and faithfully and impartially to discharge the duties of their respective offices. Both, after all is said and done, are making sacrifices in the honest belief that they are performing an act of patriotism and thereby bettering the conditions of the body politic. Both are the subject of adverse criticisms; a certain share of which must always be expected, some of which may be deserved, a great mass of which, however, is absolutely unjust and uncalled for.

"Let us take first the position of a legislator. While it is true that many instances of graft and wrong-doing have been uncovered in late years against men in public life, yet this does not furnish a sufficient reason for looking with suspicion on all public officials on account of the very fact of their assuming public office. At the present time it has almost come to this: that if a man who possesses the necessary qualifications, refuses to enter into the field of politics and become a public servant, he is looked upon by a part of the public as an undesirable citizen. On the other hand, if he does accept an office, no matter how pure his motives or how lofty his ideals may be, he is immediately set down by another class as a grafter and as having entered into official life for purely personal gain. There is as little reason for condemning an entire legislature on account of the action of some of its members, as there is for condemning an entire political party, an entire lodge, or a church, on account of the action of some who constitute a minority of their membership. And so it appears to me that in judging of the work of the last legislature, we should not look at those minor incidents that may have been to the discredit of some of its members, but to take an inventory of all the commendable things which its majority has done and also remember the bad things it might have done, but has left undone, and judge therefrom of its efficiency.

"Looking at the matter from this standpoint, I believe that the majority of the citizens of this state are satisfied that, with the exception of a few instances, the work of the last legislature was dominated by a desire to bring about better economical and social conditions, and that the very strife which existed, taken in the light of results accomplished, is a good indication of an inherent desire to act for the best interests of the state. I feel called upon to say in regard to the house of representatives especially, that in its passage of the Keefe bill, providing for the direct election of United States senators, as far as we can do so under the present state of our national Constitution; of the ratification of the income tax amendment; of an admittedly reasonable reapportionment bill; of an initiative and referendum bill, which, so far as my information goes, was called safe and sane by even such a prominent Progressive as Theodore Rosevelt; of a direct primary election bill for state officers; of a recall bill; of a measure increasing the limit of recovery in case of death by wrongful act to $7,500; of the so-called telephone bill; and of various temperance measures, it went to greater lengths along the lines of so-called progressive legislation than any similar body that has ever sat in our state capitol.

"If any one seriously contends that the body which approved these measures was dominated by a desire to serve the interest of the interests, his must be a peculiar interpretation of that phrase.

The National Guard.

"So far as the National Guard is concerned, he who enlists in its membership makes a sacrifice at this very enlistment which continues throughout his connection with it. Yet in spite of this there are those people who sneer at the National Guard; scout the idea that any good can be accomplished by it; apply to them such epithets as tin soldiers, and by oft-repeated statements get themselves to believe that most of its membership are in the guard for the purpose of pomp and show, without any serious underlying motive. It is true that there may be among the guard those who do not realize the full extent of their obligations and duties, but that is no reason for condemning the entire organization.

"And so on account of the similarity in interest there should be a bond of sympathy between the National Guard and the legislature. From the acquaintances which I enjoy among officers of the Guard, I am sure that they appreciate to its full extent; the difficulties that beset members of the legislature and that they will always be willing to hear the entire case before forming a judgment; and on the other hand, I believe, that the members of this organization are convinced by the actions of the last legislature that their wishes were fully and fairly considered, and that more legislation was passed by it in the interests of the National Guard than has ever been the case since the adoption of the militar" code.

"There was among the membership of the last session, Capt. Cook of Austin in the senate and Lieut. Lundeen of Minneapolis and myself in the house and while we are willing to have reflected upon us some credit for aiding what ever legislation was passed, still it should be declared and stated emphatically that the results which have been accomplished are due to the well directed efforts, the energy and perseverance of the executive committee of this organization, aided as it was by the various officers throughout the state.

"The conviction was forced upon me during the last two sessions that the object and needs of the National Guard are understood by new members of the legislature to but a small extent, and indicate, no doubht, a lack of information as well on the part of their constituents. To bring about the necessary information in regard to the conditions and the needs of the National Guard, a veritable campaign of education was necessary, which required no little effort, but when this was accomplished, it was gratifying to note how the members of the legislature responded, and how willing they were to support the guard whenever opportunity offered.

First Skirmish.

"The first skirmish occurred in the house of representatives on the bill of Representative Ribenack of Duluth, making an appropriation of $5,000 for the year ending July 31, 1911, and annually thereafter, for the maintenance and equipment of the naval militia. This bill was once killed, as the expression goes, but when its object was fully explained and understood, it was passed without any really serious opposition, due mostly to the efforts of Representative Lennon of Minneapolis, father of Capt. Lennon of the guard.

"By virtue of chapter 182 of the laws of 1911, cities and villages in this state are authorized by a majority vote of their council to modify the conditions upon which lands have been heretofore or may hereafter be deeded to the state of Minnesota. This applies especially to the encampment ground at Lake City, and the object thereof is well understood.

Respect for Uniform.

"Chapter 281 is aimed at preventing discrimination by innkeepers or at places of amusement against those in the uniform of the army and navy. This law was asked for especially on account of certain occurrences in the Twin Cities, in which members of the army in uniform were improperly debarred from public places; it is made possible of enforcement by providing a penalty of $100, which may be recovered by the one so discriminated against.

"The most important piece of legislation passed, relates to the construction of armories for the various companies of the guard. It provides for a state armory board, which is to oversee the matter in general. A company is required to deposit with the state treasurer at least $1,000 and to convey to the state of Minnesota by good deed an armory site, approved by the board, whereupon each year three companies, so complying shall be designated by the board to receive the sum of $10,000 from the state, and this, together with the amount of the deposit, is to be used in the construction of the respective armories. The important part of the law is that it makes an appropriation of $30,000, annually hereafter, until all military organizations that will show themselves thereto entitled, have received such appropriation. It is well known, I suppose, that under this law, six cities have been provided for.

"It may be interesting to learn that this bill was passed in the house in the very closing hours of the session, which certainly should indicate a goodly measure of confidence existing in the legislature towards the National Guard. I might add also that bill, at the request of Representative Lundeen and myself, was placed at the head of the special order, for the last night, by the committee having charge of it as a favor to the representatives of the guard.

"In those hours, Representative Lundeen and myself several times noticed Capt. Cook, the author of the bill in the senate, on the floor of the house, his attitude one of extreme dejection, all prepared, it seemed to us, to strew his offering of flowers upon the resting place of his pet legislative measure, a condition which was replaced at a later visit by a broad smile of satisfaction when the bill carried almost without opposition.

"There was also appropriated for the purpose of acquiring tentage the sum of $5,000. Numerous appropriations for members of the Guard injured while on duty were made the most important of which was that of $5,000 for Privato Pascke of Faribault injured in a sham battle at Lake City.

"The provision whereby the state gives to cities wherein companies of the Guard are stationed an amount equal to that which is appropriated by the respective cities for the support of the armory, was again put into the omnibus appropriation bill.

"Another important measure, Chapter 303, was also passed during the closing hours of the session and under suspension of the rules. This gives the sum of $10 per month to every quartermaster sergeant, who has performed the duties of his offices as appears by the certificate of his commander; payments to be made quarterly. While this is not a very great inducement for a quartermaster, yet it will undoubtedly help considerably in keeping men in those offices, who will properly care for state property, and every company commander will, no doubt, appreciate the additional interest thus guaranteed on the part of his quartermaster.

"Chapter 303 also contains a provision that 'No officer or enlisted man shall be held liable in either a civil or criminal suit for any act done under lawful orders and in the performance of his duties.' This was inserted to prevent, so far as possible an occurrence of the unfortunate case of Sergeant Manley of Texas, whose predicament has excited sympathy in National Guard circles throughout the country.

"Last, but not least, Chapter 303 also provides for a per diem allowence of $3 for officers of the guard while attending meetings such as this.

"It appears to me that with these laws passed the guard has arrived at a point where the substantive provisions relating to it are of such a character as to be sufficient for all cases that may arrise; that the only matter to be looked to hereafter is the maintaining of the proper annual appropriations, and there is no doubt whatever in my mind that when the information desired by the legislative committees is promptly and cheerfully given, and the entire officers and membership of the guard interest themselves in those measures which concern their welfare, and do their share of explaining, that the legislature of this state will at all times be found to respond willingly and fairly to all demands that may be put to them, and I also believe that the organization of the National Guard of this state will ask for only such provisions which are absolutely necessary under the existing conditions and which the legislature can well afford to grant.

"And in closing, permit me to say that it should be our hope that the cordial relations existing at the present time between the law-making body of the state and the organization of the National Guard may continue and be even more firmly cemented in the future and that the efficiency of the guard may be still increased, and thereby add to the well being of the state in general."

"Communication in the Field," was the subject assigned to Maj. Frank W. Matson of St. Paul. Maj. Matson's paper was also technical. One of his conclusions, drawn from his observations at the Texas maneuvers, was that the aeroplane will not be practical for work in which it will be necessary for it to go within rifle range of the enemy, but for carrying passengers and reconnoitering, it will be invaluable in future warfare.

Nations Are Arming.

The nations of the world are arming themselves and the nation which allows itself to fall back and become defenseless, will pay the price of its own folly, said Congressman Miller in addressing the officers.

The congressman gave a stirring talk. He declared that the National Guard is no longer the plaything of society, but it is an institution for the national welfare. The day of the citizen who left his plow and hastened to the battlefield is gone, he said, and an army of 3,000,000 untrained men would be worse than useless on a modern field of battle.

War is a scientific game now and the next great battle will be fought, in the opinion of theorists, in positions from which the enemies will not be able to see each other.

The United States must have a national army, he said, for a nation will prevent attack in proportion to its efficiency in repelling an attack. Some nations are in a military stage of development. They are looking for worlds to conquer and they will seize as their prey the nation which is least able to defend itself. A great standing army in the United States is an impossibility, he said. The people will not stand for it, but the alternative of having a well-trained force of citizen soldiers in the states is provided and the National Guard should be increased, given every federal aid and made a great force in reserve for emergencies.

Fortify Canal.

"It would be the most stupendous piece of folly in the history of the nation if we failed to fortify the Panama canal," declared the congressmcn. He said that the navy should be made as efficient as possible and the work of fortifying Gastanamo harbor in Cuba and Pearl harbor at Hawaii carried on. Then the Panama canal would be protected, fortified and available for the merging of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets in case of necessity.

The congressman pointed to the great record of the First Minnesota and other Minnesota regiments in the Civil war and declared that the Minnesota National Guard has a standard to maintain not surpassed by that of any state.

The congressman was followed by Representative Lennon, who has proved a staunch friend of the Minnesota National Guard in the legislature. The representative also paid a splendid tribute to the citizen soldiers and declared that every nation should be prepared to defend themselves. "The man who always greets his fellow men with a smile and is at the same time able to defend himself against attack, is respected and seldom has trouble, and I believe it is the same with nations," he said.

Representative Lennon drew forth a burst of applause by a tribute to the Minnesota Navala Militia. "I have heard it referred to as Duluth's toy navy, and its good work shames those who apply that term to it," he said.

Maj. George C. Lambert of the artillery gave an interesting paper on the federal pay bill, which is interesting the National Guard of all states. He explained its provisions and the manner in which it would operate to increase the efficiency of the National Guard.

The program for this afternoon's meetings is: Remarks, Col. Charles E. Johnson, Third Infantry; "Battle of the Yalu," Maj. Arthur Johnson, Nineteenth infantry, U. S. A.; remarks, Col. Erle D. Luce, First infantry; remarks, Commander Guy A. Eaton, M. N. M.

On the return from the automobile trip, the place for the next meeting will be selected and officers elected.

Weather: Probably showers tonight or Wednesday; warmer tonight; moderate winds, mostly easterly.

To Properly Treat Obstinate Wrinkles

"Particularly where wrinkles and furrows are long and deep, the massage devotee is apt to rub too hard and too frequently," says Dr. Limoges. "Such treatment loosens the skin, causes muscles to sag and aggravates the wrinkled condition—just the opposite result from what she seeks.

"Better than massage, or anything else, for the most obstinate wrinkles and crows' feet, as well as the finest lines, is a formula well known in France, which American ladies may readily avail themselves of, as you will have no difficulty procuring the constituents from your druggists. It is this: One ounce powdered saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathe the face, neck and hands in this daily. The effect is really marvelous, not only as to wrinkles, but also in case of double chin and baggy cheeks. The application is cooling, soothing, tending to relieve fatigue and insomnia."

Womanly Beauty Easily Attained

(From Ladies' Home Monthly)

"Plainness of features need no longer be a continual handicap in society or business. A simple and effective aid to the complexion can be easily made at home as follows: Dissolve two ounces of thelrose in one pint of warm water.

"Applied freely night and morning to the face, neck and hands, this lotion in a short time brings about a decided change for the better in the plainest complexion. It is truly wonderful in its effect on skins inclined to be dark, sallow and coarse.

"Thelrose — the rose of youth — softens and freshens the skin and helps Nature restore the natural and attractive tint given to all women in their young girlhood. It causes freckles and spots of all sorts to disappear and is absolutely harmless to the most delicate skin. Use thelrose lotion freely, and you will be delighted with results."

ASK COURT TO CONFIRM REPORT

Judge Page Morris Petitioned to Pass on Judge Edson's Findings.

A hearing is being held today before Judge Page Morris of the United States court in regard to the petition for the confirmation of the report made some time ago by Judge W. D. Edson, special master appointed by the court to hear the evidence in the case of Hansen E. Smith and others, against John D. Gunn and others, petitioners and Thomas Merritt, H. H. Phelps and others as respondents.

In the report Judge Edson relieves H. H. Phelps, who at the time H. E. Smith and James P. Smith, his brothers, who conducted the Merchants' bank of West Duluth, went through involuntary bankruptcy, was appointed trustee. Mr. Phelps later resigned, and L. A. Barnes was appointed in his place. Mr. Phelps then acted as counsel for Mr. Barnes, and it is claimed that at an auction sale of some of the securities of the defunct bank, Mr. Phelps advised Mr. Merritt and the other respondents to purchase a piece of land which has since proved to be valuable mineral land.

The petitioners later alleged that Mr. Phelps was connected with a fraudulent deal in this trancastion, and brought suit. Judge Edson heard the testimony and freed Mr. Phelps from any such accusation. The petitioners now ask that the report be confirmed by the court.

"Sanity in Corporation Regulation"

is the title of a sane and wise editorial article in Munsey's Magazine for October, 1911, which says:

"A short time ago, one of the two Public Service Commissions of New York was called to pass on issuing a charter to a railroad company to build a new line from Lake Erie to the Hudson River. The company wanted to build parallel to the New York Central, an average of twenty miles north of that system's four-track line across the state. It claimed that it would spend a hundred million dollars on its project, and that there was crying public necessity for the new service. The commission, having full power to do so, decided that the proposed road could not be built. * * *

"The commission, after careful investigation, found that there was not business in sight to earn returns on the investment in such a line. It held that the public interest would not be served by permitting money to be sunk in a hopeless enterprise. It intimated that an effort to hold up the New York Central and force it to buy out the new enterprise—as was done years ago with the West Shore—was not to the benefit of the community. There is, as we view it, the proper sphere of regulation. Investors should be protected against the practical certainty of loss. The public should be protected against the necessity of having railroad rates increased in order to pay returns on unwise investments.

"The New York commission's hands will be stronger for its courageous stand in this case. It has protected the New York Central. Now, when some town in New York comes along demanding better service, the commission can safely say to the railroad company:

"'We saved you from the necessity of meeting unreasonable competition; we protected your investment. Now it is up to you to give the public adequate service. You are ordered to increase the service to X., and will be required to build a branch to Y.'

"And the New York Central, knowing that it is going to have a fair chance in a fair fight; that public policy LOOKS TO CONSERVATION, NOT TO CONFISCATION; that its investment is expected to earn a reasonable return, will be disposed to stretch a point in order to satisfy a public that extends such treatment.

"There are two sides to this question of regulation, as the New York commission has shown."

Right now the City Council of Duluth has ample authority and power to decide whether the wisest public policy for this City looks to CONSERVATION, or to CONFISCATION. The City Charter provides for the complete regulation of all public utilities in Duluth, including electricity for light and power.

There is not enough business in Duluth for two electric lighting systems. A municipal electric plant, which cannot be built without sinking hundreds of thousands of dollars in a hopeless enterprise, increasing enormously the City debt, and making taxes soar higher every year, can only bring unreasonable and wasteful competition with the Duluth-Edison Electric Company.

A new City-lighting contract with this company means electric light for everybody at lower prices than a municipal plant could possibly furnish it, means street lights at the lowest price in America, means a SAVING OF $30,000 A YEAR for the private consumers of electricity.

If YOU believe in a policy of CONSERVATION, rather than of CONFISCATION, let your alderman know it; hold up his hands, and nelp him to decide this question right.

Read the next Lighting Talk in next Thursday's Herald.

WEST END

RENEW FIGHT FOR BRANCH

West End Again Campaigning for Better Postal Service.

A branch postoffice for the West end will be asked for by the business men in the western portion of the city in spite of the fact that the project has been twice turned down previously.

A petition is now being circulated among the people. As soon as a few more signatures are secured the papers will be forwarded to the postal authorities through Postmaster A. P. Cook.

The only reason given for the turning down of the proposition the last time that it was up to the authorities, was that to economize.

The business men declare that the West end has outgrown the service afforded by up-town carriers and is entitled to more metropolitan conveniences in the matter of mail delivery.

This is an investigation, not a trial."

Senator Stephenson will be represented in all probability by three attorneys.

The inquiry will begin Monday next. Senator Heyburn will spend the remainder of the week reviewing the evidence given in the previous inquiry, and in determining the order in which witesses will be called.

A second crop of strawberries is reported from the country surrounding Duluth.

H. A. Higbee, who owns a homestead in section 1, 48-18, which is about one and one-half miles east of Iverson on the Northern Pacific, was in Duluth this morning showing some ripe wild strawberries, which he stated were part of a second crop.

"They are quite plentiful in the vicinity of Iverson," said Mr. Higbee. "I hope to have shortcake from them before the week is over, and will if the frosts are not too heavy in the next day or two."

WOMAN ARRESTED BY IMMIGRATION OFFICER.

On the charge of being 'n this country illegally, Rosa Scozzafavo, alias Sezzafara, ailsa Gigolotti, an Italian woman 40 years old, is under arrest by the United States immigration service, at Hibbing and in due course of proceedings she will be deported to her native land.

Rosa came to this country in July 1904, leaving her husband and settled in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., with one Domenclo Gigolotti, where they conducted a boarding house, and where, it is alleged, she had lived an immoral life with the boarders.

After living with Domenclo Gigolotti for about two years, she became tired of him and "eloped" with Gigolotti's nephew, Antonlo Gigolotti, going to Hibbing, Minn., where they settled down and opened a boarding house. Here they pursued the even tenor of their way until the immigration inspector swooped down on them armed with a warrant for Rosa's arrest, made out by the secretary of commerce and labor at Washington.

The elder Gigolotti being left by Rosa, deemed it not well for a man to be alone, whereupon he is claimed to have imported another woman from Italy, named Marie Blamonte, with whom he is claimed to have lived for the past year, and who gave birth to a child two weeks ago. Gigolotti is now under arrest charged with importing a woman for immoral purposes.

Rosa Gigolotti is now meditating in jail at Hibbing, pending the giving of a $1,000 bond for her appearance if ordered back to Sunny Italy.

WOULD BLOW UP MINE.

Woman Witness Testifies About Conspiracy Against Homestake.

Deadwood, S. D., Sept. 26.—Testifying that her husband and John W. Butler, a Fourth cavalry musician, were in a plot to get her to blow up the Homestake mine, and that they had been so employed by the Western Federation of Miners, Mrs. Robert Emmet O'Grady, wife of one of the defendants, yesterday sprang a sensation in the Butler trial.

In the circuit court Butler and O'Grady are charged with attempting to blow up a Homestake mill in April, 1910. Mrs. O'Grady declared that Butler came to them in Fall River, Colo., saying he was a representative of the Federation and that O'Grady was wanted to blow up the mine. She said O'Grady told her he was to be paid $1,000 for the job.

Montana Death Rate Increases.

The death rate for the entire state rose from 9.67 last year to 10.69 per 1,000 this year.

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair To Its Natural Color.

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

LOTS OF SOFT, WAVY, FLUFFY HAIR AND NO MORE DANDRUFF

Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine and just try this—stops falling hair at once.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—anytime—will surely save your hair. Ten minutes after applying all the dandruff will disappear, all itching will cease and there will be no more falling hair. Millions of men and women use Knowlton's Danderine and they never have danduff, itchy scalp or falling hair—they know that it keeps the scalp clean and healthy and makes the hair grow heavy, long and beautiful.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

JURORS VALUE AFFECTIONS OF FRANK HIMES AT $1,500

Find That Mrs. Chapman Lured Himes From His Wife.

A sealed verdict returned this morning in district court gives Mrs. Julia Himes a verdict of $1,500 damages against Mrs. Nellie Chapman, whom the plaintiff claimed alienated the affections of her husband.

Frank J. Himes was the man in the case. Mrs. Himes claimed that he had been living with Mrs. Chapman at her home in West Duluth for some time. Mrs. Chapman admitted that Himes stayed at her house, but claimed that he was but a boarder there.

The jury evidently believed the story as told by Mrs. Himes, who stated that for several months past she has been working as a cook at one of the local restaurants, her husband refusing to support her.

The case has been on trial for several days before Judge H. B. Dibell and a jury in the district court. Mrs. Himes sued for $10,000. A. E. McManus represented the plaintiff in the action and C. O. Baldwin appeared for the defendant.

The "affinity" case attracted a lot of attention and yesterday the testimony offered drew a big gallery of interested spectators, most of whom live at West Duluth.

Mrs. Chapman claimed that the entire affair was "cooked up" by a jealous neighbor who was anxious to make as much trouble for her as possible.

MRS. NELLIE CHAPMAN.

She stated that the first time she met Frank Himes was when he was working for a monument concern. She said that he called on her to ask an order for a stone to mark her husband's grave.

Himes is said to have characterized his alleged affinity as a "dream" and "very classy." In making his final address to the jury, Attorney Baldwin said that the plaintiff could not hope to recover more than three-quarters of a cent as damages, for that was all Himes is worth.

Mrs. Himes claimed that while she was out of the city on a visit several years ago, her husband was enticed away from his home by Mrs. Chapman. Mrs. Chapman denied that she had lured him away, saying he came voluntarily to her home to board.

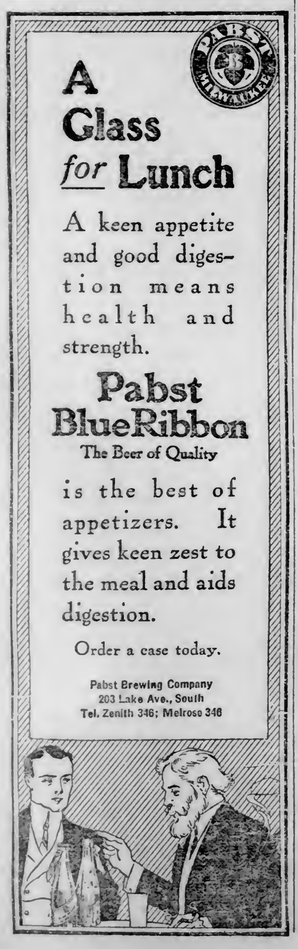
Subjects Pertaining to Business to Be Discussed at Bismarck.

Bismarck, N. D., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Important telephone meetings will take place here tomorrow at the time of the opening of the annual session of the North Dakota Independent Telephone association, an organization comprising a membership of over 400.

The chief object of the meeting is to promote a generally more uniform condition as regards the telephone service. Co-operation is the spirit of the association and its work, and in the program that has been prepared, special stress has been paid to that feature.

John Carmody is president of the association and he will call it to order tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Among the speakers will be Governor John Burke, Attorney Tracy Bangs of Grand Forks, V. B. Noble of Minot and D. R. Middleton of Glendive, Mont.



Among the topics which will be given general discussion are the new public utilities law and the law providing for examination of corporations by the state examiner, the general good of the association, maintenance of membership, etc.

On the evening of the second day there will be a banquet.

Row Resulted and Negro Is Said to Have Used Steel.

Lakota, N. D., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.) — The charge of assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill has been lodged against Freeman Alexander, colored, and he was bound over to the district court. His hearing was held in a local court with Hallie B. Langhoff as the complaining witness. Langhoff says he suffered several wounds at the hands of the colored man when he charged the negro with cheating at cards, three aces in the negro's hands being responsible for the accusation.

FATHER FINDS BODY

Of Negro Who Tried to Kill His Daughter.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 26.—Ed Robinette, the negro who two months ago attempted to murder Miss Estella Price, daughter of the keeper of the Cargill and McMillan country estate between here and West Salem, and who escaped after shooting himse'f, was found dead Sunday within 600 yards of the house where the shooting took place.

The body was badly decomposed and Robinette had evidently fallen there as he ran from the farm yard. A high growth of weeds which covered the spot at the time is believed to account for failure of officers to find him before.

The body was found by the father of the girl who has since recovered from her wounds.

National Mental Debauch.

"Mental intemperance is an even greater evil. The nation, it seems to me, is just recovering from a great mental debauch. Extravagance in speech and writing has been the rule. Reckless denunciation of patriotic and conscientious men, yellowness in magazines and other publications have disgraced our era.

"Fortunately we are now entering a calmer and safer period. During this time the typical Nebraskan has pursued his way unaffected by this period of mouthy madness. To be sure, we too have had our troubles; but in the main our great newspapers have been calm; our ablest leaders have been sane, even when most 'progressive,' and have refrained from the arts of the demagogue.

Salvation of Colleges.

"The self-supporting student, however, is the salvation of our Western institutions, both educationally and morally; and those unspeakable conditions which Mr. Crane described as existing in some institutions, overdrawn though I think they are, are largely due to the presence of the idle rich, whose influence everywhere is destructive to scholarship, to manhood, and to womanhood."

Lieut. Aubert, son of Vice Admiral Aubert, commander of the fleet, described the discipline on board the Liberte. The lieutenant, who is serving on another warship, was sent with a party to help extinguish the fire on the Liberte. He found Senior Lieut. Garnier in command of the imperiled battleship in the absence of Capt. Jaures, and the second officer in command, both of whom were ashore.

"Attend to Your Orders."

A petty officer approached Lieut. Garnier and said:

"The fire, sir, is near the magazine. Isn't there danger of an explosion?"

"Attend to your orders," the officer replied.

Capt. Jaures, who was in command of the Liberte, visited the wreck this morning and then spent the rest of the day at the bedsides of the wounded sailors. A number of these continue unconscious from a cerebral disturbance, due probably to the fumes of burning powder which they inhaled. They may never recover their senses.

land laws of the United States applicable to Alaska did not prohibit the acquisition of coal lands by the means charged in the indictment.

Hyde and Schneider Case.

The court has advanced also the appeal of Frederick A. Hyde and Joost H. Schneider from the conviction in the District of Columbia courts on charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States out of large tracts of public lands along the Pacific slope. Hyde was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 and Schneider to imprisonment for one year and two months and a fine of $1,000.

Another land case, in which the government, however, does not set forth any attempt to defraud it, concerns the attempted transfer by members of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians of their allotted lands in Oklahoma to investors.

The government will urge its alleged right to bring a suit for the cancellation of these reputed deeds. In all 25,000 transfers are at stake and the title to about 5,000,000 acres of land is involved.

Grief for Madison.

In his address Mr. Taft referred at some length to the late Congressman E. H. Madison, who died suddenly a week ago. It was at Mr. Madison's invitation that the president came to Hutchinson.

"His death was a great shock to me,' said the president. 'I had not known him long, but I knew him well enough to know the strong qualities of his mind and heart, his judicial instinct, his intense desire to be fair, and his clear perceptions of the law as a jurist, and his level-headedness as a legislator.

"I remember a speech which he made in congress on the subject of excepting lawless combinations of workingmen from the application of an appropriation. It was a noble, clear exposition of the necessity for making all persons equal before the law and an exhibition of courage and indifference to consequences in the support of a righteous judgment. His speech marked him as one of the coming men of congress."

"Child of an Issue."

Mr. Taft sketched the history of Kansas, saying the state was the child of an issue. He dwelt upon the struggles which preceded the admission of Kansas into the Union as a free state, and on the long fight between the slavery and anti-slavery forces.

Challenged Bryan Again.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 26.—The crowds that met President Taft yesterday during his tour of Kansas were the largest the president has faced during his travels. The day was one of intense heat, and the president often spoke with the unclouded sun focused directly upon him and with the perspiration streaming down his cheeks. At Cherryvale, Kan., President Taft again challenged W. J. Bryan to produce an example of restraint of trade which would not come within the purview of the supreme court's Standard Oil and American Tobacco decisions, in a short address from the rear platform of his car today.

The president characterized the comments of Mr. Bryan and "other gentlemen" on the two decisions as "glib," and declared that if they could produce one instance of restraint of trade which would not be included in the meaning of those decisions he would yield to the criticism. The trust problem, the president said, through this decision is nearing a solution.

Praised Supreme Court.

The supreme court, he added, is the safeguard of the nation.

"And it is a safeguard," said the president. "It's the greatest instrument of the administration of justice that man ever invented and on it must rest the hope of future government in the preservation of the independence of all branches and the enforcement of the law."

During the day Mr. Taft confined himself largely to the vetoes of the woolen list, free list and cotton tariff bills. Aside from his tariff speeches he spoke briefly on marriage and divorce, on the prosperity of the people of Kansas, and on the trusts. Senator Curtis, Representative Campbell and Former Representative Scott were with him during the day. At Humboldt Mr. Scott himself was separated the producers too far from the consumers. Until there are enough persons on the farms to till the soil, so it will produce enough to supply the demands of the consumers in the cities, the high prices will continue.

"I don't look for this condition to come soon."

"The Farmer's Wife."

Mrs. Harriet Wallace Ashby, talking on "The Farmer's Wife," said:

"Any movement for the promotion of the farmer's interest must, if it is to be a success, receive the support not only of the farmer, but also of the farmer's wife. The first problem of the farmer is how to increase farm products through better farming; the first problem of the farmer's wife is how to improve the condition of the farm home. The mistake of the husband in his sphere during one season may be corrected in the next; the mistakes made by the wife in rearing her children are never entirely corrected.

"Believing, as I do, that the great problems of farm life as they pertain to us wives and mothers can only be solved through co-operation and organized effort, I wish to advocate the union of farmers' wives in country women's clubs with the object of breaking up the monotonous routine of farm life and for the discussion of anything and everything pertaining to the betterment of farm home.

"Salvation of the Family."

"The salvation of the families depends on the mother; she is the one who does so much to make for the happiness, health and long life of her family. The health of any mother is liable to fail under her responsibilities; the farm mother is especially subject to physical breakdown, for she not only bears the responsibility of rearing her family, but she also shares the anxieties of her husband if, as should always be the case, the farmer's wife is his business partner and assistant farm manager.

"The farmer's wife is a most important factor in the conservation of the soil, for she will in a large measure determine the efficiency of the farmer. Then, too, the attitude of the wife towards the farm, and her success in making a happy farm home largely determines whether or not the country by remains on the farm."

Farmers and Railroads.

That the future of the United States as an agricultural country depends upon a closer relation between the farmer and the railroads was the gist of an address by Herbert Quick of Madison, Wis., editor of a farm journal. Mr. Quick said that while the relations between the farmers and the railroads are not always amicable, it was the farmers who really built the railroads and were then "neatly beaten out of their interests."

Mr. Quick placed emphasis upon freight rates as an index not only to the farmer's profit but to the general cost of living. He charged that railways in fixing rates often connived with great population centers to the detriment of smaller cities and the country in general.

Examples of Co-operation.

Mr. Quick enumerated several instances of co-operation between farmer and railway, of the introduction of improved breeds of live stock along the lines of his system by President Hill of the Great Northern, of the maintaining of demonstration farms on Long Island by the Pennsylvania, and of the running of educational trains for the purpose of bringing agricultural science into touch with the farmers. Railway aid to agriculture, he said, has grown to be a fashion.

"But all these fine things," he continued, "have been done and are still being done with an eye single to tonnage. We may trust the enlightened selfishness of good business to push this sort of activity to the limit of its profit. But in the great task of conservation do the railways owe any duty to the farms beyond what they are now performing? This phase has yet to be worked out.

"The state of Iowa is Chicago's back field," he said, "and Iowa's population is shrinking. This fact alone is enough to condemn the rate system which permits it."

Taft's Talk on Soil.

President Taft's speech to the Conservation congress was devoted almost exclusively to the conservation of the soil. The president explained that at last year's session of the congress in St. Paul he had expressed at length his views with regard to other phases of conservation, and added that since congress so far had not deemed it necessary to pass conservation legislation, he would confine himself to the one branch of the subject.

Mr. Taft reviewed the history of farming and farm production in this country for the last fifty-six years and declared that while he does not agree with those men who say that in fifty years the United States will be unable to feed its own people, there is need for intelligent understanding among the farmers of the trend of events.

The president said that if the population of the nation increases proportionately in the next fifty years, the United States will have double the number of its people.

Raise More Per Acre.

"It is necessary then," he said, "that not only our acreage but our production per acre must increase proportionately so that our people may be fed. We must realize that the best land and the easiest land to cultivate has been taken up and cultivated, and that the additions to improved lands and to total acreage in the future must be of land of far less value to agriculture.

"The increased price of production, too, must be steady each year, and each year an increase is mere difficult. Still even in the face of these facts, there is no occasion for discouragement. We are going to remain a self-supporting country and raise food enough here to feed our people."

Mr. Taft said that the states should take up the question of increasing the production of farms.

Likes Collaboration Plan.

Speaking of a proposal to organize a force of 3,000 men to be paid partly by the counties, partly by the states, and partly by the federal government, which shall conduct experiments in every county for the education of the farmer, the president said that while generally he was opposed to such collaboration, he could not conceive of a wiser plan for this particular purpose.

"I think our future is hopeful. I do not share the pessimistic views, of many gentlemen whose statistics differ somewhat from mine and who look forward to a strong probability of failure of self-support in food within the lives of persons now living. We may look forward to the middle of this century when 200,000,000 people shall swear fealty."

the speakers scheduled for today, sent a telegram this morning announcing he would be unable to attend. James R. Garfield, former secretary of the interior, also notified the officers that he would not be here.

Politics Is Lacking.

A peculiar feature of the congress this year is the absence of political activity relative to the selection of officers. J. B. White of Kansas City seems to be the leading candidate for president. Many delegates have declared their intention of voting for him and it is probable he will be chosen without opposition. President Henry Wallace of Des Moines has announced he would not be a candidate for re-election. It is unlikely that there will be contests for the other offices.

Discussing the high cost of living in this country, Dr. Wallace said today that the food prices would never go lower. He said there might be periodic reductions due to reasons controlled by individuals and organizations, but that the lowest permanent level in the price of food had been reached.

Science and Production.

"The application of science to production has caused all the present industrial evils in the United States," Mr. Wallace said. "Science has sepa-confronted with a statement by a witness of the shooting.

Mrs. Patterson filed suit for divorce in the Denver courts on Sept. 1, 1911, charging cruelty. On Sept. 20, Patterson brought suit in Chicago against Emil W. Strauss, millionaire head of Strauss-Elsenrad & Co., asking $25,000 damages for alienation of his wife's affections. Patterson charged that four months after his marriage, on Oct. 1, 1908, Strauss and Mrs. Patterson eloped and spent several months traveling in Europe.

Called at Sanitarium.

Seven months ago, accompanied by his wife, Patterson came to Denver on account of his health. Last Friday Patterson, on account of failing health, entered a sanitarium for consumptives. Yesterday morning Mrs. Patterson called at the sanitarium and the couple left for a walk. That the pair engaged in a heated argument just prior to the shooting, is declared by a person who claimed to have watched them.

Patterson's mother is principal in one of Chicago's public schools, and a brother, Harry S. Patterson, is junior member of the law firm of Shepard, McCormick & Thomson, counsel for the International Harvester company.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER

RAIN

The beautiful fall weather continues, and it is more than welcome to Duluthians after the long series of wet, cold days.

Mr. Weather man looks for warmer weather tonight and tomorrow with possible showers. A year ago today it was fair.

The sun rose this morning at 6 o'clock and will set at 5:58, making 11 hours and 58 minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Rains fell during Monday or last night over north Atlantic states, the Ohio valley, Missouri, southern Louisiana, eastern Texas, Nebraska, Colorado and Oregon. The high pressure overlying the Lake region has caused cooler weather over most of that district, the upper Mississippi valley and New England. Light to heavy frosts occurred last night over Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The low pressure over Saskatchewan is causing a rise in temperature throughout the Rocky Mountain region and the Northwest. This increase in warmth will probably reach the Head of the Lakes tonight."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Sept. 26—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Upper Michigan: Fair tonight, followed by increasing cloudiness and probably showers Wednesday forenoon or night; rising temperature; frost tonight.

Wisconsin: Generally fair tonight and Wednesday; rising temperature Wednesday and in west and north portions tonight.

Minnesota: Unsettled, with probably showers tonight or Wednesday, warmer tonight and in south portion Wednesday.

Iowa: Unsettled with probably showers tonight or Wednesday; rising temperature.

North Dakota: Probably cloudy and unsettled tonight and Wednesday; warmer in east portion tonight.

Vigorous at 83

It is most gratifying to receive such letters as one here reproduced from Mr. L. F. Andrews, who is eighty-three years of age and still a hale, hearty man, full of vigor and in possession of all his faculties.

Mr. Andrews comes of good old New England stock. He was the first man to engage in newspaper correspondence work and the first to send a news message over the first telegraph wire ever strung into Des Moines, Ia., which is now his home:

"Allow me to say that I have been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for some time as a tonic stimulant, and relief to the exhaustion and debility consequent of my age (83) and find it palatable, satisfactory in therapeutic effect and free from the injurious by-products found in most, if not all other whiskies. I must say it is gratifying to obtain a preparation reliable and conforming to the declaration of its purity attached to each bottle."—L. F. Andrews, 834 W. 5th St., Des Moines, Ia.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Many men and women who have passed the fourscore mark tell the same story as Mr. Andrews about what Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done toward renewing their youth and keeping them vigorous, hale and hearty and in possession of all their faculties. As a leading doctor says, the secret of the whole thing is that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, if taken as prescribed, assists in driving out all disease germs, invigorates the brain, enriches the blood, quickens the circulation, brings restful sleep and prevents decay and old age.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It is an absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold IN SEALED BOTTLES ONLY—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00 a large bottle. Write Medical Department, The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y., for doctor's advice and an illustrated medical booklet, containing testimonials and rules for health, both sent free.

HOLIEST DAY OF THE YEAR

Jewish People Will Observe Day of Atonment, Sunday.

Will Abstain From All Food From Sundown to Sundown.

Several Atonement day services will be held at Temple Emanuel next Sunday. The morning service will be held at 10:15, an afternoon service at 2:15, a memorial service at 3:15 and a concluding afternoon service at 4:15. An evening service will be held at 7:30.

Rabbi Lefkovits will speak at all the services.

When the first stars appear in the heavens Sunday evening, Oct. 1, they will usher in the day holiest to the Jew in his entire religious calendar. From that hour until the evening of the following day, Oct. 2, the devout Israelite will give himself entirely to God, and to the purifying of his soul by repentance. It will be a day spent by him in meditation and prayer, with no thought of the world, its profits or pleasures. It is the great White Fast, when, abstaining from all food, from sundown to sundown, the people of Israel 'afflict their souls' for the sins of the past year.

"The holy day is mentioned in the Bible in a number of places; Leviticus xvi describes the elaborate priestly ceremonial of atonement; ibid xxiii, 26-32, it appears in the list of festivals where the 'affliction of the soul' (fasting) is ordained; ibid xxv, 9, announces that on the day of atonement, each fiftieth year, the trumpet sound shall usher in the jubilee year; while Numbers, xxix, 7-11, describes the sacrifices of this sacred day. From these references and later accounts in the Talmud one can get a picture of this day of awe as it was celebrated in Biblical times. The holy day on the tenth day of Tishri was observed by abstention from food and drink and by an elaborate ceremonial in which the high priest was the central figure. He besought forgiveness for his own sins and those of his own household, then for those of the wider household of priests, then for all the people. Of two goats, he slaughtered one as a sacrifice 'for the Lord' and set the other aside 'for Azazel.' The blood of the sacrifices he sprinkled upon the curtain of the holy of holies, to purify it from the sins of the people.

"From this Biblical ceremonial which throughout seeks for forgiveness of the community as a whole, the Day of Atonement has been somewhat changed in Rabbinic Judaism and in the modern service and emphasizes also repentance and personal prayer for the forgiveness of each individual sinning soul. It completes the penitential period of ten days that had begun with the New Year's day.

"The celebration of the Day of Atonement begins in the synagog with the evening service, called Kol Nidre from its opening formula, which refers to vows concerning the individual and his conscience. With its strongly marked melodies and songs, this service assumed in the course of time a very impressive character. Throughout the following day a continuous series of services is held, which toward the middle of the afternoon is heightened in impressiveness by a most solemn commemorative service for the dead. This is followed by the Nellah or closing service in which the main ideas of the day are especially emphasized; repentance conditioning forgiveness and God's sealing the decree of man for the ensuing year. The service ends with a solemn invocation of God's name, the Shema and the seven-fold exclamation, 'The Lord, He is God.' As a signal of the close of the sacred day, the trumpet (shofar) is blown once, and the devout worshipper turns homeward from God's house with the assurance that in reward for his true and sincere repentance the sins of the past have been forgiven."

EXTEND MOVEMENT TO NEARBY CITIES.

Duluth men may carry the Men and Religion Forward Movement into nearby cities. It is planned to send representative speakers to the towns near Duluth and by a series of meetings interest the men of other communities in the movement.

The committee of 100 met last night at Y. M. C. A. and this matter was talked over. Nothing definite was decided upon, but most of those present were heartily in favor of such a move.

If the present plans are carried out, meetings will be held at range towns by men interested in the movement in Duluth. The smaller towns and villages west of the city will not be overlooked.

The movement is well under way in Duluth, it is thought, and it is planned to enlist the nearby towns and villages that Duluth may become the center of a great district where men are prime movers in the affairs of the church.

LET CONTRACT FOR DRILLING

Iron Mountain Company Will Try to Learn Extent of Ore Body.

For the purpose of proving the extent of the ore body discovered on the property of the Iron Mountain Mining company on the Cuyuna range, the property will be diamond drilled.

The company has ten churn drill holes bottomed in ore, but the contract for the first diamond drilling on the property was let yesterday by the secretary, D. O. O'Brien, who has just returned from Crosby. The Bamberg Exploration company will do 2,500 feet of diamond drilling on the property, which it is believed, will be sufficient to show the extent of the ore body found.

In the party that went to Crosby to look over the property were G. A. Rydberg, the president; D. O. O'Brien, the secretary; and O. G. Brown of Detroit.

WICHITA RECALLS GRAHAM AND LEACH

Mayor and One Commissioner Superseded By Other Men.

Wichita, Kan., Sept. 26.—Mayor J. H. Graham and Commissioner E. M. Leach were recalled by the voters of Wichita at a special local election held yesterday. Commissioner R. B. Campbell, against whom the recall also was directed, was re-elected by a majority of 38 votes.

Dr. W. W. Minick was the candidate for mayor, polling 1,885 more votes than Graham. J. H. Harts defeated Commissioner Leach by 1,300. The Socialistic candidates polled a very small vote.

One of the charges on which the recall was based was the policy of the administration in contemplating the purchase of a privately owned waterworks plant for Wichita, instead of establishing a new water system. Allegations also were made of the neglect of the enforcement of the prohibition law.

BARTENDERS ELECT OFFICERS FOR YEAR.

The Bartenders' International union, local No. 575, held its annual election of officers last night at Owls' hall. The installation ceremonies will be held next Sunday evening.

CLAIM CHICAGO POLICE HELPED THE GAMBLERS.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The civil service commission of Chicago has formally begun its probe into alleged collusion between the police and gambling interests, with the opening of the trial of Policeman Charles J. McClellan, who is charged with permitting gambling in the vicinity of the American League baseball park at the Gotch-Hackenschmidt wrestling bout. A motion to quash the charges was made by Senator Samuel A. Ettelson, attorney for McClellan, on the plea that there is no specific charge against the policeman. It was over-ruled by the court.

The first witness for the prosecution, John L. Spellman, a reporter for a morning paper, told of seeing the gambling games in the street near the ball park, and asserted that he had seen McClellan drive boys away from the tables to make room for players.

Lieut. William W. Walsh also will be placed on trial on similar charges.

Beaupre Presents Letters.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Arthur M. Beaupre yesterday presented his letters of recall as American minister to Holland. He will relieve Minister John B. Jackson at Havana, about Nov. 1. Mr. Jackson goes to the Balkan states as minister.

WICKERSHAM SPEAKS OUT

Says Big Business Will Not Be Attacked Unless Necessary

Makes Statement Regarding Rumor of More Trust Suits.

New York, Sept. 26.—Attorney General Wickersham, in response to many inquiries regarding the possible prosecution of the United States Steel corporation, has made the following statement:

"It has been the consistent policy of the department not to state in advance of actual proceedings that action against any particular party was in contemplation. There are many reasons why this is the proper position to maintain. In the first place, until investigation is complete, it is not known whether or not a case of violation of law exists; and, in the second place, the character of the proceedings cannot be determined until then, and if the facts shall require criminal proceedings to be resorted to, ordinary prudence would demand that publicity be not given to that fact until the indictments are found.

Investigation First.

"The purpose and duty of the department of justice with respect to the enforcement of the Sherman law against large combinations which are formed or exist in undue restraint of interstate commerce, or which are attempting to monopolize, have been declared a number of times by the president and the attorney general. The carrying out of the purpose requires a careful investigation of every one of the combinations whose size, composition and control of the particular business in which they are engaged would give rise to a presumption that it was existing in contravention of the anti-trust law.

"It should go without saying, a great combination of corporations under a centralized control combining the trades of the country in an important industry, would not escape the study and consideration of the department. Whether or not the examination would result in a proceeding to compel a distintegration of the combination into a number of separate, disconnected parts, could not be determined until such study and examination is completed. Each case stands on its own footing and depends on its own particular facts.

Might Not Await Suit.

"A conclusion on the part of the department to bring suit against a particular combination would not, of course, prevent it from disputing the government's contention and defending the suit. Or if, in anticipation of action by the government, those in control of such a combination should work out a plan of separation to avoid illegal conditions, the department would give very careful study to the plan so as to avoid hostile action if possible.

"Personally, I should much prefer that business interests should themselves so readjust their organizations as to remove all possible criticism concerning their legality, than that the department of justice should have to conduct legal proceedings to compel such readjustment.

"It cannot be too positively stated that the department is not inaugurating a campaign against the business interests of the country or an indiscriminate attack on all large, prosperous concerns. On the contrary, the care and caution with which the law officers of the government are proceeding to the examination of each case, should be a guarantee to the country that the department is proposing to enforce the law with care, not to unnecessarily injure any interests."

"KIMMEL" IS SICK AND "BROKE"

Will Go to Chicago for Medical Treatment—"Mother" Not Convinced.

Niles, Mich., Sept. 26.—Weakened by his fight to establish his identity, "George A. Kimmel" has made preparations to go to Chicago for medical treatment. He practically is penniless, but several of the wealthy citizens of Niles who have accepted him as Kimmel have offered him money.

"Kimmel" refuses to be interviewed further.

Mrs. Estella Kimmel, whom he claims as his mother, said that she would not say finally whether the man is her son until her daughter, Mrs. Edna Bonslett, and her brother, Charles A. Johnson, who live in Chicago, have met him. Illness has prevented Mrs. Bonslett from coming to Niles.

The defects which Mrs. Kimmel found in the man's claim on her as mother were:

His hands are smaller than were those of her son, and he has not a particularly crooked thumb, which was noticeable in her son; he is not as tall as was her son; his facial expression is different and his chin does not protrude as much; his eyes are gray, whereas her son's were dark brown; his hand-writing does not at all resemble that of her son.

Despite this, "Kimmel" has related facts about the early family history which Mrs. Kimmel said only puzzled her. A number of old residents of Niles appeared before "Kimmel." Some of these he called by name while others he could not recognize.

Failure to recognize persons he is supposed to have known years ago, after he had affectionately greeted an old white mare which he used to drive when on a farm at Berrien Springs, Mich., left that village as hopelessly divided as is Niles over the genuineness of "Kimmel's" claims to identity.

On his return here, "Kimmel" received many callers at the Fox home. Of these Fred Schmidt, a business man, was turned from a skeptic to an ardent 'Kimmelite.' They belonged to a secret club years ago, and in greeting the man here Schmidt used a code, but purposely began wrong. He was promptly corrected by the claimant to Kimmel's identity, and left the house proclaiming his conversion.

SEE PICTURE HOLDUP; BOYS TURN BANDITS.

Elgin, Ill., Sept. 26.—Inspired by a holdup scene in a moving picture show they had visited, two 10-year-old boys obtained revolvers, went to a lonely field and held up Annie Groneman, 12 years old. The boys took a quantity of silver and several packages of groceries from their victim.

Storrow Gives Bail.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 26.—James J. Storrow, a heavy stockholder in the United Shoe Machinery company and a former director, who was indicted with five other officials by the federal grand jury last week, has furnished $10,000 bail in the United States circuit court. Mr. Storrow was not asked to plead to the indictments, charging a violation of the anti-trust law.

MOTHER SEEKING HER OWN CHILD

Becomes Reconciled to Husband and Asks Court to Restore Offspring.

Devils Lake, N. D., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the mother on the one hand and with a pastor and his wife on the other both fighting for the possession of a 4-year-old child, and with the sheriff at present in custody of the little one, an action that is unusual in many features has been taken under advisement by Judge Cowan.

Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Pitman of Starkweather some time ago were given the custody of the child by its father, who had had differences with his wife which brought on separation. Lately they had become reconciled and Mrs. Houff, the mother, went to the Pitman residence in company with the sheriff and secured possession of the child. This was followed by the prosecution of the mother on the charge of kidnaping her own child, but that action was dropped and the matter was sent into the courts to determine the legal right of the mother to retain custody of her child.

She claims that she is soon to return to her husband, who now lives in Virginia, and that she wants to take the little one with her. Rev. and Mrs. Pitman contend that they have the right to the child in view of the action taken by the father. Mrs. Houff is only 23 years old.

DULUTHIAN IN CHARGE.

Capt. Lanyon to Sink Shaft for Cuyuna Range Company.

Brainerd, Minn., Sept. 26.—The Cuyuna-Duluth Iron company is said to have struck ore on section 4-46-29 at a depth of sixty-five feet. The drill is now down to a depth of about 150 feet and still in ore.

The Cuyuna Mille Lacs Iron company has awarded the contract for the timber for a shaft 250 feet deep to the Dower Lumber company of Crosby, and the services of Capt. H. Lanyon of Duluth have been secured for sinking of the shaft and to take entire charge of the work. Mr. Lanyon is a man of wide experience and excellent reputation and has opened up a number of mines in the Vermilion, Mesaba and Michigan ranges. Work on the shaft will be commenced immediately. John Helmer, the president of the company with Otto J. Wendlandt, E. J. Donahue and Capt. Lanyon have been on the range and have located the point where the shaft is to be sunk and made the other necessary preliminary arrangements in connection with the building of camps, etc.

Michael Flynn, owner of some of the richest ore lands on the north range of the Cuyuna iron range north of Ironton and Crosby, in section 28-47-29, is authority for the statement that the Fitger Brewing company of Duluth contemplates erecting a large, modern hotel on land near Flynn lake on his ground, and that a store and postoffice will soon follow. The Twin City Mining company and the Gorham-Garbet company of Minneapolis have the mineral rights of his lands under lease.

Better Times After a change in Food

Lack of energy is usually the outward sign of faulty nutrition.

Folks who don't feel "spry" because of lack of the right kind of nourishment

"Pick Up" On

Grape-Nuts FOOD

Thousands who know the personal value of clear thinking and vigorous action, make Grape-Nuts a part of their regular diet.

FEEL RIGHT When You Feed Right.

You know one always feels "very fit" when the head and nerves swing along peacefully and with that certain sense of power that is unmistakable.

But when overwork or anxiety breaks down the soft gray matter in the brain and nerve cells (anxiety will do it quicker than overwork) faster than the food you have been using replaces it, then to save yourself from that horror of darkness, nervous prostration, you must change food and take on some sure rebuilder.

That's the mission of Grape-Nuts, made of the selected parts of wheat and barley containing the natural Phosphate of Potash which combines with Albumen in the human body and makes the soft gray filling of the brain and nerve centers.

Another thing to be considered is that Grape-Nuts is "processed" in making and the starchy parts converted into a form of sugar, exactly as the process of digestion in the body. So Grape-Nuts has really passed the first act of digestion and therefore the food is quickly assimilated in the most perfect manner by babe or athlete.

WOMAN HELD IN PEONAGE ON FARM NEAR MELLEN

MONICA DOSSETTE.

Garbed in the attire of a man and working as a common laborer on a farm near Mellen, Wis., for $8 per month and keep, according to an agreement made between her father in Italy and her cousin, which was to be binding for five years, and during the entire time subject to the cruel words and blows from her hard master and his wife, Monica Dossette, an Italian woman 35 years old, had a most strenuous time during her short stay in America.

Yesterday afternoon she was brought to this city from Mellen, Wis., by United States immigration officers, under the charge of being a "person likely to become a public charge at the time of entry." She will be sent back to Sunny Italy, and when she was brought to the local office, she had a smile that "wouldn't come off," in the thought that soon she would be "home again."

Arrangements had been made between her father, who lives in Italy, and her cousin, Peter Devero, a farmer near Mellen, that she should come here and work for him, in return for which he was to pay $8 per month and "keep." The agreement was good for five years, if she proved satisfactory to Devero. He also paid for her transportation.

The woman is small, being about four feet, six inches tall, and weighing between 90 and 100 pounds, but this fact did not matter much to Devero, for when she arrived at his farm in May, 1910, she was divested of her feminine clothing and given man's attire, including overalls, she claims. She was then sent out to work as a common laborer on the farm, and after the day's work was over she had to saw wood, while on rainy days she scrubbed around the house, according to her statement.

The woman stated to the immigration inspectors that she was brutally treated at Devero's house, being "cussed and called vile names," and that on one occasion Devero threw her against the stove. She claims she was not allowed to go to church, nor even to leave the place, Devero evidently harboring the idea that inasmuch as he was paying her eight whole dollars a month, he owned her body and soul. On one occasion she managed to get away and go to church, but it rained so hard that day that she could not return to her home until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. When she arrived, she alleges that she was met with a volley of abuse and foul language and "discharged." She states that Mrs. Devero treated her worse than her husband, which, the immigration officials claim, would appear to be "going some."

After her dismissal by Devero, being unable to speak English, she found herself unable to get employment, being unable to cook or do housework. She was taken in by charitably inclined fellow countrymen of Mellen who allowed her to remain until her case could be taken up by the immigration service. Now Monica is happy in the thought that she is going back to her native land, and striving to forget her experiences "down on the farm." Pending deportation she has been placed in the hands of a good Italian family in Duluth.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Empress Vaudeville.
ORPHEUM—Vaudeville.

Amusement Notes.

Grace Van Studdiford will appear at the Lyceum theater, Saturday, Sept. 30 for matinee and night, in the Parisian comic opera bouffe, "The Paradise of Mahomet." Miss Van Studdiford is reported to be in better voice than ever before, which will be pleasing news to those local theater goers who enjoyed a delightful evening with this accomplished and beautiful singer two seasons ago when she appeared here in "The Golden Butterfly." Her latest offering won high praise in New York last season. A large and capable company supports Miss Van Studdiford, including Laura Burt, John J. McCowan, Florence Rother, Edward Mora, Florence Koib, Hudson Freeborn and an exceptionally pretty singing chorus.

Joseph F. Sheehan, America's greatest tenor, with an all-star company, is coming to the Lyceum theater, Monday evening, Oct. 2, for one performance of the great comic opera success, "The Love Tales of Hoffman." In addition to the great tenor himself, the company includes such artists as Miss Gladys Caldwell, who is called the "American Tetrazzini." Another noted artist is Miss Marion Walker, the contralto, whom Mr. Sheehan secured from the Metropolitan Grand Opera company last season. Others are: Miss Annabel Tarlton, of the International Grand Opera company; Charles Swickard from the Tivoli Opera company, San Francisco, of which organization he was for years leading baritone; Francis J. Tyler, a former Henry W. Savage star; Kenneth Dudley; William Young, Joseph Haywood, and others of like caliber.

To add further interest to the coming of this organization, Mr. Marshall announces that by giving Mr. Sheehan a lump sum guarantee he has induced the famous tenor to bring his production of "The Bohemian Girl" to Duluth and that this favorite opera will be given Sunday evening, Oct. 1 and that popular prices will prevail.

"If you are going to present a Western play, get Western people. That was the plan Henry Miller and his son Gilbert Miller acted on in presenting the sketch 'Coralled,'" said Miss Jane Salisbury who is appearing at the Orpheum this week. "Mr. Gill is from Arizona; Mr. Stowe is from Texas, and I am from 'darkest Missouri', the very center of the 'show me state.'

"Our sketch was produced under the direction of Henry Miller himself, and I hope to be with Mr. Miller next year. He has promised me a role in his company, and naturally I am looking forward to it, for I consider Mr. Miller one of the most capable of present day producing managers and actors."

This is Miss Salisbury's first season in vaudeville. Last year she was with Arnold Daily, appearing in "The Wedding Journey," "The Sharkers" and "Interviewed," and previous to that had one of the leading parts in the estern company of "Going Some." Miss Salisbury also had several years' experience in stock companies, previous to that, in spite of the fact that it is not more than five or six years since she quit wearing her hair in a braid.

An exceptional array of high class attractions is being presented by Sullivan & Considine at the Lyceum this week. Heading the bill is the ludicrous travesty, "Quo Vadis Up Side," which is presented by Warren & Seymour. This farcette is really without a plot but it succeeds in catsing shouts of laughter at each performance. Messrs. Warren & Seymour are clever in their respective lines and Mr. Seymour is one of the best German comedians to visit Duluth in months. It is well night impossible to describe the offering but those who have seen the playlet have been delighted with it. Almost the reverse of Quo Vadis is the pretty rural playlet "The Man Who Knew." This piece is from the pen of La Verne Barber, who is seen as Uncle Clem. It tells its story in a simple manner and in fact, simplicity is the leading feature of the offering. It tells of a country boy who is saved from the wiles of a city girl and brought back to his little country sweetheart through overhearing the story of an older man's mistake. There is the atmosphere of the country about the little playlet which always finds favor and the audiences at the Lyceum this week have become very enthusiastic over the little sketch. Another favorite this week is Luigi Dell Oro. Dell Oro is a native of Italy and plays upon two instruments of his own invention, the foot-organ and a sort of a concertina. These instruments are the only ones of their kind in existence and Sig. Dell Oro succeeds in extracting some pleasing music from them. Miss Mondane Phillips, a charming young miss, is offering a song specialty which is somewhat out of the ordinary. She offers a series of imitations which include imitations of the conventional type, singing comedienne, a girl who has taken a coures in a vocal correspondence school and several others and she completes her act by being just herself. Burgos & Clar open the show with a lariat throwing and gymnatstic novelty which is original.

Starting next week the first of the big attractions of the Duluth Auditorium roller skating rink will be brought to this city. The two Vernons, famous throughout the roller skating world as two of the greatest trick and fancy exhibition performers in the world, will open their engagement next week. In addition to doing all of the difficult tricks of other famous skaters, the two Vernons have added a beautiful and highly unique feature to their act. They do the Merry Widow waltz on skates and also the famous electric light dance, the figures of the two skaters being covered with a multitude of tiny electric lights. The two Vernons will be features all of next week.

COMPLAINS OF RATES ON HAY AND SALT.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the Hill City, Mississippi & Western railroad, a short line running from Swan River to Hill City, charges 6½ cents for hauling hay twenty-two miles to a connection with the Great Northern, which then hauls it ninety-two miles for 7½ cents, is the charge made by W. D. Washburn of Minneapolis. He appeared before the state railroad and warehouse commission yesterday praying for an order requiring the roads to make a joint rate.

Mr. Washburn also alleges that the freight on $18 worth of salt over the line amounts to $15.90, or nearly as much as the salt is worth.

The commission has taken the charges under advisement.

A little backache at first.

Daily increasing till the back is lame and weak.

Urinary disorders quickly follow; Dropsy and finally Bright's disease.

Don't take this course. Follow the advice of a Duluth citizen.

Edward J. Hoppman, 422 W. First St., Duluth, Minn., says: "I have looked upon Doan's Kidney Pills as a good kidney medicine ever since I first tried them about twelve years ago. An account of my experience was given for publication in 1904 and in 1908, I again indorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. At the present time I take pleasure in repeating my statement. My kidney trouble was evidenced by sharp pains in my back and I was also annoyed by a kidney weakness. In the morning when I got up, I was tired and all run down. Doan's Kidney Pills completely stopped these troubles. Since then, I have used this remedy and it has done good work."

This range shows some features that are a departure from the old settled lines followed by most stove builders, and these special features have proven a success and an advantage over other ranges.

The Hot Blast feature as applied to the range is giving the same satisfying results as it does in the heater. The "Coleized" steel fire pot will last five times as long as any other fire-pot. Repair bills are exceedingly low on this range.

COUNTY OWES CITY MONEY

Council Learns There Is $23,448 Due From Vessel Taxes.

Will Reduce City Rate—Jail Will Be Enlarged at Once.

Mayor M. B. Cullum last evening notified the city council that the city has $23,448.69 due from the county as its share of the vessel tonnage tax for the years 1900 to 1906.

Upon his recommendation the council reduced the amount of the levy recently fixed by the conference committee $23,000. This will make the tax rate at least one-half mill lower, while the total of the levy will be $448.69 greater than that of the budget as determined by the conference committee.

Except for this change the council approved the levy as made by the conference committee. The aldermen cut $23,000 from the amount which will be raised by taxation for the fire department fund, and this will be made up by the vessel tonnage tax.

Among other improvements recommended by the conference committee was the expenditure of $20,000 for enlarging the city jail, which action was necessary if the lock-up were not to be condemned by the state board of control. To expedite this work Alderman Barnes of the committee on city property, which has that work in charge, has called a meeting of the committee for 4 o'clock this afternoon at the city hall. The other members of the committee are Aldermen MacDonell and Hector. As the money will not be available in the ordinary course of business until next year, it will be necessary to make some arrangement to secure it. It is believed that this could be done by issuing certificates of indebtedness against the permanent improvement fund in anticipation of the collection of the first apportionment of 1912, or by borrowing the money from some other fund.

The W. C. T. U. sent in a communication protesting against the granting of a license for the Chester park skating pavilion as a dance hall. The letter stated that it has been the observation of the organization that many young girls have been led to their downfall by other similar dance halls. The application for the license was withdrawn before the council meeting. The committee on police and license had prepared a report recommending that the application for the license be referred back to the applicant.

Application for a license to use one-fifth of the sidewalk space adjacent to the Columbia building on Third avenue west for a stairway to the basement of the building was postponed for one week. It is the intention to use the basement for a pool hall and a license for that purpose was granted to M. Caufield last night. Third avenue is one of the busiest thoroughfares in the heart of the city and the walk is probably traveled as much or more as that in any block in the city. The indications are that difficulty will be encountered in securing permission from the council to use approximately two feet and five inches of the walk for the stairway, although it would be placed some distance up from Superior street.

Health Commissioner Webster sent in a letter asking that $1,600 be set aside for fitting up the third floor of the contagious disease hospital at Fourteenth avenue west and Third street. He thought that with this additional floor the hospital would be large enough to meet the needs of the city for years to come. He stated that for the years 1908 and 1909, before the establishment of the institution, the expense of caring for contagious diseases was $7,577.00, and for the two succeeding years, when the hospital was in use, the cost was reduced to $6,640.45, a saving of close to $1,000. The matter was referred to the city property committee.

The city engineer submitted blue prints of the proposed underground crossing of the Iron Range tracks at Thirty-second avenue east and London road. They show two openings, each 18 feet wide, of which 5 feet is dedicated to sidewalk purposes, leaving 13 feet in each for teams and other vehicles. The committee which had the matter in charge reported that it thought the openings should be 23 feet, but preferred one opening with 30 feet in the clear, which would leave an unobstructed roadway of 20 feet after the sidewalks had been built. It was stated that this would practically conform to the original agreement with the railroad company. As proposed, the railroad would do the grading from London road to Jefferson street and the city from Jefferson street to Greysolon road.

The vote last Monday night on the transient merchant ordinance, when it was adopted, was reconsidered and the ordinance sent back to the committee on ordinances and resolutions. The ordinance requires a transient merchant to pay a license fee of $10 per day. It is believed that as it was passed it would prevent any one from shipping in a carload of apples, or hay, etc., and selling them in broken lots about the city. It is said that it is the intention of the council to amend the ordinance that this class of merchants will not come within its requirements.

The proposed Woodland trunk sewer is nearing the stage when bids will be asked. The easement for the right-of-way has been secured and the council last night sent it to the board of public works for a report. That body will report back as to its necessity and the council will direct the board to advertise for bids and to award the contract subject to the approval of the council.

The sewer ordinance was amended to give the board of public works authority to grant all applications to make connections with sanitary sewers. It is a technical change but it is estimated that it will save the city about $200 a year in the publishing of official proceeding, as heretofore many applications were referred to the council, and formed a part of its record.

The board of public works was authorized to advertise for bids for grading and graveling one-half mile of the Swan Lake road from Mesaba avenue to the sandpit. This is known as the Sundby road and $3,000 was set aside for its improvement by the conference committee a year ago. The board will award the contract subject to the approval of the council, and it is expected that the work will be done this year.

The city engineer was directed to prepare plans and specifications for storm sewers in Fifty-eighth avenue east from Oneida street to the lake and Twenty-sixth avenue west from Helm street to the bay. The latter is a natural water course and the engineer is also asked to give an opinion as to whether the Northern Pacific should not pay the cost where it crosses its right-of-way.

The city attorney rendered an opinion to the effect that the council cannot enforce an ordinance prohibiting the use of barbed wire on fences as long as the fence is wholly on private property, even though it may be adjacent to a public street.

The report of the building line commission, recommending that some of the easements be abandoned, was adopted. The commission reported that in four different places the enforcement of the building line easement would either amount to a confiscation of the property or entail too great an expense.

The council voted to allow City Assessor J. Allyn Scott $25 to defray expense to Minneapolis the first of next week to attend a lecture on taxation to be delivered by Lawson Purdy. Mr. Purdy is recognized as probably the greatest authority on taxation in this country.

The bill of Attorney A. H. Crassweller of $454.14 was allowed. Mr. Crassweller acted as counsel for the special committee which investigated the alleged "paving scandal."

PEAVEY COMPANY IS SUING ON LEITER NOTES.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Charges that Joseph Leiter had failed to make payments on notes given for wheat in his memorable attempt to corner the market in 1897 and 1898, are made in a suit for $300,000 filed by F. H. Peavey & Co., the holding concern of the Peavey Grain company.

Hopes of an adjustment delayed the suit up to now, according to Elmer H. Adams, of counsel for the Peavey company.

"The notes given to the Peavey company by Leiter have not been paid," he said. "The statute of limitations would bar us from recovering anything on the notes if they were allowed to run much longer."

The Cost of Purity exceeds all other Costs in Schlitz Brewing

We spend more on purity—more time, more skill and more money than on any other cost in our brewing.

We sterilize every tub, vat, tank—we scald every barrel—every pipe and pump—every time we use it.

We wash every bottle four times by machinery.

The air in which the beer is cooled is filtered.

If you knew what we know about beer, you would say, "Schlitz—Schlitz in Brown Bottles."

JEWELER AND WIFE ARRESTED

Petticoat With Twenty-Five Pockets Figures in Smuggling.

New York, Sept. 26.—A rubber stocking and a petticoat with twenty-five pockets in it are the means by which Rudolph Newman, a Chicago jeweler, and his wife are alleged to have tried to smuggle diamonds and other precious stones and jewelry into this country. They arrived on the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam of the Holland-American line, accompanied by two small children.

Newman, when arraigned before United States Commissioner Russ, furnished $2,000 bail, while Mrs. Newman was paroled on her own recognizance on account of her two children, who needed her care.

There has not, according to the customs authorities, been such a flagrant case of alleged smuggling reported at the customs house in months. In the rubber stocking, which Newman wore tied about the lower portion of his body, the customs officials say they found a quantity of uncut diamonds valued at about $1,500, and in the pockets of his wife's petticoat numerous packages of small jewelry and a number of garnets and other stones, said to be worth about $5,000. All the jewels were seized.

Had it not been for the fact that Newman was under suspicion because of his frequent trips to Europe, the gems probably would have remained undetected, the officials said, so artfully were they concealed.

Young Mothers

No young woman, in the joy of coming motherhood, should neglect to prepare her system for the physical ordeal she is to undergo. The health of both she and her coming child depends largely upon the care she bestows upon herself during the waiting months. Mother's Friend prepares the expectant mother's system for the coming event, and its use makes her comfortable during all the term. It works with and for nature and by gradually expanding all tissues, muscles and tendons, involved, and keeping the breasts in good condition, brings the woman to the crisis in splendid physical condition. The baby too is more apt to be perfect and strong where the mother has thus prepared herself for nature's supreme function. No better advice could be given a young expectant mother than that she use Mother's Friend; it is a medicine that has proven its value in thousands of cases. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for free book for expectant mothers which contains much valuable information, and many suggestions of a helpful nature.

ON THE IRON RANGES

YOUNG NYE IS CAUGHT

Alice Man Wanted on Several Charges Has Been Taken.

Subsisted on Food Supplied His Mother By Town Clerk.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gust Nye, aged 22, son of Abraham Nye of Alice who was recently sent to the Fergus Falls asylum by Judge Gilpin, and for whose arrest a warrant was issued last week, was captured yesterday afternoon by Officer Haben of the local police and will have a hearing in municipal court.

He was originally sought on a warrent issued by Anton Newberg on the charge of stealing a suit of clothes, a gun and other articles from Newberg's home at Alice but other charges have developed and it looks as though the accused will have an interesting time in court.

Nye Has Been Hiding.

It develops that young Nye has been hunting in the vicinity of Little Swan river since he dropped from sight when the officers got after him and that he returned home whenever he got out of grub and secured some of the food that Village Clerk Calligan has been furnishing Nye's mother, the latter having become a public charge since her husband was arrested and sent to the asyium. Besides facing the charge preferred by Anton Newberg of rifling the latter's home young Nye is also accused by James Owen, living near Little Swan river, with stealing some articles from his place, while Game Warden George E. Wood of Alice, whose home Nye's father is accused of burning, proposes to prosecute the young man for peddling venison around town.

The next case taken up was that of Steve Novosanik, administrator, vs. Joe Karl, et al., being an action for a settlement in an estate.

HIBBING REGRETS LEAVING OF PRIEST

Father Gamache's Decision to Retire Hard to Comprehend.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The unexpected announcement by Rev. Father C. V. Gamache, pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Sunday of his intention to resign the pastorate on account of ill health is an absorbing topic here where the priest is popular among all sects.

Father Gamache gives as his reason for his leaving continued ill health. He has been suffering with catarrh and the malady is rapidly growing worse. He stated this morning that he had wished to leave his present parish for good since Christmas but on account of his aged mother he stayed. Over a month ago the priest's mother passed away and since then he has been almost broken hearted. His decision was not made on the spur of the moment but after much thought and deliberation.

Father Gamache will leave next week for South Bend, Ind., the home of a married sister, to rest for a couple of months and then probably will go West for an extended tour.

Located There Many Years.

For the past sixteen years Father Gamache has been pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament. The church was built by him in 1900. For four years prior to that time he alternated between Hibbing and Grand Rapids, having in charge both parishes.

Father Gamache has been a priest for thirty-one years, having been ordained in St. Cloud in 1880. He will celebrate his 59th birthday next month.

The Church of the Blessed Sacrament at the corner of Fourth avenue and Superior street, stands and will stand as a silent testimonial to the personal achievements of the reverend father. The church is practically out of debt and besides the parish house, standing in the rear of the edifice, is fitted up with every modern convenience.

Perhaps no other priest could have fitted into the niche which has been so ably filled as has Father Gamache; well liked by Catholic and Protestant alike, he was a most welcome visitor wherever he went.

HOW TO SUCCEED

During the last few years, conditions in all lines of business, even professional life, have changed so completely that every man is waking up to the fact that in order to win sucess he must specialize and learn to do some one thing and do it well.

So it is with any article that is sold to the people. It must have genuine merit or no amount of advertising will maintain the demand for the article.

For many years we have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy. From the very beginning the proprietors had so much confidence in it that they invited every one to test it, free of cost, before purchasing.

DRILLING AT END OF GRANT AVENUE

If No Iron Is Struck, Eveleth Property Will Be Placed on Market.

Eveleth, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Drilling will start tomorrow on the Murphy, Dorr and Flynn land on the end of Grant avenue, by Cole & McDonald of Virginia.

The land is in the city limits, and should it be found that sufficient quantities of the mineral do not exist, the ground will be platted into lots as the district is centrally located.

Some years ago a test pit was operated for a few months on the land.

Little stripping is being done at the Adams pit at present as most of the land to be stripped has been tried by the steam shovels. The Adams pit employes will likely find employment at the Fayal district, near the Iron Range tracks. Four drills are still at work on the land and many holes have been sunk. The drillers have been working since May and ore has been found.

BOOKS TO BE EXAMINED

August Omtvedt, Who Discovered Alleged Shortage, Made Collector.

Two Harbors, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The alleged shortage of P. J. McAlpine, city water and light collector, was the chief subject discussed at last night's council meeting and steps were taken to ascertain just how much the accused got away with.

August Omtvedt, who has been auditing the books of the water and light tax collector, P. J. McAlpine, submitted his report. He stated that so far as he was able to discover there was a shortage of $12,000; that the books were full of clerical errors; that the books had never been properly balanced and that accounts had been transferred to the transfer ledger which were not yet balanced. He recommended that a firm of licensed expert accountants be hired by the city to audit the books up to date.

Following the report of Mr. Omtvedt there was considerable discussion as to how this work should be done by the accountant. It was decided that there must be two men to do the work. Omtvedt suggested that since all the receipt stubs had been checked thoroughly against the cash books, it would not be necessary for the accountant to go over them again, but it was his opinion that the greatest task for them to do would be to balance the individual accounts. In this way it will be learned how the account of each taxpayer stands up to date. It is claimed that in order to do this properly the accountants will have to go back at least six years and probably to 1902, the time when McAlpine began. This will cost the city several hundred dollars which, it was decided to be taken out of the water and light fund.

To Exact Heavier Bond.

Another subject for discussion was the matter of the amount of bonds to be furnished by the city water and light tax collector hereafter. Previously bonds have been $3,000 for the tax collector and $500 for city clerk. Now, however, it was decided to raise this to $10,000, the bond to be furnished by the tax collector and premium to be paid by the city.

The council, by unanimous vote, appointed August Omtvedt as city clerk and water and light collector for a term lasting until April, 1913. The salary as water and light tax collector is $90 per month and of city clerk is $35 per month but out of this there must be paid nearly the whole amount for a deputy city clerk. For the past three years Mr. Omtvedt has been in the service of the Duluth & Iron Range road as chief timekeeper for the train and yard and locomotive services. He has a reputation as being one of the most reliable men available for the poistion. He will leave the service of the company, Oct. 1, to take up his new duties.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.) — While attempting to unfasten a chain holding a carload of logs so that they might be tumbled into the water of Silver lake near the mill of the Virginia and Rainy Lake Lumber company yesterday afternoon, Tuure H. Ruuhela, an employe of the company, was struck in the head by a falling log as the chain was unfastened and hurled into the water, his head being crushed by the impact of the log.

His body was recovered about an hour later and taken to an undertaker's. Ruuhela was 23 years old and single. He came to this country from Finland a year and a half ago. ## BOYS' PRACTICAL JOB.

Will Make Articles for New Aurora High School Building.

Aurora, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superintendent F. L. Freeman and Manual Training Director O. B. Poore of the local schools are arranging to have the boys in the manual training department of the new high school devote a considerable portion of their time to making articles of equipment for the new building, instead of following the lessons and patterns usually followed in such work.

An order has just been placed for over $300 worth of seasoned lumber, the greater part of which will be used in this work. Among the articles to be made will be a cabinet for the physical and chemical lecture room, a dining table for the domestic science department and numerous benches and work tables for the different departments.

The new manual training equipment has all arrived and is being installed. There will be a full line of machinery for courses in wood and iron work and forge work. The small machines will be driven by direct motors and the large machines will be belt driven.

Absorption Process Makes Faces Young

(From The Home Maker)

Success has at last come to scientists who for years have sought some effectual method of removing the outer facial skin in cases of unsightly complexions, which would be both painless and entirely non-injurious. The new process is so simple, the means so ordinary, so inexpensive, the wonder is that no one had discovered the same long ago.

It has been amply demonstrated that common mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, completely removes, by gentle absorption, all the withered, lifeless cuticle, showing the youthful, rose like skin underneath. The mercolized wax is applied at night—like cold cream, but not rubbed in—and washed off in the morning. The absorption also cleanses clogged pores, increasing the skin's breathing capacity and capillary circulation, preserving the tone, color and natural beauty of the new skin.

A Peculiar Tax.

Massachusetts is dallying with a law which seeks to tax unmarried women and childless wives. Dr. Bertha C. Downing of Boston is the author and is pushing the bill. It is another of the freak legislation ideas, with which the country is burdened of late, by well meaning cranks. The author claims that too much intellectuality among young women is responsible for lack of matrons and children. ## WHY SOCIETY WOMEN WASH THEIR OWN HAIR

Mrs. Mae Martyn, writing for the New York Times, says: "Society has taken to home shampooing for only one reason, and that is to save their natural hair. Most hair dressers insist on shampooing with soap jelly, which in time will ruin any head of hair. The alkali in soap bleaches and dulls the hair, causing it to split, become brittle and fall out.

"Society women avoid these conditions by washing their own hair with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. This simple, inexpensive shampoo cleanses perfectly, dries quickly without any ill effects and leaves the hair very soft, lustrous and fluffy. Only a few minutes are required for one of these perfect, delightful shampoos."

SHALL MINNESOTA TAMELY SUBMIT, OR FIGHT AND BE FREE?

Those who travel upon railroad trains in Iowa and Wisconsin ride for 2 cents a mile, and those who travel in North Dakota ride for 2½ cents.

But those who would ride on trains in Minnesota must pay 3 cents, unless they are rich enough to buy mileage books, when they can travel as cheaply as they can in these neighboring states.

Meanwhile, railroad property in Minnesota is taxed less than any other property, and what it escapes from paying because of the miserably low railroad tax rate the plain people of Minnesota must pay in addition to their own dues to the state.

And unless action is taken at an extra session of the legislature to increase railroad taxation so that the people may vote on it next year, millions of dollars in taxes due will be lost forever.

How may Minnesota be made free from this intolerable situation?

Not, certainly, by sitting idle and chatting loosely of trival matters. Not, certainly, by pretending, as Governor Eberhart pretends, that all is sweetness and light and that there is no such thing as trouble.

Not, certainly, by letting the railroads believe, as they must believe now, that they can do anything they please to the people of Minnesota without the slightest fear that anything will be done about it.

There can be no relief from this shameful humiliation in sitting down and bemoaning it. If there is to be relief there must be ACTION; prompt, aggressive and purposeful action.

The 3-cent passenger fare of Minnesota is wrong. The 2-cent passenger fare of Iowa and Wisconsin is right.

If the supreme court holds, as Sanborn held, that the 3-cent rate is necessary to enable the railroads to pay 7 per cent dividends on watered stock, still it is wrong.

If the supreme court holds, as Sanborn held, that Minnesota has no power to correct such injustices, still the 3-cent rate is wrong.

The railroads themselves have proved—proved twice, in fact—that the 3-cent rate, which they impose on Minnesota alone among Northwestern states, is wrong. When the 2-cent fare law was before the legislature they proved that because of cheap excursion rates and free passes, though the established rate then was 3 cents a mile they got but 1⅞ cents per mile from their passenger receipts. So when the legislature abolished passes and made the flat rate 2 cents a mile, and the railroad abolished excursion rates, the rate was not reduced from 3 cents to 2 cents, but was actually increased from 1⅞ cents to 2 cents. And the railroads proved again that the 3-cent rate was wrong by voluntarily offering, as a concession to head off freight reductions, to give terms that practically amounted to 2-cent fares.

The 3-cent passenger rate is wrong, unjust and discriminatory, because all the people of the states surrounding Minnesota ride cheaper, and the railroads have not molested the laws of those states which brought about the lower rate.

The 4 per cent gross earning tax is wrong, because it taxes railroad property much less than than any other property is taxed, thus compelling the owners of that other property to pay the taxes which the railroads escape. It is wrong because if railroad property were assessed and taxed as other property is assessed and taxed, their taxes would amount to 7 or 8 per cent on their gross earnings instead of the present 4 per cent.

Both the 3-cent fare and the 4 per cent tax are wrong, but neither is so deadly wrong as the treachery of a governor who suffers this situation to continue, giving the railroads the right to think that they can do as they will with this state, and giving the people of other states the right to think that this is a state shackled and gagged, in which railroads with impunity can charge what rates they please and shirk half their just burden of taxation, which those who are far less able must pay for them.

The governor should call the legislature in special session next January, and he should call upon it to enact a just measure taxing the railroads as they should be taxed. Let the legislature determine then whether the tax rate should be raised to 5 per cent, 6 per cent or 7 per cent, or whether the state shall follow the example of Wisconsin by discarding the gross earnings system and taxing railroad property according to its value, just as your property, Mr. Taxpayer, is taxed.

Perhaps, by that time, something will be heard from the railroads. Certainly nothing will be heard from them while the state lies idle and appears willing to lick the hand that smites it. Certainly nothing will be heard from the railroads so long as the governor evades his plain duty and discourses intently of trivialities after carefully making sure that they will offend no vested interest.

But if the state takes action to redeem itself from the humiliation that covers it now, perhaps something will be heard from the railroads. Perhaps they will come in, as they did when the rate laws were pending in 1907, and offer compromise. Perhaps they will agree to restore the 2-cent rate if the taxes are left as they are. That is by no means improbable, and nothing is more certain than that the railroads will offer no compromise so long as the state seems to like being imposed upon.

If the state then wants to make such a bargain, it can. Frankly, we shouldn't care to see it. It would be better by far to tax railroad property as it should be taxed—no more, and no less than other property—and then fight to the last ditch for the right of the state to protect its people against extortionate rates. But if the legislature wanted to make that bargain, it could.

Certainly there will be no bargain to make, and no offers of compromise to consider, so long as the governor sits idle and lets the railroads trample arrogantly upon the rights of the state and of its people to have fair rates and full taxation.

More important matters than these, vitally important though they be, are involved. The honor, the freedom and the independence of the state are at stake.

AS TO "FIRE DAYS."

An exchange reports that "Governor Eberhart has set aside Wednesday, Nov. 8, 1911, as 'Fire day.'"

If Governor Eberhart doesn't pay closer attention to the vital subjects that deeply concern the people of this state, he is likely to find that the people have set apart Tuesday, Nov. 5, 1912, as "Fire day."

THE VIRTUE OF THE ELWELL LAW.

The Northern Minnesota Development association is showing, by its active work for good roads and for the construction of trunk lines under the Elwell law, that its energy and enthusiasm are not confined to the semi-annual meetings. The Elwell law is in many respects the most important measure passed by the legislature at its last session, and the association has been prompt to make it of effective use to Northern Minnesota.

Under its provisions the state is to pay half the cost of roads, the county a quarter and owners of benefited property the other quarter; though this portion may be paid by the county or by individuals. Some having expressed fear that the provision for assessing property may prove burdensome, the association is causing the publication of a very persuasive argument that ought to settle this doubt. In part this argument follows:

"How does it affect the settler? Will it break him with the assessment on his land? If the county prefers to pay one-half and leave the other half to the state, there will not be an assessment. But suppose one-fourth is assessed to the property benefited. Suppose it cost $1,500 a mile to build the road. One-fourth of $1,500 is $375. That would be borne by the property. Suppose the court assessed the benefits three miles on either side of the road. That cost would be shared by 3,840 acres. It would come to 10 cents an acre, say 11 cents. That can be spread over ten years. One cent an acre a year for ten years. Is it worth that much to any man to be within three miles of a good road, or not?"

The settler deserves every possible help, and as few burdens as possible should be imposed upon him. Without analyzing it, many grew alarmed at the provision for assessing property for a quarter of the cost. But the fear cannot survive the analysis made by the N. M. D. A. If a man has eighty acres within the three-mile limit along a road to be improved under the Elwell law, the expense to him would be $8.80. That, spread over ten years if he wishes that done, would cost him 88 cents a year.

There will be many cases, no doubt, where the county will bear the full half instead of assessing the quarter to benefited property. This the Elwell law allows, and wherever possible it seems to us that this method should be followed. It will save bookkeeping and relieve the settler even of this slight burden; though of course as a taxpayer he will still have to pay his share, buried in his taxes.

The Elwell law is mightily important to Northern Minnesota. It is being scrutinized now as to its constitutionality, in part by hostile eyes; for there is, for some reason, a determined opposition to it, located in the Twin Cities. It is to be hoped that it will be saved from this puzzling hostility.

VERY SLOW PROGRESS.

Several very vital matters in this country must be settled rightly before conditions will become stable and secure. Among these things is the tariff.

That was an impressive review of the work of the special session of congress which was reprinted on this page last evening from the Kansas City Star. In briefer form, we repeat it here. The results of the session were as follows:

When we have an all-summer session of congress with such results as these, we aren't getting on very rapidly, are we?

MORE TROUT FOR DULUTH.

The fishermen of Duluth—and their name is legion—are to be congratulated on the fact that Game Warden Storey tonight will receive another ample installment of fingerling trout fry for deposit in near-by streams; and so is Mr. Storey to be congratulated. The appeal to sportsmen to help get the trout into the streams when the last consignment came was liberally answered, and there should be no difficulty tonight in getting help to put the new consignment where it will do the most good.

While these fry are of such size that some of them may be taken next year, the supply of trout will improve more rapidly if anglers go lightly on the small fish for a season or two.

And anyway, if Canada was so afraid of annexation, all she had to do was to pass a law incorporating the recall of judges into her practices. Then she'd have been safe from even Taft.

Nor should it be overlooked that the next meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association will be held in St. Cloud in December, and that it should be the largest and most representative yet held.

THE BENCH AND THE PRESIDENCY

By SAVOYARD.

Again there is talk of drafting a member of the United States supreme court and constituting him a candidate of one of the great political parties for president. Charles E. Hughes is the man this time selected, and it is hoped that the standpatters and the insurgents may be able to compromise their differences and agree to support the man who commanded public confidence as governor of the Empire state. It is not at all likely that success will wait on this movement. The American electorate is much more prone to make presidents of the men of the sword than they are to choose them from men of the ermine.

There is nothing new in the suggestion of a member of the supreme court as a candidate for president. John McLean of Ohio, who was appointed to the bench in 1829 and served for thirty-two years as a member of that august tribunal, was an anti-slavery Whig and subsequently a Republican. He narrowly escaped the Republican nomination for president in 1856, when that "hero without a battle, statesman without a dispatch, orator without a speech, lawyer without a brief, and millionaire without a cent," John Charles Fremont, a Georgia Abolitionist, was preferred over him. As I now recollect, McLean, earlier in his career, was repeatedly suggested as the Whig candidate for president. He joined with Benjamin R. Curtis in a dissenting opinion in the Dred-Scott case.

While neither of the dominant parties ever chose a member of the supreme court as its candidate for president, Salmon P. Chase was nominated and confirmed chief justice of that court because, as a politician, he was a candidate for president. There was strenuous opposition to the renomination of Lincoln in 1864 by radical Republicans like Ben Wade, Henry Winter Davis, John Cochrane, John C. Fremont and James A. Garfield. The New York Herald, in a scathing editorial under the caption, "A Smutty Joker," sought to supplant him with Gen. Grant, but Chase was the man whom most of the anti-Lincoln men preferred, and Lincoln, who made monkeys of them all in the game of politics, eliminated Chase as a political quantity that year by making him the successor of Roger B. Taney, who died at an opportune time for the administration. It nearly broke the heart of William M. Evarts, whose life ambition it was to be chief justice. Had Seward been president he would have achieved it.

But Chase was not done with politics. Like the Blairs, he was an original Democrat and returned to that party as soon as the emancipation of the negro was secured. Trumbull, too, found his way back to the Democratic party. So did Governor Curtin of Pennsylvania. So did John M. Palmer of Illinois. Even old Ben Butler returned to the party of his youth. Indeed, George S. Boutwell cast his last vote for William J. Bryan. It is one of the tremendous ifs of our history that Chief Justice Chase was not nominated for president by the Democrats in 1868. It was all fixed, and by the merest accident Seymour was chosen instead. Had Chase been nominated it is not at all unlikely that he would have been elected. Even Seymour carried New York, and Chase would have made Ohio almighty doubtful, also Massachusetts. And here we may again speculate. Suppose Stephen A. Douglas had lived? Would he have burned his bridges behind him as did Oliver P. Morton and John A. Logan? Or would he have found his way to revitalize the Democratic party and lead it to victory in 1868, or even in 1864, as Samuel J. Tilden did in 1876?

In 1872 the Labor party first appeared in our politics. It held a national convention and nominated David Davis for president because he had been the friend of Abraham Lincoln and because he was an associate justice of the supreme court. Carl Schurz precipitated a rebellion in the G. O. P., and Sumner, Trumull, the Massachusetts Adamses, Horace Greeley, B. Gratz Brown, Stanley Matthews, George Hoadley, and other leading Republicans joined in the movement. It was expected in many quarters that Davis would be indorsed by the Liberal Republicans, who really preferred Adams or Trumbull; but the Missouri set caused the nomination of Horace Greeley, and Davis immediately withdrew as the candidate of the Labor party. Four years later he cost the Democratic party the presidency, when he resigned from the supreme bench and "Alundi Joe" Bradley was appointed in his stead a member of the eight to seven electoral commission that put R. B. Hayes in the place the people had chosen Samuel J. Tilden to fill. Davis became United States senator and hoped to be the candidate of one or other party for president in 1880, but when the time came he was scarcely mentioned.

The next member of the supreme court to get the presidential bee in his gown was Stephen J. Field. He, too, was a Republican who made tracks back to the Democratic party as soon as the negro was freed. As associate justice he had adjudged some of the Southern reconstruction measures unconstitutional and he was as good a Democrat in 1880 as any of them.

That year the Democrats, because of the larceny of the presidency in 1877, believed they could elect a "yaller dog," when the slightest instinct should have taught them that only the old ticket of Tilden and Hendricks could succeed. Thurman was a candidate, so was Hendricks, so was Hancock, so was Field, so was Randall, so was Morrison. There was a big Seymour boom that threatened to sweep everything. Proctor Knott was in charge of Field's boom, which had no strength outside the Pacific coast except among the layers. Standard Oil put up Henry B. Payne, but that was to defeat Thurman.

Hancock got the nomination, but the good luck of the G. O. P. and the evil genius of the American republic got busy. There had been a disastrous financial panic in 1873, due to the greenback. Everybody was in debt. By 1880 a return to specie payments was had. Everybody was out of debt—most of them by discharges in bankruptcy—and there was nothing to do but to go to work, which the country did. Hancock lost votes by declaring the tariff to be a local issue; but he clinched his defeat when he congratulated the Greenbacker who was elected governor of Maine in September, 1880. Then it was that the Union league, an annex of Wall street, chipped in with boodle enough to buy Indiana and Ohio in October, and enough left over to buy New York in November, and Garfield was elected, carrying New York, which saved him, by 18,000.

John M. Harlan was frequently mentioned for the presidency, and he would have made a great one, as would Silas Miller, also frequently mentioned. But the people have always been averse to making presidents of judges of the supreme court, and it is not likely that much will come of the suggestion of Mr. Justice Hughes.

In the Republican convention it will be Taft against the field, and the "field" some insurgent. And on the Democratic side of the hedge it appears to be Wilson, mainly because the people do not like Harmon for some of the friends he has made.

Perhaps it is well enough to explain that recently I wrote that Champ Clark had made an imprudent speech on Canadian reciprocity. Everybody knows that even the gods are powerless in the hands of an intelligent compositor, who would have it "impudent" speech. On this I deny I could a tale unfold of how the printer made me write "chastity" where I wrote "charity" that would make each particular hair of your head stand on end—but you would laugh all the same.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writter, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

DID THEY REPRESENT THE WOMEN'S FEDERATION?

To the Editor of The Herald:

Permit the opinion that a very few of the Minnesota club women take themselves altogether too seriously in the matter of the training school investigation. Not one club woman has indicated any personal knowledge of conditions at the school. Not one of these women has made any investigation nor offered a word of testimony against the management. They seem not even to know that their sympathies have been anticipated for years by Supt. Whittier, as shown by his official reports as far back as 1904, which are classics of the literature of reformatory science, including recommendations for the establishing of juvenile courts, the probation system and segregation of boys and girls in the reformatory institutions of this state. They seem not to know that the governor indorsed the training school inaugural message. They seem not to know that a large body of Supt. Whittier's recommendations have been written into the statutes of Minnesota.

This writer has attended practically all of the hearings of the investigation at the capitol. Attendance of visitors has been small and few women have been present. On one or two occasions there were perhaps twenty women present, but usually not more than half a dozen and sometimes none. A few of these may have been club women, but it is absurd to claim that in any adequate sense, they represent the women of Minnesota. The women in attendance were so disorderly that the chairman of the board gave repeated warnings that the room would be cleared of spectators if order could not be maintained. Had these women been men, no court on earth would have tolerated their misconduct. This writer heard an elderly woman frequently admonish the others that they must keep quiet or they would surely be ejected.

It is not believed that these women, whether club members or not, were representative of the women of Minnesota.

Further reason for this belief is found in remarks, possibly indicating the "standard of delicacy of the galleries," which this writer heard these women audibly interject into the proceedings.

"I wish George had fell and broke his neck," observed one woman when testimony was being given in regard to an officer jumping from a railway train to recapture a runaway boy. The same day, when Mr. Whittier's name was mentioned for the first time, another said, "I wish I could tear him all to pieces."

One day the governor sat on the witness stand and bravely held his peace under objections offered by Mr. Sanborn to Judge Wilson's questions along the lines on which the governor had often in newspaper interviews expressed his eagerness to testify, this writer was frequently nudged between the shoulders by a woman, in keeping with such remarks as these from the neighborly stranger: "Did you ever?" "Aren't they taking good care of the governor?" "Did you ever?" "What a big fool old Wilson is?" "Shall we give three cheers for the governor? Shall we?" "What a fine forehead the governor has."

That these women represent the rank and file of the membership of the federated clubs, or the women of Minnesota, is not believed by

A MAN WHO WAS THERE.

St. Paul, Sept. 23.

THE MEANING OF THE RESULT IN CANADA.

New York Evening Post: First of all, we should read in this rebuff by the Canadian people a severe censure of the administrations which have been in power in the United States for the past fifteen years, for having neglected the great opportunity to promote closer trade relations with Canada. Her representatives again and again approached the Washington authorities, but were steadily sent away empty-handed. No wonder that they fell back on their own resources and set about working out a national policy that would make reciprocity with the United States a matter of indifference to Canada. Too late our statesmen woke from their sleep. Secretary Root, on his visit to Ottawa during President Roosevelt's second term, found that we had no trade offers to make to Canada that she cared anything about. Finally, President Taft seized what he thought a lucky chance, but as it now plainly appears, the whole effort was tardy. While our protectionists had slumbered, Canada had grown into the consciousness of a self-sufficing nation. It to know the times and seasons be the mark of statesmanship, our rule: s have shown themselves in this Canadian business wofully derelict. When they could have had reciprocity, they sniffed at it; when they at last grasped at it, they were too late to get it.

Another thing writ large in yesterday's Canadian election is the final collapse of the Republican pretence that the exactions and injustices of a protective tariff can be tempered by reciprocity. For years we have had this preached to us. The high duties might look unjustifiable in themselves, but only think what excellent "trading material" they were, and consider how they might be made the means of opening our markets in a way almost as effective as a tariff for revenue only. From McKinley to Dingley and Payne we have seen these delusive hopes held out. Somehow, reciprocity was to be a kind of salve to put on the high-tariff bruise. But in this supreme test of that theory, it has failed utterly. The country now sees that in the mingling of outrageous tariff taxes with reciprocity what we finally get is no reciprocity and only an accentuation of the outrage.

The sure result of this bitter experience will be to give a new and great impetus to the movement to take our barbarous tariff laws in hand and strip them of legalized extortion and needless barriers to the flow of commerce. The conviction will now be powerfully beaten in upon the popular mind that if we desire to open our markets to products that we need, the way to go about it is by general laws, applying to all alike, and not by some special contrivance which breaks like a reed in our hands. If we are to seek new supplies abroad and to look for an enlarged foreign demand for what we produce, we must go at the matter in a large and liberal way, giving up restricted and disappointing devices and striking out on broad lines of legislation to promote trade by removing artificial obstacles to it. Such tariff doctrines as the Democrats proclaimed and sought to live up to in the last session of congress will now be felt to go more directly to the point.

Brevity.

Collier's: Robert Louis Stevenson was a close student of style and has left more than one interesting discussion of the technique of writing. In a letter to R. A. M. Stevenson, dated October, 1883, he says:

"There is but one art—to omit! Oh, if I knew how to omit, I would ask no other knowledge. A man who knew how to omit would make an 'Iliad' of a daily paper."

To men engaged in editorial writing, (which in America is the art of making ideas effective before a vast audience), and to young men and women in college who are planning to enter journalism, we recommend that the above few words of Stevenson's be committed to memory and put into practice.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1891.

•••J. A. Westby, who has large contracts for government surveying in the northern part of St. Louis county, has just come over the St. Paul & Duluth road and reports terrible devastation along the line by forest fires. He says hundreds of cattle are burned and many homesteads destroyed. The train on which he traveled stopped at Pine City and took seventeen men, women and children, settlers who barely escaped with their lives. Unless heavy rains fall at once, all the little villages and the homesteads along the St. Paul & Duluth for sixty miles will certainly be burned.

•••The Iron and Steel company yesterday closed a deal with Chicago capitalists for a lease of the blast furnace at West Duluth, which will be put in operation in sixty days. The plant cost $200,000 and has a capacity of 150 tons of iron a day. Chandler and Gogebic ores will be used, and Mr. Bertelet, one of the most experienced men in the country, will be in charge.

•••C. P. Earl of Meeker county has been added to the state grain inspection force in Duluth.

•••R. C. Kruschke of this city has patented an electric showcase and alarm.

•••The lessees of the Sheridan iron mine, on section 12, township 62-14, a few miles from Tower, are happy over the work they have accomplished. They now have opened a body of ore 30 feet wide and considerably over 100 feet long. The ore body has also been traced across three 40-acre tracts.

•••Father Giraux of the St. Jean Baptiste church returned yesterday from a three months' visit to France.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Good Business.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: The better element of the business people of West Duluth is waging warfare against the slaughter sale signs that mar the beauty of the business section of the town. Good business.

That Explains It.

Elk River Star-News: There appears to be some doubt as to the methods by which congressional candidates for congressman-at-large shall be placed on the ticket—by the nominating convention or at the primary election, same as district congressman. The politicians claim that they must be nominated at the state convention, but from quotations of the law by The Duluth Herald, it is difficult to see how they arrive at that conclusion. Should it finally be determined that they be selected at the primary election, it will be necessary to make a new alignment of candidates, as it is doubtful if any of the candidates being touted for nomination under the convention plan would stand much chance under the primary election law.

Right of Course.

Greenbush Tribune: A congressman-at-large is to be elected next year and the question of the manner of nomination is being discussed. The Duluth Herald takes the stand that the congressman-at-large should be nominated at the primary election and quotes both the federal and state law on this subject. It would seem to us that The Herald has the right idea. If the nomination for congressman-at-large is not made by the people it should be.

They Are Welcome.

Long Prairie Leader: The Duluth Herald is entitled to the thanks of the people of the state for its efforts to bring to public attention the railroad rate and tax issue.

Duluth's Fight.

Browns Valley Tribune: The jobbers in Duluth have appealed to the interstate commerce commission on account of discrimination in freight rates in favor of St. Paul and Minneapolis. The people of the entire state will watch with interest the outcome of the appeal. Through its port at Duluth Minnesota has access to the great thoroughfare from the Eastern markets which affords much cheaper transportation rates than by rail, yet through the manipulation of railroad rates, Minnesota people are benefited but little if any on account of the cheap transportation rates by water. The echoes of the proposed distance tariff law for Minnesota may yet be heard and it will not be surprising if the proposition gains many new supporters before another session of the legislature rolls around.

Fair Enough.

Pine Tree Blaze: The Duluth Herald a few days ago enumerated several uses to which the additional $2,000,000 derived from an increased railroads gross earnings tax could be put, but omitted to say that an extra session would also give the legislature a chance to redeem itself.

A Square Deal.

Sauk Center Herald: The Duluth Herald's contention that Minnesota's congressman-at-large should be nominated by the people at the primaries and not by the manipulators at the conventions, finds an echo in the heart of every citizen who believes in a square deal.

The Selfish Twins.

Greenbush Tribune: The Duluth Herald is waging a fight against the discriminatory freight rates accorded the Twin Cities at the expense of not only Duluth but the balance of the state. Such rates are unfair and unjust and there should be some means of equalizing rates so as to play fair with all parts of the state.

The "War on Business" Scare.

World's Work: Loose talk about a "war on business" does more harm than any war that is waged. If great combinations like the Standard Oil company and the American Tobacco company are punished for violations of the anti-trust law, what harm has that done to your business? Ask yourself if anybody is making war on you; and, when you hear any man talking loosely, ask him precisely what damage to his trade has been done by anybody?

Such direct and wholly honest consideration by every man of his own position would very quickly dispel such fear as exists.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Mighty few people would lie if it was a good habit.

A man's political views are governed by his bank balance.

It's queer what a good head a man can have for business until he goes into one for himself.

A blind man ought to be able to see a girl's eyes aren't green when she says they are blue.

You just can't make a woman see how, when you live in a house you own, it's rent just the same.

Unconventionalities.

Chicago Tribune: "No, I don't want any life insurance, but you can go ahead and talk; it makes me forget my toothache."

"Why, how do you do, Mr. De Trow? I was just going out walking, but you may stay if you like. Good-bye."

"I've stopped at a good many hotels, landlord, and yours is the worst I ever saw."

"If you're only going to stay a week with us, Aunt Abigail, I think maybe we can stand it."

"Mr. Spoonleigh, sis told me to tell you she's not going to come down; you're not the young man she was expecting."

"Them hands o' your'n don't need manicuring, sir; they need laundrying. Please close the door as you go out."

Another Hero.

Chatsworth Plain Dealer: In the latter part of the game Boone swallowed a big chew of tobacco which made him sick, but he pitched the game out.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Puck: Visitor—Great Scott! Why are you throwing bottles at that poor man? Are you trying to kill him?

Baseball Fan—No; not the slightest intention of it. The league is launching a new umpire and we are just christening him!

Puck: First Trustee—But this ancient institution of learning will fail unless something is done.

Second Trustee—True, but what can we do? We have already raised the tuition until it is almost 1 per cent of the fraternity fees.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Well, madam?"

"The allowance my husband makes me isn't enough."

"But, madam, we decided it was ample for your support and the support of the children."

"Yes, I know, judge, but I'll need as much more for the support of the automobile."

Judge: Crawford—Why don't you use a little common sense and look on the bright side?

Crabshaw—Why, man, you're colorblind! There isn't any bright side!

Counsel—Then you got seven-and-six-pence for the job and paid another eight shillings to do it for you? And so you lost sixpence on the transaction!

Witness—Well, ain't it worth sixpence to be boss?

Dentist—From the way you hollered I thought I had hold of the right one, but we'll call it my mistake.

The Catholic Standard and Times: "There goes Jenkins' widow."

"Yes, but he was married twice, you know."

"Well, what of that?"

"Well, is she his first or second widow?"

Punch: Rising Junior—Now, my good soul, what is the nature of your business or trade?

Dear Old Fraud (coyly)—Throwin' confetti at weddin's, sir.

Fliegende Blaetter: "Well, if you love Clara so much, why don't you marry her?"

"I wish I could. She's a perfect angel—if only her father weren't such a horrid old devil."

The Pullman Bed Davenport

Come in and let us show you this famous Revolving Seat Bed Davenport. The home supplied with a Pullman Revolving Seat Bed Davenport is equipped to meet any emergency demand for sleeping accommodations occasioned by limited bedroom space and the arrival of unexpected guests.

The Pullman Davenport will ornament the parlor of even the most elaborately furnished home. It is constructed of the finest material and of the highest grade of workmanship and finish. In appearance it cannot be detected from a solidly built Davenport, the seat alone being reversible. One slight upward pull causes the seat to revolve, bringing the bottom of the seat upward, thus exposing the folded bed spring containing the mattress. The bed spring is then drawn forward, the supporting legs dropping automatically into place.

You Do Not Sleep Upon the Upholstering

The operation necessary to open a Pullman Bed Davenport is of the simplest—in fact, it is automatic. Only two movements are necessary to change the Pullman Davenport into the Pullman Bed. It is absolutely noiseless in operation and it is so evenly balanced that a child can operate it as well as a man.

Another reason why the Pullman is an ideal Bed Davenport is that when used as a bed no weight or pressure can possibly come upon the upholstering of the Davenport. This is an exclusive feature and is not found in any other Bed Davenport. Come in and let us show you how much better the Pullman Davenport Bed is than the old style.

The Monarch Pays for Itself

Monarch MALLEABLE The "Stay Satisfactory" Range

Why put up with the uncertainties, inconveniences and frequent embarrassments that are bound to accompany the use of an ordinary steel range?

Why not know the satisfaction of always having your work perfectly done?

The Monarch Range is not a luxury. It is easily within the reach of everyone, for the saving it will effect in fuel and repair bills alone will, in a short time, pay its entire first cost.

We make this statement thoughtfully and with a desire to prove it to your satisfaction.

There is no Mystery about these things and one visit to our store will convince you of their Truth. It's simply that the Monarch is made of materials more adapted to range construction than those used in the "common sort" of steel ranges.

Unbreakable Malleable Iron is used for those parts that are made of brittle cast iron in all of the "common sort" of steel ranges. The frames of this material are joined to the steel of the body and oven by cold driven rivets, forming permanently air-tight joints.

Ordinary ranges which are made of CAST or GREY IRON and sheet steel must be bolted together and calked with stove putty. After a very short time of use these bolts work loose, the putty falls out of the seams and outside air rushes into the flues and the firebox—through every joint.

These "air leaks" WASTE FUEL—cause slow baking—POOR WORK. The truth of this is self-evident from the fact that if it wasn't necessary to have range seams TIGHT, their manufacturers wouldn't ATTEMPT to make them so by using stove putty

BACK COVERED WITH MASS OF PIMPLES

Burned and Itched So He Could Hardly Stand It. Tried Medicines, Etc., Nearly 3 Years. In Eternal Misery. Started Using Cuticura Remedies. Now Has No Sign of Skin Disease.

"My troubles began along in the summer in the hottest weather and took the form of small eruptions and itching and a kind of smarting pain. It took me mostly all over my back and kept getting worse until finally my back was covered with a mass of pimples which would burn and itch at night so that I could hardly stand it. This condition kept getting worse and worse until my back was a solid mass of big sores which would break open and run. My underclothing would be a clot of blood.

"I tried various blood medicines and other remedies and salves for nearly three years and I was not getting any benefit. It seemed I was in eternal misery and could not sleep on my back or lean back on a chair. I was finally given a set of the Cuticura Remedies by my brother who recommended them to me very highly. I started using the Cuticura Remedies and inside of two weeks I could see and feel a great relief. I kept on using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and also the Resolvent, and in about three or four months' time my back was nearly cured and I felt like a new being. Now I am in good health and no sign of any skin diseases and I am fully satisfied that Cuticura Remedies are the best ever made for skin diseases. I will always recommend them to anybody who will use according to directions. I would not be without them." (Signed) W. A. Armstrong, Corbin, Kan., May 26, 1911.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp of infants, children and adults. Although sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 27A, Boston.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

WOULD BOOM LAND VALUES

North Dakota $100 an Acre Association Has Been Formed.

Will Urge Diversified Farming and Otherwise Advance State's Wealth.

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Probably the greatest movement ever inaugurated in North Dakota for the advancement of the agricultural interests of the state is the North Dakota $100 an acre association just organized. It will be incorporated in order that the ideas to be promulgated may be carried out under the state law.

The objects of the organization are the dissemination of information among the farmers of North Dakota upon the best methods of applied agriculture and the promotion of better and more profitable cultivation of the soil, including the rotation and the diversification of crops, raising live stock, poultry and the manufacture of dairy products. Other agricultural subjects will be treated.

Fargo Is Headquarters.

Fargo is designated as the headquarters of the organization. Among the men interested and who will probably be on the board if directors are J. E. Phelan of Bowman; P. Bertleson, Kenmare; H. C. McCartney, Oakes; F. W. Cathro, Bottineau; R. C. Kittel, Casselton; R. S. Adams, Lisbon; E. Y. Sarles, Hillsboro; J. J. Neirling, Jamestown; C. B. McMillan, Hannah; E. J. Weiser, Fargo; C. W. Kelley, Devils Lake; C. L. Timmerman, Mandan; J. A. Regan, Fessenden; H. C. Plumley, Fargo and others.

The corporation is without capital stock. In addition to the directors, a board of five will compose an executive committee. A publicity and an advistory committee has also been planned. On the latter will be such men as Commissioner of Agriculture Gilbreath and President Worst of the North Dakota Agricultural college.

It is proposed to extend the work of the organization over a period of several years. The funds for the work have already been pledged and from $25,000 to $35,000 will be spent annually in the forty-nine counties. In addition to this, many counties will no doubt arrange for a local fund to be used in co-operation with this association.

The object of the movement is not to assume the work of the agricultural college, the sub-stations, the demonstration farms or the farmers' institute corps, but to supplement and co-operate with those agencies. Instead of making a general effort, the new organization will endeavor to make the work individual and personal, and direct appeals will be made to the farmers. If the farmers can be induced to co-operate, direct and personal information will be extended. If farmers do not wish the assistance they are under no obligations and need not accept it.

Practical Men Interested.

Practical men are behind the movement. They have the best interests of North Dakota at heart and believe that by improved farming methods from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000 can annually be added to the wealth of the state.

Many other prominent men than those already interested in the movement are expected to join.

Illinois has started a similar movement and the association is issuing propaganda that will help in encouraging crop diversification and crop rotation. It is thought that the North Dakota organization can accomplish a great deal more because of the increased opportunities.

Some counties have already inaugurated the movement. Barnes county has one and there are local associations in other counties of a similar nature. All these are expected to cooperate in the state-wide movement.

ISHPEMING MAN FINDS DYNAMITE

Digging Postholes and Comes Across Twelve Sticks Buried.

Ishpeming, Mich., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—A man employed digging post holes for a fence in the rear of F. Braastad's vacant lot, at the corner of Cleveland avenue and Second street, unearthed twelve sticks of dynamite. He reported the discovery to Mr. Braastad, and the explosive was taken charge of by Deputy Marshal Patrick Collins.

There is much mystery as to how the dynamite came to be buried. It was covered with about a foot of sand and was found lying against a stone wall. Mr. Braastad had the idea that it had been left there by a diamond drill crew which a few years ago bored a hole in the lot for the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company. He called up the company's office, and was told that the hole was bored under contract, and that if dynamite had been used on the work the office employes had no recollection of it.

It is not believed that the explosive was placed in the ground with malicious intent, and it will perhaps never be known how it came to be left there. It is certain, however, that the dynamite was put in the lot after the wall was constructed. This was seven or eight years ago, following the completion of Mr. Braastad's present business block. The old building, which stood on the lot was torn down after the new building was finished.

MOURNED BY MANY.

Last Rites for Ironwood Teacher Are Largely Attended.

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The funeral of Miss Margaret Kellet, who died Friday night at the home of her mother, Mrs. Sarah Kellet, Norrie location, was held Sunday afternoon from the church of the Transfiguration on Marquette street. Rev. Ross of Ashland conducted the services, there being no rector in Ironwood at present. Margaret Kellet had lived in Ironwood all her life. She was only 19 years of age. Death was caused by consumption. She was a graduate from the Luther L. Wright high school with the class of 1910, and was loved by her classmates and all others who knew her. Last year she taught at the Oliver school and after school closed last year went to Scranton, Pa., to see if her health would improve. On her return she intended to teach again this year signing her contract for the position of teacher. The deceased leaves a mother, two sisters, Penny and Arthea, and six brothers, Will, Fred, Enoch, Robert, Walter and John.

The following girl friends acted as pall bearers: Margaret Exworthy, Jessie Woods, Georgina Dixon, Hildur Erickson, Laura Ellibost and Doris Cheiholm. Six other girls carried flowers. Many very beautiful floral pieces and large bunches of flowers were sent. The funeral was very large, the church was filled and interment was at Riverside cemetery.

Mrs. Johnson of Buhl came down to attend the funeral.

LEPER FOR TWELVE YEARS.

Minneapolis Tailor's Condition Is Revealed By Death.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 26.—After having suffered from leprosy for twelve years, during which time he walked the streets, worked and had unlimited opportunity to transmit the disease, Ludwig C. Dyregrov, a tailor, is dead at his home here. The nature of the malady was discovered after Coroner Seashore viewed the body, suspected leprosy and sent the remains to Dr. H. B. Robertson of the University of Minnesota, who performed an autopsy.

The health department was immediately notified so steps could be taken to prevent danger of infection.

DEAL DECLARED OFF.

Iowan Fails to Make Good on Polk County Purchase.

Crookston, Minn., Sept. 26.—Ernest Rolsch has returned from Castalia, Iowa, the home of J. F. Perry, to whom he thought he had sold his farm south of the city. Mr. Rolsch says the bank officials on which the check was drawn said there were no funds to meet it, and that Perry was badly tied up with other deals. The three horses for which he had a bill of sale Mr. Rolsch state, had been sold before he reached Castalia, by relatives of Perry. Mr. Rolsch says he returned the bill of sale, gave back the check and returned with the deal entirely off.

GYPSIES BATHE IN BLOOD

Poured on Warring Factions to Celebrate Settling Trouble.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 26.—With weird incantations, lasting for nearly twenty-four hours and ending with the slaughter of a lamb and the pouring of its blood over the members of the warring factions, two tribes of gypsies settled their differences on a farm west of here. Five members of the tribe of Bimble who were to have been tried for assaulting and robbing Teda Coughlan, a member of a rival tribe, were released from custody by the tribal court.

More than 300 gypsies, many of whom had traveled hundreds of miles, attended the powwow, which was to bring peace and the head of four tribes sat in judgment on the alleged wrongs of Coughlan. They decreed that the members of the Bimble family should pay him $1,000 and pay all costs which might have arisen out of the arrest and prosecution of the members of the tribe.

Coughlan and the venerable Steve Bimble, leader of the tribe, embraced each other and then drank from the cup of lamb's blood, in token that all differences had been eradicated.

THIEF RIVER MAY BUILD AUXILIARY POWER PLANT.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—This city recently voted bonds to the amount of $40,000 for the purpose of constructing an auxiliary steam plant to aid the present city owned electric plant in maintaining its service with satisfactory results to the taxpayers. Committees were sent to neighboring cities to investigate steam and oil plants and returned with a report in favor of a steam proposition. It is possible that the council may decide to purchase the water power and dam site here, at present owned by Mrs. Kretzschmar. They can secure this valuable property at a reasonable ure and if they do this will be in a position to sell power to manufacturing concerns now located here. The cause of the erection of an auxiliary plant is the low water in the Red Lake river, something which has not occurred to such an extent since the occupation of this territory by white men.

WOMAN'S REALM.

"Oh yes, we had good times out there at Hardy hall in those days," said Miss Eileen Errol, who is to be one of the new members of the reorganized Forbes stock company, which will appear at the Lyceum during the winter, this morning in talking of her early life spent in Duluth.

Miss Errol, who is known to Duluthians as Anne Louise Hay, was one of the students at the old Hardy hall, when that institution was a fashionable "finishing school," and she was well known in social circles here. She traveled for a year after leaving here and then went on the stage professionally and this is her first appearance on the stage here, though she played in Superior a few years ago.

"I shall never walk down Superior street, I know," she continued, "without expecting every minute to have some Frauline or Mademoiselle tap me on the shoulder and ask what I am doing.

"I liked the school awfully well but I was only a youngster you know.

MISS EILEEN ERROL.

Why, I came here in short skirts and spring heeled shoes and was happy until after our first dance and then I saw if I was to be in it at all I should have to do up my hair and have a long skirt. I teased my mother for a long while and finally she sent me the long skirt which I paraded in on Sundays when we were allowed to have company.

"I remember the other girls crawling out of the windows and skipping over to the bridge where there was pretty sure to be some one with a box of candy or flowers. I had my first real beau while I was at school there too, that was after I had got my long skirt.

"I just got in this morning and am awfully anxious to see some of my friends but I didn't have time before the rehearsal this morning. Gracious I believe it is near my entrance now" and she skipped off to take up her cue.

The company was rehearsing for its first play "In the Bishop's Carriage."

THE EVENING STORY

The Venom of Love

By Joseph R. Reham.

"I can't meet you Sunday, I'm not going to meet you any more."

Nan leaned back among the fragrant Capebroom, jutting its golden spray through the fence, her eyes upon the ground, seeking refuge from the open avowal Sid's stupid obtuseness forced upon her.

He stepped forward, his hand fell upon her shoulder, turning her roughly, compelling her to face the situation.

"I'm sick of you," she whimpered, "so there!"

"There's someone else?"

He was still dragging at her, forcing her eyes to his.

"Well, what if there is?" She faced him, a small fury. "Haven't I a right to please myself?"

"If there is——" He threw her off with such violence that she rebounded from the fence, and her bonnet was tossed over her eyes.

Nan tore her hat off. "There is! There is!" she cried.

The girl caught herself up with a grasp. Sid was looking very ugly just then. In the eyes that stabbed her there was a vicious heat, his mouth was slightly open, the under jaw rigid.

"You little beast!" he said. He held her tightly. "It's Bodio." The pressure increased, bruising her soft, slim body. "It's Bodio."

"Yes, it is," she answered, defiantly. "A Dago. A dirty Dago," and he pushed her away, his face full of disgust.

"He's lovely. I don't care what you think. I don't care what you say, he's lovely."

For a moment it seemed that he might beat her. Then he swung himself away as from some sweet lure, and fled down the path, almost running.

For over three weeks Sidney Wood saw nothing of Nan, but he heard of her often, and always in association with Gian Bodio, the dapper, black-eyed Italian who speared oysters with amazing dexterity on the right side of Silvio Panzacchi's shop front, while Nan boxed candy and bagged bananas behind her natty little counter on the left.

This had been three weeks of torment for Sid. Emotions he never dreamed of bred in his soul, and fed on him. He found himself still wide awake in the black morning hours, writhing in a little hell that seemed to well out of himself. It amazed him that Nan mattered so much.

Sid had luxurious waking dreams when his contempt and hatred for Nan gave way to an ineffable tenderness, and no thoughts came but of her prettiness, and softness and glorlousness of her hair, the warmth of her small mouth, her sweetness, gentle actions of hers, loving words. Other rapturous moments were devoted to the utter destruction of Gian Bodio, moments full of the glorious ecstasy of murder.

Sid was a commonplace youth in a commonplace world, suddenly thrust into a vortex of the emotions that make for tragedy.

One moonlight night, after following them like a blackmailer for an hour, creeping meanly from bush to bush, he saw Gian kiss Nan good-night by the Capebroom hedge, where he and she had so often parted. The Italian held her close in his arms, and kissed her again and again, with uncouth, noisy kisses. Suddenly Sid arose. He understood now what it all meant. He realized in a moment what the fury and the fever had prompted. Nan must die. He would kill her.

No argument followed, no self questioning. In his mind there were no doubts. He no longer cherished enmity towards Gian Bodio; his soul was absorbed in the killing of Nan. That purpose of itself bred a sort of passion as he nursed it, a passion that absorbed him. In his mind he accomplished the deed a hundred times in a hundred ways. Never had he loved Nan as he loved her now. His dreamings of the murder hour had all the delight of a happy lover's anticipations.

Again and again he went to Silvio Panzacchi's fishe and fruit shop, and watched Nan from one of the little dark cribs in which Panzacchi's dubious oysters were eaten, attracted by the white plumpness of her throat, thinking of the faint drumming at her side where he had heard her strong young heart beating. "How?" was an important question. He thought of many ways—the thinking pleased him. He found pleasure in protracting this murder. He might have killed her twenty times; but after two months he was still asking "when?"

Then he heard she was to be at the trade picnic with Gian, and that decided him. At the picnic, somewhere in the bush, before the eyes of her Dago, he would kill her. He knew now. Again and again in his mind he enacted that scene, picturing all the details.

None detected the smallest evidence of Sid's intention as they drove to the picnic. Gian sat on Nan's left. Next her on the right, pressed very close, was Martin Sickert, big, black haired, violet eyed, handsome, a suburban Mephistopheles. He certainly enjoyed more of Nan's attentions than poor Bodio; yet Martin was nothing but lorryman for Sin Me, the banana king, with a few dollars a week, and the drink habit. Throughout the morning at Grass creek too, Nan flirted openly and impudently with Sickert, and Bodio sat with his back to a gum butt, and watched them, small and silent, no emotion in his pale face.

Nan was conscious of Bodio, but gave no thought to Sidney, and he too was watching. It was not till after dinner, when Martin was too drunk to be companionable, that Nan returned to the Italian. There were no reproaches. They sat together for half an hour, and then went off through the trees and along the creek. Sid followed. He felt his moment was at hand. Near the camp they passed from view beyond a clump of saplings. He waited, but they did not reappear.

He stole forward, crept quietly to the saplings, arose, and pushed his way through, without a sound, his hand on the weapon, his soul hot with resolution.

He stopped. There they were. Nan lay upon the grass, Bodio knelt upon her, his knee crushing her breast, his left hand gripped about her throat. In his right hand he held a knife, from the bright blade of which the sunlight flamed. His face was close to hers, his teeth bared, and he spat Roman oaths at her with something of the tiger, something of the snake. His face was controted with abominable malice, hers wild with the horror of death.

For one tense moment, Sidney gazed down upon the lovers, and then a heart burst filled him with blind rage. He hurled himself at Bodio.

A moment later the two men were on their feet fighting. Nan crouched down, backing under cover of the saplings, watched them, mad with fear.

Sid was sparring and punching with bare hands. The other slashed with his knife in a blind fury. Instinctively Wood's left shot for the face with every movement of the Italian. His arms were cut. He got the knife in his breast again, and he saw Bodio's chin as through a mist, and swung his right with all his weight and power that he could put into it. The Italian collapsed on himself, and went down limp and lifeless. Sid staggered to his knees, and then fell, face foremost, across the body of his foe.

Nan was running towards the picnic party white and wild, shrieking, "Murder, murder!"

The men found Gian on his knees, still dazed; but Sidney lay prone, bleeding from a dozen wounds. "Take care of Nan," he whispered. "For God's sake, take care of Nan. The Dago will kill her."

A Couple of Don'ts

By JOHN WATSON WHYTE.

I have often read in papers which devote themselves to women's interests writings which warn young wives not to worry their husbands of an evening with domestic details.

Husbands, even tired husbands, like to hear domestic details so long as they are presented in the right light, that is, cheerfully and with a sense of humor.

It cheers a husband up to hear that the servant has fallen upstairs with the best tea set and smashed half of it, or that the cake has climbed out of its tin and spread all over the gas oven.

"Don't" make a tragedy of it, and he won't, and if the cat has got away with some fish destined for tomorrow's breakfast, he will probably laugh and will be quite content to make good with eggs—and store eggs at that.

But if you present these little bits of domestic news with a face as long as a wet Sunday they will depress him so that he is as unable to see the joke as you are.

Now for the final "Don't."

Don't, if your husband has made a mistake, remind him of it. Mistakes will happen in the best regulated families, and the best of husbands will make them. He may have forgotten to post the important batch of letters which you entrusted to him last week; he may have lent money to an unworthy friend; he may have put his lighted pipe in the pocket of his best coat and burned it beyond repair.

If you rise to these occasions he will see that you are a woman of great mind and understanding, and will regard you accordingly.

Duluth Woman's Club Leads in Reports at Sauk Center

Sauk Center, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The council of the Minnesota Federation of Woman's Clubs met at 9:30 this morning in the Congregational church here, with Mrs. C. G. Higbee of St. Paul in the chair. One hundred and fifty delegates were present, representing nearly every county in the state.

In the discussion and report on Caroline Bartlett Crane's work in Minnesota, Duluth stood first and was applauded. It has purchased ninety copies of her report out of 130 sold in Minnesota.

Twenty-one clubs answered "Yes" to the question of purchasing the organ. The St. Paul Bethel representative said they were poor, but would do their share for the home school for girls. Mrs. Kinley of Minneapolis thought this question should be deferred until after a visit to the school.

At 10:30 the executive committee met.

In the afternoon session O. Sheleusener sang Tolstoi's "Could I," with Miss Erwin as accompanist. Then the invocation was given by Miss Annabel Emerson and an address of welcome by Mrs. Barto. Mrs. C. G. Higbee responded. Greeting was given by Miss Margaret J. Evans.

At the evening session Mrs. Fannie French Morse will speak and other experts will talk on "Social Hygiene."

Though May and Florence Sutton are rivals in the game of tennis there is no unsisterly feeling between them. Their rivalry does not interfere with the cordiality of their relations. May has the better record, but she says that she would just as soon have Florence win as win herself. The Sutton girls have been playing on the Eastern circuit all summer and this picture was made when they were at Cleveland recently.

SOME SIGN POSTS AT THE SPORTING CROSSROADS

IN professional sport there is such a thing as character. After a careful survey of the characters that have gone to make up the various branches of professional sport, past and present, it will be found that after all, the American people have the fondest memory for the athlete who represented the truest character.

There are some reformers who will hold right at the outset that any man who fights for the means of livelihood has not any character at all. Right here the premise prop would be knocked out from under the contention framework of the argument. But any one who follows the times, with his ear to the ground for the expression of the "peepul," will find that character, as many of us understand it, is comparative, after all.

You can go out any evening where those fond of the quiet chat are found—and these kind of people are distinctly distinguished from the type "sport" who hangs out in front of some saloon and ogles women who may be without escorts—and chat about fighters, past and present. Invariably before the evening has pleasantly flown on the swift wings of gossip, you will find some one harping back to the days of John Lawrence Sullivan.

Here is where it must be said that character is character, or perhaps relative. According to the finer ideas of character, those ideas moulded in the gentler places, poor old John would be stripped of every shred of character and would be left a shameless creature, wandering aimlessly in this wicked world.

In the sporting world the people therein have curious and peculiar ideas regarding character. A man may drink and use the language, originally intended to be beautiful, carelessly and coarsely. He may do almost anything and everything, but if he is on the square he is granted the ticket of character that will admit him into the inner circle.

And thus as the years roll ceaselessly by, taking toll here and there of veterans who sat at that hot ringside at the swampside in Mississippi, or of others who more comfortably and more luxuriously enjoyed the battle at New Orleans, or followed the big fellow on the barge, you can still find in the graying ranks of those who "knowed him in his prime," men who will swear and argue and even fight for the contention that John L. Sullivan was the greatest fighter that ever lived, and in addition was a royal good fellow.

Underneath this loyalty to a fighter who has passed the way most fighters go, is the pertinent fact that John Sullivan never "threw" his friends or the public. "Yours on the level, John L. Sullivan," was an expression that traveled around the world with the fame of the Boston strong boy. It was true, too. Right there you can find the rude key to the character of the greatest natural fighter the American ring ever produced, and the man who stood by his friends.

Just the other day a Duluth man was telling of Sullivan's trip to England. He had two friends with him. Sullivan was invited into some club of London and started to take his American friends with him. They tried to be tactful with John, and in a gentle sort of way convey their meaning, which was that the friends should not go in.

Right there and then, when he finally comprehended their meaning, Mr. Sullivan of Boston, U. S. A. flatly and with considerable heat, informed the Englishmen that his American friends were quite as good as any of the royalty he had been asked to meet, and that unless they stepped in with him, John L. Sullivan would not go a foot.

In his own light, Sullivan was an honest and fearless man. His heavy bark drew much water and remained blissfully out in the ocean of ignorance, never attempting to run the shoals of culture. He was a rude and strong force among men who made the sporting world of that time. He stood by his friends and threw his scorn in the face of his enemies. Perhaps that is the reason that today you often hear James J. Jeffries called a "big boob," which in its most lenient translation means "he ain't no gent."

Be it at Zanzabar or in the more exclusive circles that flank society in all its magnificence, there are shades and degrees of character.

Indeed, Mr. Sullivan cut quite a wide swath in his own particular circle, and we dare any reformer, near sighted to all but the more lofty attributes, to say, in the presence of some of the older set, that he hasn't.

AS THE sere and yellow leaf stage of the season's transition comes upon us, there may be some doubt as to the continued interest in baseball. Or it may be that up in this part of the country we have come used to the earlier closing of the national sport and permit our interest to gradually wane.

There has been much discussion relative to the long and short baseball season. In Chicago at the present time perhaps some of the sorely disappointed fans are thoroughly in favor of the short season. On the other hand perhaps it may be that the fans of gay Gotham are eagerly awaiting the time for the beginning of the world's series.

But with football crowding in the wings in early September, there is at least a strong rival to baseball clamoring for the center of the stage. Baseball is a game so engrossing that in its season we generally give ourselves up to it in undivided attention. Therefore there are those who hold that it is rather selfish for the magnates of some of the larger leagues to crowd games into the cooling month of brown October.

October generally marks the beginning of the winter sport program as well. The lateness of the season for the holding of the annual world's championship series may be one of the reasons why some of the various managers and the members of the national commissioners have been disappointed in the attendance figures.

DARBY O'BRIEN, the intrepid Irish Orator, will make his debut as an arbiter of wrestling, Saturday evening when he will referee the preliminaries to the big Pilakoff-Rogers match. The leader of the White Sox was signed for the occasion yesterday, his qualification papers being that he has refereed some of the big matches of Otto Suter, the famous Cleveland welterweight, when that mat star was wrestling in Cleveland.

As a speaker Darby has won fame since coming to the Head of the Lakes. On various occasions he has given talks in nearly every city of the Minny league circuit. As a referee he should make a distinct hit. Perhaps if the crowd should rise on its collective feet and yell that the decision of the Orator was very bum, he would get a human interest conception of some of the gentle heart burnings that one of those down trodden umpires gets most every hot sunny afternoon of the baseball season.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 26.—New York won the final game of the series with Cincinnati yesterday 2 to 0. Crandall was in superb form and allowed the home club only four scattered hits. New York hit Suggs hard, but sensational fielding, especially the throwing of McLean, held the visitors down. Five New Yorkers were caught on bases, while an equal number were left on bases. The first two innings resulted in some fine fielding and no scores, but in the third Fletcher started with a single, Meyers fanned and Crandall died at first. Then Devore singled, scoring Fletcher, but when Devore tried to score on Doyle's single he was caught at the plate.

Nothing in scoring happened again until the ninth when Snodgrass singled, Murray sacrificed and Herzog's single brought Snodgrass home. Score: R. H. E.

CHICAGO WINS CLOSE GAME FROM BOSTON.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Chicago gained a few points on New York yesterday in the pennant race by defeating Boston, 6 to 5. The deciding run was the result of Boston's lone error, a stolen base and a single. The rest of the runs made by the locals were the outcome of two bases on hits, a sacrifice and bunched hits. Richie started to pitch for Chicago, but his wildness, with two bunched hits, resulted in two runs, one of which was forced home. Cole succeeded Richie and Reece singled and a wild pitch gave the visitors two more runs. Another single and a base on balls resulted in Brown being called. A sacrifice off Brown gave Boston another run.

Cy Young, the veteran pitcher, worked for Boston, pitching his first game on the West side grounds and was given a warm reception by the small crowd. Two games were scheduled but the first was called off on account of wet grounds. Score: R. H. E.

COUNT MUELLER DOING THE BROOKLYN CATCHING.

It might be noticed that Count Otto Mueller, as he was known here, but Miller as he is known in the big league, is doing the catching for Brooklyn these fall days. The work of the former Duluth receiver has been first class, according to the Eastern papers, and the prediction is made that the Count will be the regular receiver for the Trolley Dodgers next season.

THORBURN WINS HEAT.

Youngster Defeats Lathrup and Thompson in Sculling Race.

Much to the surprise of the coach of the Duluth Boat club, Cliff Thorburn last evening won one of the heats of the single races, held at the club. "Tony" Puck and "Bill" L'Strange won the other two heats.

Joe Lathrup and Thompson had been picked as the winners. Thorburn had not been even considered as a likely candidate. He has received little coaching and was not figured in the calculations. But he came to the start and won from Lathrup by two lengths, also handily defeating Thompson in the same heat.

Thorburn is but a youngster and is perhaps one of the very best oarsmen in the entire club. Most of the critics believed that there were worse oarsmen than Thorburn in the first eight the past season. But if the worth of the youngster has been recognized late, it has been recognized generally and it would not be at all surprising to see him stroking the junior eight next season.

HARVARD SQUADS OUT AND SHOW UP WELL.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 26.—The Harvard football squad was given its first scrimmage yesterday and nearly every candidate was in the line-up. The two squads were kept at work for fifty minutes. Varsity got three touchdowns in the first twenty minutes of play.

The Harvard freshmen came out for the first time yesterday with an unusually heavy array of fifty-seven men. The material is most promising for a strong freshman team.

TIGERS RELEASE MEN BUT RETAIN OPTIONS.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 26.—President Navin of the Detroit baseball club yesterday announced the release of eight players, all under agreements which will permit their recall later if desired. Buck Miller, Evans, Orcutt, Skeels and Wright go to the Buffalo Eastern League club, while Chattanooga gets Cruise. Gordon and Hannah.

Reynolds, the South Atlantic leaguer, on whom the St. Louis Americans recently refused to waive, has come back to the Detroit club.

PROMISING SQUAD OUT AT ANNAPOLIS.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26.—With a squad of newly appointed candidates, two-thirds of whom are experienced men of last year's team, the midshipmen had their first football practice on Worden field yesterday and were put through all the rudiments of the game. While several good men were lost by graduation in June, prospects for a strong team are considered bright.

EVANS WINS FINAL MATCH AT EKWANOK.

Manchester, Vt., Sept. 26.—Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, won the thirty-six-hole finals for the Equinox cup at the Ekwanok Country club yesterday afternoon when he defeated F. A. Martin, Ekwanok, 3 up and 2 to play.

F. B. Davidson, captain of the Harvard team, won in the second division by defeating H. W. Brown of the Philadelphia Country club, 7 up and 2 to play.

GOPHERS START SECRET PRACTICE WORK FOR AMES

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 26.—Scrimmage work started yesterday on Northrop field behind closed gates and the followers of Gopher football will not have another opportunity to see their favorites in action until they trot onto the field to meet Ames next Saturday.

Dr. Williams and his men have a hard task cut out for them. There is material at the university in an abundance never before seen, but the dread spectre of conditions is casting an ominous shadow over the big enclosure. The coaches are worried over the outlook. Few of the men that are wanted to make up the team that will play Ames have the faculty's sanction to get into the game. Some of the men will be given examinations this week that will determine their football careers for the year of 1911. The majority of the athletes have a jaunty self-confidence in their scholastic knowledge that is giving the coaches courage. John McEwen, one of the promising candidates for the center position, goes up against his scholastic enemy late today. He has a condition in mathematics that he is sure he can put away.

Examinations This Week.

Powers, Robinson and Capron, a badly needed trio, are still grinding along in preparation for their examinations. They will sit at the feet of the faculty inquisitors some day this week and if they clear the academic hurdles, the outlook will be a bit brighter. Rosenwald is still a doubtful quantity. His position is waiting for him whenever the faculty says he may have it, and Frank, Shaughnessy, Erdall and many others are obliged to have a scrimmage with their instructors.

Practice will be anything but easy this week. Ames has one of the best teams in its history. Most of last year's veterans are back and they have the advantage of about two weeks more training than the Gophers. Clyde Williams is again coaching the farmers this year and he is generally counted upon to turn out a team that gives a good account of itself. But conditions are giving the Iowa Williams pause as well as his namesake at Minnesota. Andrews, the most promising looking candidate for quarterback at Ames is reported practically out of the running on account of failure in a study. To date, he is about the only man lost to the team though, and his inability to get into the game has not disorganized the squad noticeably.

Byers Is Hopeful.

Prof. Byers, faculty member of the athletic board at Ames, said yesterday that the Gophers should not hold his team in contempt. He is a firm believer in the Ames boys and says they are going to make a far better showing than last year. The troubles of the Gophers with conditions is known to the Ames people and Prof. Byers said yesterday:

"We are going to hand Minnesota a big surprise some of these days. That does no mean that we are going to beat them Saturday, but we hope to assume our old position in Western football within the next few years. We look for a return of the old days when Minnesota considered us an opponent as dangerous as Wisconsin or any of the other big universities. A gradual change is going on in Ames athletics. Formerly, the big farmer lads did not think football a game worthy of their consideration, but recently every one is taking an interest that bodes ill for Minnesota."

There will not be a single minute of open practice at Northrop field today. Scrimmage will start and finish with the iron gates closed and padlocked. Strips of canvas will further assist in obstructing the vulgar gaze of the proletariat and husky students will see to it that the prying eyes are kept away.

ALL-STAR TEAM PICKED FROM THE MINNY LEAGUE

Ere these sere and yellow leaves are buried in the first blizzard that comes hurling and shrieking its way uncomfortably into our midst, it is time we pay decent respects to the dead and buried, sing a requiem, as it were, and pick an all-star team from the various players of the Minny league.

For the past two seasons The Herald has selected what it believed would be the strongest possible combination of players among the various performers, simply because difference of opinion invariably creates interest, as you can very seldom find more than two or three persons agreed on the personnel of any all-star combination.

But anyway the fans have their opinions, and perhaps some of them will coincide with the following selection:

The Pitchers.

This combination would give a happy medium of heavy hitting and fast fielding. Starting with the pitchers, it might be said that Woodburn, Dauss and Dahlgren were the bright particular hurling stars of the league. But Wagner pitched consistent ball during the greater part of the season and his work did much to keep the Pirates in the lead until the last leg of the race.

Dahlgren proved a star in this league, though close observers of baseball have their doubts of his making good in faster company. We know what Woodburn did here and what he has done with the Cardinals. He had more stuff than any pitcher in the circuit the present season. Ranking next to Woodburn, George Dauss is the greatest pitcher of the circle, and when right, was invincible.

The Catchers.

Hargrove is not picked as one of the catchers for the simple reason that he fails to use his head behind the bat. Possessed of a great throwing arm and a horse for work, he used poor judgment the past season in signaling for the different batters.

Lizette has a great baseball head and is a wise old owl squatted on his haunches behind the waiting hitter. At times his arm cannot be depended upon, but it is a fact that all of the Superior pitchers liked to see him behind the bat and also speak volumes of praise for the way "Liz" handled their offerings and outguessed the batter.

Anderson of Winona played a clean and fast game for the Pirates. His coming to the Pirates from Red Wing strengthened them and kept them in the lead during the greater part of the season. Anderson is a youngster and should make good in faster company in another year or two.

In the Infield.

There is little doubt regarding the ability of Dolan at first base. He had all the other first sack guardians beaten a mile. Not only was the old boy the best fielding initial sack tender in the league, but his hitting has won him a place in the American association.

There will be some difference of opinion over the selection of Grogan as station master at the second sack. Kerman is the choice of some of the fans. But Grogan is by far the best fielder in the league in his position, and working with Bancroft, the team work of the pair fairly swept the Superior team into the pennant. With Bancroft on the other side of him, Grogan would cut off hits, would execute fast double plays, and would play such a brilliant game that his weakness with the stick would be overlooked. Moreover, he has brains, and that is what you want on a baseball team.

There is no dispute over the selection of Bancroft of Superior for the place at short. The youngster played a brilliant game and was a big factor in the great defensive work of his team. A brilliant future is predicted for Banny, for he is a quick thinker and in addition has a wonderful pair of hands.

Little Leber played a remarkable game for his first year out. He came near going up, and with consistent improvement he is going to develop into a star. His work at third was consistent and he hit out many a victory for the Sox with his trusty bludgeon.

The Outfield Trio.

Graves played a great game in left for Winona and was a great help to Joe Kilfhan. Graves had that valuable assistance to a ball player, a good head, is fast on the bases and a clever fielder. He is fairly entitled to the place in left, for it is a very hard hit ball that gets away from Graves.

Elmer Miller was by far the best outfielder in the league. It is doubtful if in the three years existence of the organization there has been an out gardener to compare with the brilliant patch tender of the White Sox. He has not a single weakness. He goes back and camps under long hit flies or comes in like a race horse and picks low, rakish liners off his shoe strings.

Then, in addition to all this, he has a wonderful whip. No fielder ever developed in this league has had the strength and accuracy of arm of the Miller man. With a continuation of the improvement Miller showed here the past season, he is going to make a Fred Clarke, a Jimmy Shekard, or a Fielder Jones.

Russ Bailey deserves the other place in the garden. He is a sure and clever fielder and plays the batter well. In addition to that his hitting would help the mythical team in any of its mythical games.

This all-star team, with some coaching, though we hesitate to name the manager, would play a great game for a bunch of minors, and would be a very fair and just representation of the league.

YOUNG THOMAS OUTPOINTS BROWN

New Orleans Fighter Given Popular Decision Over Hibbing Youth.

New Orleans, Sept. 26.—Joe Thomas had the better of Pal Brown of Hibbing, Minn., last night in a ten-round battle fought before the New Orleans Athletic club. While no decisions are allowed here, the popular verdict of the spectators gave the decision to the little New Orleans battler.

For the first three rounds Brown had all the better of it. Thomas is a novice in big fights and he was afraid and badly affected with stage fright. He kept backing away from Brown and covering up when the rangy lad from the North feinted a him. But the cries of the spectators aroused some fighting spirit in Thomas, and starting with the fourth round he clearly outboxed the visitor, drawing blood and often reaching Brown's face with his left.

Thomas was faster and the better boxer, though his blows did not seem to worry Brown. Both boys did not seem to be in the best of condition and seemed glad when the gong rang for the final round.

Dahlen Will Remain.

Pittsburg, Sept. 26.—President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn National league baseball club today announced here that "Bad Bill" Dahlen again has been signed as manager of the Brooklynites for 1912. This settles once for all the many rumors going the rounds that Dahlen probably would get his "walking papers."

It was also announced that the following players have been signed to play with the Trolley Dodgers in 1912: Outfielder Davidson, First Baseman Daubert, Pitchers Rucker and Ragon, Catcher Erwin, Infielder Tooley and Outfielder Wheat.

AUTHORITIES OPPOSE FIGHT

Say Johnson-Wells Bout Is Against the Laws of England.

London, Sept. 26.—Home Secretary Churchill has decided that the Johnson-Wells fight is illegal and that unless the promoters voluntarily abandon the match, they will be arraigned before a magistrate to prevent a breach of the peace. It will be for the magistrate to decide after hearing the evidence, whether the match is contrary to law.

The promoters, however, do not intend to abandon it, and Johnson and Wells have signed articles agreeing to box under the National Sporting club rules.

Therefore it is expected that proceedings will be undertaken in the Bow street police court and will form a test case, governing the future of boxing in this country.

While the agitation is based on religious and moral grounds, the real trouble is the color question. It is the fear of the influence of a black victory on Great Britain's colored subjects that weighs most with the authorities.

Bowlers' Meeting.

A meeting of officers and members of the Commercial Bowling league is called for this evening at the Grand alleys. It is also requested that the officers of the Major league be present, as there are some plans for the coming season to discuss, as well as some business of last season to clean up. A large attendance of bowlers is expected.

NORTHERNS WIN HOCKEY CONTEST

Big Duluths Defeated on Rollers By the Score of 8 to 5.

The first game of roller hockey ever played in this city, or in the Northwest for that matter, was put on at the Auditorium last evening before a very good crowd, the Northern Hardware team winning from the Big Duluths by the score of 8 to 5.

Instead of the customary seven men used in the regular ice hockey game, but five men were used in the indoor game, this arrangement doing away with the rover and cover point. The contest was fast and interesting all the way through and unmistakably made a hit with the crowd.

At the end of the first half the score was even up at four all, in the second half the Hardware men came strong, Solheim scoring two goals, Seamore one, Le Fleur one, and McGinnis one for the Big Duluths.

| Big Duluths. | Position. | Northerns |
|---|---|---|
| Olund | g | Staunton |
| Thannon | p | Seamore |
| McGinnis | c | Le Fleur |
| | | King and |
| Peterson | lw | Tratton |
| Dennis | rw | Solheim |

The next game will be played Thursday evening and a good game is expected.

PILAKOFF EXPECTED HERE BY THURSDAY MORNING.

Dispatches from Buffalo state that Yankee Rogers, the big New England champion, has left Buffalo for the long ride to this city. The big fellow should reach Duluth tomorrow morning and will taper off in his work here.

As a victory over Pilakoff means a chance to meet Zbyszko in one of his big matches the present season, Rogers will strive mightily for victory.

Pilakoff should be in Thursday morning at the latest. The giant Finn has been training in Chicago with Charles Postl, a famous trainer of athletes, and in addition working out with the best wrestling talent of the Windy City. He should step on the mat in superb condition.

The selection of the referee will be left until the two men reach the city.

GOOD PROGRAM AT COLUMBUS RACE MEET.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 26.—The second day's program of the fall race meeting at the Columbus Driving park calls for the distribution of $13,000 if all events scheduled for today are finished. Two sets of colt trotters will compete for Horse Review prizes, $3,000 being up for the 2-year-olds and $6,500 for the 3-year-olds.

For the 2:07 pace the field is not large, but there will be some competition, as among the probable starters are Shaughran, Gingcer, Twinkling Dan, Don, and Peter the Second.

Denver Cinches Flag.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 26.—By winning yesterday's game from Des Moines, 8 to 0, while Pueblo was winning from St. Joseph, Denver made sure its hold on the Western league pennant. Schreiber's pitching was the feature.

W. I. League Meeting.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 26.—The annual meeting of the Wisconsin-Illinois Baseball league was postponed to January after many matters of minor interest were discussed.

WILEY HAS NOTHING AGAINST HIS ENEMIES.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 26.—Dr. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture, who has arrived here to attend the conservation congress, said in an interview that he held nothing against the men who prompted the recent investigation of his work.

"They probably did not understand the law as I did," he said.

A Scientific Achievement

The discovery and turning in an alarm of fire makes possible the heroic work of the firemen in putting it out.

Undiscovered, a fire spreads with amazing rapidity, destroying everything within reach.

The discovery of the dandruff germ was of inestimable value to mankind, but only because it paved the way for the greater service, the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is contagious, and its spread is checked by the use of Herpicide. This delightful scalp dressing kills the germ, and prevents the hair from falling. It stops that itching almost instantly.

Herpicide is the one standard and original dandruff germ destroyer. Any other preparation making this claim is an imitation.

Recommended and applied by first-class barbers.

FIRST TRAIN WILL BE RUN THROUGH TUNNEL WEDNESDAY

INSIDE THE TUNNEL LOOKING OUT.

After several months of hard work during which time many difficulties were encountered, the 500-foot bore through the solid granite hill at Shortline Park has been completed, and the most difficult piece of railroad building on the new line of the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific, finished. Today, workmen are laying track through the tunnel and Wednesday of this week, it is expected that the first locomotive will pass through the hill.

The job has been a hard one from the start. Chief Engineer Hazen of the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific and Resident Engineer Harbolt have been in immediate charge. Foley, Welch & Stewart, the original contractors, sublet the contract to the O'Connell company which was obliged to call in the Fort Wayne Electric company to help out with the work. This was because of the exceptional hardness of the rock, which seemed impregnable to anything but the electric drill equipment of the latter concern.

Rock Very Hard.

According to R. C. Dugdale of the Fort Wayne Electric company the rock taken from the hill in making the bore resembles to a great extent, that out of which the pyramids were built. It is extremely hard, blue-black in color, and weathers to a grayish color. It corresponds somewhat to black granite. The tunnel is approximately 500 feet long and the bore is 17½ by 26 feet. It has a 1 per cent grade and describes a seven degree curve.

An instance which might serve to show the hardiness of the rock is that in one charge of 400 pounds of 75 per cent nitro-glycerine, only 150 cubic yards of material were displaced. When the O'Connell company first took over the job, they were obliged to throw out the air compressor apparatus for drilling and substitute the electric equipment. The hill through which the bore is made extends 176 feet above the roof of the tunnel.

The finishing of the Shortline park tunnel marks the completion of the second railroad tunnel through solid rock to get into the city, the other being the 300-foot bore made by the Soo under Michigan street under the shoulder of the hill which comes down towards the bay at about Tenth avenue west.

The Shortline Park tunnel was begun last September and the work has taken just a year. The Soo tunnel was more than a year in the hands of workmen. The building of the new road from the north has been a costly job throughout, as it was necessary in addition to the tunnel, to make several detours around rocky cliffs and many expensive rock cuts or open tunnels. The cost of the Shortline Park tunnel will probably run about $100,000.

VISIT PROPOSED RIVERSIDE PARK

A representative from the city engineer's office and the special committee appointed by the West Duluth Commercial club to direct the campaign for an extension of Fairmont park to the bay front, this afternoon made a trip of inspection over the property which will have to be acquired.

It is proposed to buy a strip of land on either side of Kingsbury creek from the southerly end of the park to the river. The creek terminates in a beautiful lagoon surrounded by high, sloping shores, an ideal place for park purposes, and although owned privately, is now the rendezvous of summer picnic parties.

The cost of the proposed extension is largely a matter of guesswork so far, but it is estimated that the property needed would not entail an expenditure of more than $30,000 at the most. It is possible that this figure could be cut down considerably.

HAS HUSBAND ARRESTED,

Then Mrs. William Arbor Intercedes in His Behalf at the Trial.

Mrs. William Arbor of 214 North Fifty-second avenue west, who had her husband arrested last evening for abusing her, changed her mind about prosecuting him when Arbor was up in police court this morning charged with drunkenness.

The court gave Arbor seven days straight in the county jail, but the punishment was modified considerably after Mrs. Arbor interceded. She asked clemency for her husband, and Arbor was released on six months' parole. If he violates his parole, he goes to jail.

When Arbor was arrested at his home last evening, it took two officers, Sergeant Barber and Patrolman Fagerberg, to get him to the station.

Paving Nearly Finished.

The Grand avenue paving job is nearly finished. On both sides of the street car tracks the paving has been laid the entire distance between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-ninth avenues and it is expected that next week will see the completion of the paving between the tracks. The avenue is being paved with vitrified brick at a cost of more than $50,000. P. McDonnell is the contractor.

After Games.

The Irving Tigers football team is out for games again this season. Although they were outplayed in Sunday's contest with the Fairmont Tigers, they were also outweighed. In spite of this they put up a snappy game and the score stood 15 to 5 in favor of the Fairmonts. The Irving Tigers would like to arrange games with any 140-pound aggregation at the Head of the Lakes. Games may be had by calling Cal. 246-L. Joe McCormick is manager.

Union Meeting.

A union meeting of the six Duluth courts of the Catholic Order of Foresters will be held this evening at West Duluth for the purpose of making arrangements for a visiting circle for the winter months. Peter Loskiel, state organizer will be present at this gathering and will report to the members what took place at the national convention. Mr. Loskiel is getting a large class of candidates in line for a large joint initiation to be held in the near future.

Leaves for His Farm.

G. F. Brown of West Duluth, who has purchased 360 acres of land near South Range, has left for his farm, where he expects to engage extensively in the fruit raising business. This fall Mr. Brown plans to put in five acres of strawberries, five acres in raspberries and five acres in blackberries.

Want Pastor Back.

At the fourth quarterly conference of Merritt Memorial M. # MAY RETURN THE BOOKS

Mrs. McAlpine Need Not Pay for $2,200 Roosevelt Set.

Both the Anglin-Bancker company and Mrs. John McAlpine scored in the case just ended in district court for the jury's verdict was in the nature of a compromise.

The case was brought by the Angline-Bancker company for the recovery of the price of books sold to Mrs. McAlpine and Mrs. McAlpine, charging fraud, asked the recovery of $810, the amount which had already been paid upon the books.

By the terms of the verdict, Mrs. McAlpine will return the set of Roosevelt books, which consisted of twenty-two volumes and cost $2,200. She will keep the "Literature of Italy" and the set of Oscar Wilde at the price charged by the company.

The company sued for $2,168, the balance due on the books. This was the balance of the total cost of the three sets of books, which consisted of some fifty-five volumes.

Mrs. McAlpine claimed that the set of Roosevelt books was misrepresented and that as had been claimed the books were not the first impressions off new plates. The books cost $100 a volume.

The jury found that the Roosevelt books were not as represented but that the "Literature of Italy" and the set of Oscar Wilde were as promised. While Mrs. McAlpine will keep these two sets, she will return the Roosevelt books.

The company was instructed to pay Mrs. McAlpine $35 on the return of the Roosevelt books.

The case has been on trial for several days past before Judge Cant of the district court.

FALL OPENING AT GIDDING'S

Most Attractive Showing of New Styles for Women and Children.

Yesterday was the first day of the grand fall opening at the J. M. Gidding & Co.'s store and the skill and art of the decorator and his assistants had been called into play in gowning the store for its 1911 fall debut. The effect was most pleasing to the eye. Autumn leaves, palms, ferns, and hundreds of bouquets of cut flowers had been most attractively arranged to set off the beauty of the shop to its best advantage and to form a fitting setting for the magnificent assortment of garments with which the store has been stocked from ground floor up.

Beginning with the cloak department the latest thing is the big mannish two toned reversible coat which hangs very loose and comes principally in grays, purples and plaids. The coat can be worn with either side out, making a very practical coat for general purposes. Made of soft imported materials they are very pretty in the lighter shades for afternoon or evening wear. Many are belted and many hang loose, although they are all rather narrow through the skirt, giving straight, rather than flaring lines. They have the regular coat sleeves and many are made in the raglan style with the sleeve cut in one piece with the body of the coat. A new feature in this line is the chinchilla coats in tan and white for women. Camel's hair imported diagonals are also good in these coats.

Velours, velvet and medium plush coats retain their popularity and the black broadcloths are always in place for dress wear. The trimming on the dressy coats is of embroidered net collars and deep cuffs, fringes and reveres.

Suits.

There is little change in the style of the suits, some handsome ones being displayed for street or afternoon wear. The length of the coat is the only point of change in the suits, these being a little longer than the summer coats. The ultra fashionable suit coat will reach to the end of the finger tips, while the average coat is several inches shorter. The new features in the cuts are the cut-away, the popium effect in the skirt of the coat and the norfolk which is again good. The 1911 girl shown in The Herald fashion edition last evening was posed by Miss Russell of the Gidding store.

Gowns.

In the gown department some attractive afternoon and evening gowns were displayed. The simple one piece gown, neatly tailored in serges, fine mixtures and henriettas are made up in attractive models.

The sash effects and the draped skirts are among the new fashion notes which appear in the gowns this season and Oriental embroideries, large lace collars and high waisted effects are also the new style features.

Perfectly stunning evening gowns in soft delicate shades in chiffons, crepe de chenes, soft silks, marquisettes and tissues were most fetchingly made up with puffings, sherrings, fringes and fichu effect.

Millinery.

The hats in this shop were as up to date as the rest of the garments. The street hats were nearly all high with small brims the rule with the contrast of the large "Rembrant" hat for afternoon or evening wear. A new style street hat in contrast to the high ones were the Tam O'Shanter effects produced in stiff wired hats of velvet made on the lines of the rakish Scotch caps with a small brim set out from the face and a saucy plume or feather stuck out at an angel on the left side.

In the colors here, as in all the departments, the fashionable colors were shown. One table was filled with hats of the coronation purple, another with the popular navy blue, a third with brown and tan shades, a fourth with black and white combinations and another in all black.

Among the dainty accessories in the novelty department handsome fluffy sets of maribou in delicate shades and in the natural and black attracted the shopper. Beautiful shopping bags in beaded designs or of the handsome Japanese embroidery bags with trimmings of fringe were all attractive. Long drop earrings and earrings with drops of gold rings like the East Indian, savages' earrings are very fashionable and chains of beads are again in style.

Corsets.

New models in corsets, with low girdle top and extremely low back which aid in giving teh uncorseted appearance are shown in beautiful materials. The skirt of the corsets are longer than ever giving a larger waist and straighter hip appearance.

Negligees.

The line of negligee garments shown was especially attractive. Cases were filled with oceans of lacy garments and the bathrobes and kimonos were especially pretty. A new bathrobe is of a flannel blanket of bright Indian plaid colors. This would be good for a college girl. Then there are the heavy padded Japanese embroidered robes upon which fashion smiles particularly just now and the ederdown robes which are of staple value.

MAKES GOOD WHILE AWAY

Former Duluth Newspaper Man Returns to Field of Early Labors.

"Major" A. E. Townsend of Skiatook, Okla., who came to this city in 1881, and worked on the old Evening Tribune as a foreman, has returned for a short visit to the field of his early labors. Mr. Townsend is now a prosperous contractor.

—Coming to Duluth thirty years ago, Mr. Townsend worked here until 1889, when he left to take a position in the government printing office. Finally he went out to the growing West and has made good in the general railroad and dock contracting business.

In the early days of Duluth Mr. Townsend was quite a clever writer and was quite well known around this part of the country under the non de plume of "Joe Shagbarg." He wrote many stories relating to the early times of the city, which in those days could hardly be called anything more than a village.

"It takes a man who has been here in the early days who knew Duluth as it was then, and who has been away for a number of years, to appreciate the growth the city has made," said Mr. Townsend.

"I have heard from time to time of the growth of this city, but never realized until the present time what a great city Duluth is. I think that it has one of the greatest futures, for it seems to me that the country around here is only in the infancy of its development."

Mr. Townsend found many of his old friends still here and has spent a pleasant day meeting the various citizens he knew during his early labors here.

RETIRED CAPTAIN HURT.

Falls Into Basement at Marquette and Is in Hospital.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Merritt Marsillilott, a retired vessel captain of Cleveland, Ohio, met with an accident Saturday morning in this city, as a result of which it was feared for a time he would not survive. He fell from the railing at the Spring street side of the First National bank to the basement floor beneath, landing directly in front of the barber shop door. The impact with the concrete seriously injured his head and rendered him unconscious. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital. His skull was not fractured, as appeared likely at first, and he has recovered consciousness and is reported he was doing nicely.

Hearing Is Deferred of Ex-Saloon Keeper Accused of Perjury.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The only angle of the Dumas arson case of public interest today was the appearance before Court Commissioner Simmons of Ole Ferguson of Deer River, formerly a saloon keeper at Cass Lake and Deer River, who is charged with perjury while testifying before the grand jury which returned an indictment against Dr. Dumas. Ferguson was accompanied by ex-Judge Spooner, Freeman P. Lane of Minneapolis and A. Andrews of this city, counsel for Dr. Dumas, the state being represented by Attorney James, assistant attorney general, and E. E. McDonald of this city. Alfred W. Mueller of the attorney general's office was also present.

It was agreed between the attorneys that the case be continued and Court Commissioner Simmons ordered the defendant to appear for hearing tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. His bond of $2,000 with Dr. Christenson of Cass Lake and M. J. Baker of Deer River was continued.

Ferguson had nothing to say about the charge against him but commented freely on a dinner of ducks which he had shot on his farm near Deer River. Dr. Dumas was not present at this arraignment.

Ferguson was arrested at his farm on Sept. 16, and arraigned in Bemidji. Dr. Dumas was present at that time and asserted that Ferguson was worth at least $20,000, owning property in Koochiching, Beltrami, Cass and Itasca counties.

Charged With the Murder of William Brown at Nett Lake.

Tom Fisher, the Indian, who is charged with the murder of William Brown, a mail carrier, on the Nett Lake reservation, Aug. 8, was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of murder in the first degree. He asked for a preliminary examination, which was set for Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

Fisher was brought to the courtroom by Deputy Sheriff King, who turned him over to the local authorities to be held in the county jail pending his hearing. Brown's body was found near the roadside and Fisher was arrested a comparatively short time afterwards. It is claimed that the two men had had a quarrel which led up to the killing.

LEAVES HOME TO BUY NEW SHOES; BODY FOUND NEXT DAY ON LAKE SHORE

Did Edward Dolsey Take Own Life or Was He Murdered?

Told Wife Before Leaving He Would Return to Help Move.

No Marks of Violence on Body Found in Shallow Water.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD DOLSEY.

Mystery surrounds the death of Ed Dolsey, 32 years of age, whose body was found in shallow water on the lake shore near the foot of Fourth avenue east at noon today.

Relatives state that he left his home at 706 West Second street about 6:30 o'clock last evening to buy a pair of shoes, and that he told them that he would return in a short time to help complete preparations for moving into their new home on Seventh street.

His wife was so stricken by the shock when informed of her husband's death by the police, that she had to go to bed, but the dead man's sister said this afternoon that she knows of no reason why he should have taken his own life. She asserted that he has not had the slightest trouble of any kind, domestic or financial; that he has been working steadily as a laborer, and that he was of a quiet disposition. They could not believe that he had committed suicide.

The police, however, hold to the suicide theory. They point out that there wasn't the slightest mark on the body to indicate violence of any kind. They do not think that he could have been robbed and thrown into the bay without some mark of some kind appearing. Even his clothes were apparently as they had been when he left the house. No money was found in his pockets, but it was stated at his home that he only had $4 or $5 when he left to go downtown. He had evidently spent part of that, at least, for shoes, as he had a new pair on his feet when he was found. The body was first discovered by Bert Brahmst, a boy, who was walking along the shore.

A postal card bearing his name and address was found in his pocket. It was a notification that he had been successful in his examination for the Modern Woodmen of America, and notified him to appear for initiation on the evening of Sept. 20. The government stamp on the postal card, however, was Sept. 21, so he could not have received it in time to enter the order.

Dr. J. A. McCuen was notified and the body was removed to the undertaking rooms of Flood & Horgan. It is not known whether or not a post mortem will be performed, but it is very probable that it will be held. There is a possibility that the examination might show some other cause of his death than suicide by drowning. He must either have waded out into the water or jumped from a nearby dock.

COMPANIES LACKED HEAD

That Was Reason for Mustering Out Companies K and L.

"Every militia company must have a head and the Bemidji and Thief River Falls companies were lacking in that respect," said Col. Charles E. Johnson of St. Paul, commanding officer of the Third Infantry, M. N. G., in discussing the mustering out of Company K of Bemidji and Company L of Thief River Falls.

The orders to muster out were issued in June, but they were not put into execution until about a week ago. The roll call of officers at the National Guard convention disclosed the fact that the two companies were no longer in existence.

Col. Johnson was reluctant to discuss the causes leading to the mustering out of the two companies. Finally he said that the lack of a leading spirit and the consequent lack of initiative to keep up and increase efficiency, were the causes leading up to the disbanding of the two units of the regiment.

The Thief River Falls company had just been provided by the municipality with an armory costing about $20,000. It will now be used as an auditorium and theater. The Bemidji company, which had been in existence about two years, performed good service at the scene of the fire at Baudette and Spooner last fall. It was the first militia company to be sent to the scene and was at work for a day before the Duluth companies were sent to the border."

FRED C. LUM BURIED IN MINNEAPOLIS.

The funeral of Fred C. Lum, brother of Dr. C. E. Lum and Attorney L. E. Lum of this city, was held this afternoon at Minneapolis, the old home of the Lum family.

Mr. Lum died suddenly last Wednesday at his orange ranch at Whittier, Cal., where he has been for the past three years. Besides the two brothers residing in Duluth he is survived by his mother, and sister, Elizabeth Lum, and B. F. Lum of Minneapolis. His father was S. O. Lum, a pioneer of Minneapolis, who settled there in 1858, and died in 1905. Dr. Lum and L. E. Lum will return to Duluth tomorrow.

BREN SHORT $14,552.26

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—After reciting that the shortage of J. D. Bren, former cashier at the state university, amounts to $14,552.26, and that otherwise the funds of the institution are in good shape, A. O. Cederberg, assistant public examiner, in a report made to the governor today, says:

"Since it is decided that the state treasurer is by law the treasurer of the university, I would respectfully suggest that all the moneys belonging to the various trust funds and other funds now under control of the board of regents be immediately turned over to the state treasurer and treated like all the other trust funds."

Shortage in Transfer.

Mr. Cederberg reports finding on the university books a shortage of $600, made in carrying a balance from one page to another.

This is charged to Bren. It is understood that the bonding company will pay the full amount of Bren's shortage on receipt of the examiner's report.

The increase in salaries at the "U" during the year just passed, over the fiscal year 1910, amounted to $116,-217.60. Commenting on this the assistant public examiner says:

"It is evident that the state university is grown to such proportions that the ordinary revenue has not been sufficient to supply the great demand made upon it by the citizens of the state. The board of regents has had this difficulty to consider, that while the number of students has nearly doubled during the last eleven years, the increase in revenue has not kept up with this additional membership, with the increased demand for agricultural studies and the marked increase in cost of living. More instructors are needed, more materials for demonstrations were called for and more adequate salaries demanded."

HOMESTEADER HIT BY TRAIN

The body of Alex Fnuttler, 50 years of age, was brought to the undertaking rooms of Flood & Horgan this afternoon from Cloquet. Fnuttler had been killed by a Great Northern train near Brookston yesterday afternoon. He was struck by the engine as he was walking along the track. Both legs were severed and the body was otherwise mangled. He was picked up by the train crew still alive and hurried to Cloquet, but he died on the way, from loss of blood, despite the efforts of the train crew to render first aid. He is said to have a son residing near Brookston. He was a homesteader.

Your Doubts Are Traitors

During the past week a young man, 32 years of age, left the Duluth Business University to accept a $50 clerical position. You need have no doubts if you likewise have the ambition and will put forth the necessary effort.

DETECTIVE IS ARRESTED

T. P. Maguire, who had charge of the local branch of the Employers' Detective agency, was arraigned in municipal court yesterday afternoon on a charge of having misappropriated $489.89 belonging to the agency. The local branch was closed a short time ago. He waived examination and was bound over to await the action of the next grand jury.

"MASHERS" NEED LOOK FOR NO LENIENCY.

"Any 'mashers' who are convicted before me need look for no mercy," said Judge Windom in police court yesterday afternoon, after the cases against the five young men who were arrested several nights ago on charges of disorderly conduct had been dismissed. The evidence against them was not sufficient to warrant finding them guilty.

They were accused of addressing impolite remarks to young women on the streets. Judge Windom said that if the proof were forthcoming, he would send any one guilty of that offense to the county jail for sixty days straight, without giving them the option of paying a fine.

Chief Troyer stated this morning that the city has no ordinance which gives the police enough power to cope with the situation. He explained that he had submitted an ordinance to the legal department which was designed to cover that difficulty, but that no action had ever been taken on it. The proposed ordinance was modeled after that which is in force in St. Paul, which prohibits loitering on the street corners or in public places.

RAILROADS WANT DULUTH REPRESENTED

J. I. Thomas, general agent at Duluth for the Northern Pacific railroad, is endeavoring to interest a number of Duluth jobbers and board of trade men to send some kinds of a representation to the industrial exhibition which will be held in Bismarck, N. D., next Friday.

According to Mr. Thomas it will be an important event for the Western towns, and will mean much to Duluthians to go there. Twin Cities firms are going to be represented there strongly, and as they have been doing business in the West for many years they have a good foothold in that territory. Mr. Thomas is of the opinion that Duluth should be out after the Western business and that now is the time to take some of the trade away from the Twin City people.

He has taken the matter up with C. A. Luster, president of the Duluth Commercial club, and B. P. Neff, one of the directors, as well as with the members of the board of trade and all the manufacturers and jobbing houses. Not much attention has been paid to this exhibition by Duluth people, principally because they have been preparing for the big trade excursion which is to be held next week through the northern parts of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Those with whom he has talked are quite favorable to the scheme of sending a representation, and it is probable that Duluth will have a display.

"The West is growing very fast," said Mr. Thomas, "and now is the time to go out after the business. The Duluth houses might just as well go after the business in the West as that in the immediate neighborhood, and I believe also that a trade excursion out there once in a while would help much. There has been some talk of having a trade excursion West next year, and I think it will be a success.

"The Twin City people are strong out there and they have been dealing with parties in the West for many years. That ought to be Duluth territory."

THREE-MILE ROAD COSTLY

R. H. Simons, a well to do business man of Jacksonville, Fla., at the Spalding today gave some interesting information regarding the Florida East Coast railway, the road that is being completed at the present time and which will connect Key West with the east coast of Florida with means of communication other than by boat.

"Railway men and engineers strongly expressed the opinion that a railroad could not be constructed to Key West," said Mr. Simons. "There are three miles of the railroad constructed over a space where there is no land at all, and it has been estimated that it cost $1,000,000 a mile to build this piece of the road.

"The Florida East Coast railroad is nearing completion at the present time. It means a great thing for all of the east coast and a very great boom for Key West, which rests out there on the Florida keys, isolated except for the communication by boat.

"Some of the most remarkable feats of railroad engineering in the history of the country have been performed to construct this stretch of railroad. It has required ceaseless effort in some of the places to find a solid bottom to rest the piling on. It was found necessary to go down into the mud and sand for a very great number of feet. It was the doubt of many of the consulting engineers in regard to striking solid bottom, that led to the skepticism before the construction work was started.

"The railroad is a sort of pet project and its construction has proceeded in the face of innumerable difficulties. But with its completion in the near future, it means that the east coast of Florida will be even a greater winter resort than it has in the past, and that the island city of Key West will be placed in direct and easy communication with the coast."

RAILROAD SHOWS BIGGER INCOME

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—The St. Louis Southwestern is one of the few railroads of any importance in the United States to declare increases in both freight and passenger earnings for the fiscal year ended June 30. The company's annual report just issued, indicates gross earnings of $11,888,-636.73 and surplus of $1,215,823.08.

LITTLE ACTIVITY IN GRAIN AND COAL

So far this year the receipts of grain from the West have been light, according to railway officials of this city, although they state that the amount of grain handled to date is 100 per cent more than it was up to the corresponding time last year.

If fair weather is experienced for the next few days the receipts of grain are expected to be heavy for then the movement will actually begin. The companies have hundreds of cars in the West ready to haul the grain as soon as they are needed.

The movement in coal westward is still light. According to railroad men, a cold snap must come along before there will be anything actually doing, for then the people will start looking into the coal bins to see if they have any on stock, and will begin ordering. The dealers of the West themselves, are short on coal, but they are in no apparent hurry to get in their orders.

FREE RHEUMATISM CURE

A Home Cure Will Be Given FREE By One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bed ridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I will send a free trial of this precious remedy by mail, postpaid to any sufferer who writes for it. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it to me today.

Railway Men Meet.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Northern Railway club, at the Duluth Commercial club rooms, Saturday evening, plans were discussed for the annual celebration, which will occur on Nov. 25. It was decided to make the affair a repetition of similar events, which, it is claimed, furnished all the amusement any man would care for. A special train brought a large number from Two Harbors. George S. Stewart of Superior, superintendent of the Great Northern, who was to have read a paper on "Engine Failures," was unable to be present. The club sent him a resolution requesting him to appear at the next meeting.

WHEAT SHOWS ITS STRENGTH

Leading American Markets All Show Gain—Flax Trade Light.

Duluth Board of Trade, Sept. 26.—Although foreign cables showed lower prices for wheat at the close, almost without exception, and the foreign news was on the whole bearish, American markets closed today with wheat higher. The bearish foreign news did put wheat down in the exchanges of this country for a time this morning, but the loss was soon recovered, showing plainly that there is plenty of demand for wheat right here in America.

This country has not the surplus for export that it once had. Duluth December and May both closed a quarter of a cent higher. Duluth September flax lost half a cent, owing to want of demand, but the futures all showed slight gains. Durum closed a quarter of a cent up, oats ¾c up, rye 1c up and barley the same as yesterday.

Since the defeat of reciprocity at the Canadian polls last Thursday, the American markets have been giving demonstrations that the price of wheat is up to stay up because the Canadian wheat is barred out. The prediction that the bulge that followed the announcement of the defeat would quickly be lost had failed to come true. There have been slight recessions, but none that came anywhere near wiping out the gain of last Friday and Saturday.

Wheat opened a little weaker this morning on account of bearish cables from Liverpool. The lower price there was due largely to increasing Manitoba news from Argentina and liberal increases in the European visible supply. There were weak openings at Duluth, Minneapolis, Chicago and Winnipeg. Weather news from the Northwest and Eastern Canada was rather bearish. Duluth December, which closed at $1.09⅛ yesterday, opened today at $1.09 asked, and shortly afterwards declined to $1.08½. The milling demand at Minneapolis and elsewhere, however, was so great that the slump could not continue. Shortly after noon the price had gone up beyond yesterday's closing figure, reaching $1.09½.

Flax also recovered soon from its early morning slump. Yesterday's decline was continued shortly after the market opened, Duluth September losing 4 cents. The brokers soon learned from the railroads, however, that yesterday's arrivals of flax, amounting to 74 cars, would not be equaled today. Today's car receipts were estimated at 34. Offerings were light compared with yesterday. Before noon September had recovered 3 of the 4 cents it had lost, selling at $2.27.

Trade in flax is still light. The crop is late and the price high. There are shortages in the oil manufacturers' supplies all over the country, which must be filled before the price can go down a great deal. Yet the crushers are buying as little as possible, as they hope to be able to get their flax cheaper when the bulk of the crop comes to market. For some days the receipts at Duluth have been considerably larger than the shipments, on account of the bearish attitude of the crushers, and the result is that flax has been accumulating in the Duluth elevators. To be sure there is no such supply here, but what could be moved away very quickly and easily if the Eastern linseed oil manufacturers made up their minds that the time had come to lay in supplies of the seed, but the fact remains that the seed has been and is still accumulating at Duluth. Monday the Dun elevators had 42,928 bu which was 10,991 bu more than Monday a week before.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Market Easier on Increase in Visible Supply.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—A liberal increase in the European visible supply had a tendency today to make the wheat market easy. Selling was further encouraged by Liverpool reports of more generous offerings from Manitoba and from Russia. In addition there were continued favorable advices regarding the crop outlook in the Argentine. The opening was ⅛@⅜c lower. December started at 98¼c to 98½c, the same change from last night as the market taken altogether. Later the price held steady around 98⅜c.

A decided rally occurred, owing to overselling and to the relative smallness of the increase in the world's available supply. The close was steady with December ⅛c net higher, at 98¾c.

Weak cables gave corn a bearish tone. Two of the largest houses in the trade headed the selling. December opened ⅛@¼c off at 63½c to 63⅝c, and seemed inclined to keep within that range.

Buying on the part of cash houses led to an upturn. The close was steady at 64c for December, a net gain of ¼c.

Oats sympathized with the lack of bullishness in other grain. Trade, however, was only fair. December started the same as last night to ⅛c underneath at 47@47⅛c, and was supported at 47@47⅛c.

Declining quotations for hogs carried down provisions. Initial sales were 2½@5c to 10c below last night's level, with January deliveries $14.97½ to $15.00 for pork, $8.85 to $8.87½ for lard and $7.92½@7.95 for ribs.

QUICK RISE IN STOCKS

Another Outburst of Selling Followed By an Abrupt Change.

Speculation Takes on Decidedly Strong Tone in Last Hour.

New York, Sept. 26.—The stock market developed pronounced weakness again at the opening today with especially large selling of United States Steel, Union Pacific and the Copper shares. United States Steel opened with a block of 12,000 shares from 55⅝ to 54⅝, an extreme loss of 1¼ from yesterday's close.

Within a few minutes it fell to 54. The preferred stock also declined 1¼ to 104¼.

The weakness of Union Pacific was even more pronounced. Dropping ½ point between sales, it sold soon after the opening at 155⅓, a loss of 2⅛. Amalgamated Copper, American Smelting and Utah Copper declined a point each. Elsewhere the market held fairly steady. Fractional losses were the rule with the exception of Northern Pacific, which lost 1¼.

After the first outbreak of selling had spent itself the character of the market changed. A heavy demand appeared and stocks moved upward buoyantly. Buying orders of United States Steel poured in and the price bounded up 3⅛ points to 1 above yesterday's close. The stock was bought in lots of several thousand shares. Union Pacific rose 2⅞ to ⅝ above the previous day's close. Elsewhere the earlier losses were eliminated. The market did not hold long at this level. The demand diminished at the higher range and prices fell back a point or so.

Thereafter the market was unsettled with fluctuations among the active issues until the end of the first hour when the list again mounted to the highest point of the day.

American Tobacco securities showed further strength today.

The stock market today showed the influence of an increased demand for issues which had been forced downward relentlessly during the past week. After another tempestuous outburst of liquidation at the opening, the market rallied swiftly and despite frequent attempts to depress the list subsequently it held well above the low point throughout the morning. The source of demand was a matter of debate. Apparently short covering was proceeding on a large scale, the influence of this buying being supplemented by supporting orders when needed. Attorney General Wickersham's statement in regard to enforcement of the anti-trust law did not relieve the situation as had been hoped. It contained no answer to the one question which is uppermost concerning the fate of the United States Steel corporation, and speculative sentiment today was as thoroughly confused as before. Prices fluctuated in a nervous manner during the second hour, the violence of the rally affording handsome profits to early purchasers, who realized freely. The selling was counteracted by a renewal of the buying which was a feature of yesterday's rise. St. Paul was peculiarly susceptible to pressure, recovering less proportionately than other stocks and falling rapidly on light selling. Reactions and rallies of a point were frequent, but around midday, prices were ruling within a fraction of yesterday's closing.

The bond market was firm with the tobacco issues up 2½.

The market closed firm. Speculation took on a decidedly strong tone in the last hour and the market showed some degree of the buoyancy that was manifested late yesterday. Bear operators showed alarm over the resistance the market offered to their attacks during the day and they bought to cover hastily, sending up prices at a rapid rate. The rally from the low figures reached over 3 points in Union Pacific and United States Steel and placed these stocks, together with Reading, Lehigh Valley and Canadian Pacific, a point or more above yesterday's closing.

Cotton Market.

New York, Sept. 26.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 3 points on October, which made a new low record under overnight selling orders, but from 1 to 6 points higher on later months, which soon sold from 9 to 10 points above yesterday's closing figures, while October rallied to a net advance of 3 points on active covering and trade buying. Covering was probably promoted by less favorable crop advices from Mississippi and Louisana and reports that spinners were calling cotton more freely on the decline, but the South was a big seller here on the early advance and prices later in the morning eased off 4 to 5 points from the best.

HUNDREDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF B. G. SEGOG.

Hundreds of friends and admirers attended the funeral services of the late Bryon G. Segog at the Masonic temple, Lake avenue and Second street, this afternoon to pay their last tributes of respect to the departed.

The services were in charge of the Masonic fraternity, of which he was a member, and the ritual of the order was observed. The Elks and the Knights of Pythias, of which he was also a member, attended in a body. It was one of the largest funerals held in Duluth, and the floral offerings were beautiful. The attendance was so large that many were unable to get inside the building. Interment was at Forest Hill cemetery.

Mr. Segog died Saturday evening at Rochester, where he had gone to seek relief from Bright's disease, from which he had been suffering many months. He is survived by his widow and four children.

COPPERS RALLY NEAR THE CLOSE

Copper made quite a rally near the close today. Many regained all they had lost during the earlier part of the day and some even did better than that. A general rise of the New York list near the close stimulated the coppers.

"At a meeting of the directors held in St. Paul on Sept. 5, it was unanimously decided to build a smelter plant, consisting of two blast furnaces, each of 400 tons daily capacity, with a Bessemerizing plant to convert the blast furnace matter into blister copper," says the report. "The cost of the same will be about $450,000. General Manager Shattuck was instructed to secure the site already examined some time ago in Douglas, where the Copper Queen and the Calumet & Arizona smelters are located. J. E. McAllister, manager of the British Columbia Copper company at Greenwood, B. C., will have charge of the construction work and of the plant after completion, and will be at the head of our mining and smelting work."

Greene Cananea is said to be producing copper at 9 cents a pound. This is the lowest, according to current reports, ever obtained by this company.

Mandan, N. D., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—An Italian named Ferrara was shot and instantly killed this morning by Ginsidi, also an Italian. The men became involved in a dispute over mail. The murderer escaped. Ferrara had considerable money in a Mandan bank and planned on returning home this fall.

MARKET GLUTTED BY APPLE CROP

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The apple crop in this vicinity is the largest ever harvested. Nearly every farmer has a larger supply than he can use, consequently a large number of apples are being shipped. The three large nurseries here have also produced an immense crop. The shipments have mostly been made to the West. The apples are being sold as low as 50 cents a bushel. The quality never was better.

WARNS TURKS TO KEEP OUT

London, Sept. 26.—A news dispatch from Rome this afternoon says: It is announced here this afternoon that the Italian charge d'affaires at Constantinople has presented to the Porte a note to the effect that any dispatch of Turkish military transports to Tripoli will be regarded as a most serious action.

Italians Want Action.

Chiasso, Switzerland, Sept. 26.—According to the latest advices received here, all of the Italians, except a section of the Socialists, demand the speedy occupation of Tripoli. The Italian government is taking advantage of the present opportunity to experiment in the partial mobilization of troops. The entire fleet is ready for war and the coast fortifications have been strengthened.

Guard Military Secrets.

Rome, Sept. 26.—The government has issued another warning to the press, threatening the severest measures under the penal code against journalists and correspondents who give publicity to information concerning the army and navy.

Albert Pfaender of New Ulm Was Democratic Leader in House.

Senator Cook of Austin Also Attending National Guard Meeting.

Albert Pfaender of New Ulm, minority leader in the house at the last session of the legislature, is attending the convention of the Minnesota National Guard association here in his capacity as captain of Company A, Second infantry, of New Ulm. He read a paper on "National Guard Legislation" at this morning's session and, incidentally, declared that the last legislature wasn't as black as it was painted.

Whatever the last legislature may have done, Mr. Pfaender was not classed with the obstructionists who lined up against progressive legislation. In his two terms he has made a record that has earned for him the respect of the people of the whole state, as well as of his own district. His selection as Democratic leader at the last session is sufficient indication of the estimation in which he is held by his colleagues.

Mr. Pfaender has been a consistent friend of Northern Minnesota in the legislature and has always been open to fair argument on pending legislation. He has made many friends all through the state by his attitude on public questions and greater things are predicted of him.

"The people down my way are not talking politics very much this year," said Mr. Pfaender this morning. "Most of the talk on political questions during off years is done in the cities and our people in the country will not get excited for several months yet."

Another legislator who is attending the convention is Senator C. F. Cook of Austin. Senator Cook is captain of Company G of the Second infantry and a veteran National Guard enthusiast. He is also a veteran Democratic campaigner and is one of the solid men on the Democratic side in the legislature.

"We didn't have many Democrats in the senate, but we accomplished something," he remarked this morning in speaking of the "late lamented."

Representative John P. Lennon of Minneapolis is also in Duluth attending the convention. He is not a national guardsman, but is a friend of the organization and his son, Capt. Bert M. Lennon, is on the First infantry staff.

ONE MORE JUROR IS SECURED TO TRY THE DUMAS CASE

Perjury Indictment Is Returned Against Former Witness.

Ole Ferguson of Deer River Accused of False Swearing.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The trial of Dr. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake and son of a Minneapolis man, was resumed here this morning, a special venire of twenty men being on hand to be examined for jury duty in the case, which involves charges of attempted arson against the Cass Lake man as a result of an alleged conspiracy to burn and rob the postoffice building at Puposky on the night of June 16 last.

At the morning session one juror out of seven men examined, was accepted. Four more are needed to complete the jury.

Perjury Charge Made.

At the beginning of court it became known that the Beltrami county grand jury had returned an indictment against Ole Ferguson, formerly a Cass Lake saloon keeper, but now of Deer River, charging perjury. Ferguson testified before the grand jury and later was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Assistant Attorney General Janes and was arraigned before Court Commissioner Simons. He was to have had a hearing this afternoon, but now that an indictment has been returned this charge will be dismissed.

Ferguson was arraigned before Judge W. S. McClenahan, before whom the Dumas case is beind held, immediately after the opening of court this morning. He was given until tomorrow morning in which to enter a plea.

Recites His Testimony.

LYNCH MAN WHO MARRIED NEGRESS

Mob Acts After Two Officers Are Killed By Sons of Pair.

Dumas, Ark., Sept. 27.—Breaking into the county jail here and overpowering officers in charge, a mob of 100 men took Charles Malpass, Sr., a white man, to a water tank and lynched him today.

The lynching followed a battle late yesterday at the home of Malpass, in which Sheriff W. D. Preston, Deputy Sheriff Barney Stiehl and two mulatto sons of Malpass were killed and Malpass wounded. The officers had gone to the Malpass home to arrest the two sons.

The wife of Charles Malpass, Sr., a negress, and Malpass' younger son, a young mulatto, escaped from the house during the fighting.

The authorities say there was intense feeling against the Malpass family because Malpass had married a negress.

STRIKE MAY BE EXTENDED

All Union Crafts on Illinois Central Likely to Go Out.

Restraining Order From International Officers Is Ignored.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 27.—With practically every railway clerk employed by the Illinois Central south of the Ohio river, out on strike, reinforced by more than 200 shopmen at Memphis, it was declared this noon that a general strike order affecting other union crafts was expected at any moment.

Officers of the local shopmen's organization declined to say by what authority they went out Monday, following the strike of 250 clerks. When shown a dispatch from Chicago saying that their action was unauthorized by the higher officials of their union, local leaders among the shopmen smiled, but refused to discuss the strike further.

Sent Order By Wire.

Davenport, Iowa, Sept. 27.—Telegraphic orders restraining workmen of the various railway trades on the Illinois Central and other Harriman lines from going on strike today were sent out from Davenport this morning by authority of the international presidents.

According to President O'Connell of the machinists, no strike yet has been ordered and will not be until after a conference between the international presidents and Harriman officials.

It is understood that various locals on the Harriman lines anticipated the strike order and began to walk out last night.

TWELVE BODIES ARE RECOVERED

Search Shows Terrific Force of French Naval Explosion.

Toulon, France, Sept. 27.—The tremendous force of the explosion which destroyed the battleship Liberte Monday was again indicated today when a piece of the Liberte's armorplate was lifted from the side of the battleship Republique, upon which it had fallen.

The broken plate weighed thirty-seven tons and had been hurled 225 yards. The Republique was so damaged that she will be out of commission for months.

Twelve bodies were taken from the wreck this morning. The search above the water line is difficult, owing to barriers of crumpled steel that oppose all advance into sections of the holds. Nothing was discovered leading to the belief that other living men were imprisoned in the wreckage, although this remains a possibility.

Secretary Fisher Talks About His Visit to Alaska.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 17.—An explanation of why Former President Roosevelt did not attend the present meeting was scheduled as one of the interesting features of today's final session of the third natonal conservation congress. While this feature was not on the program, the announcement yesterday by Dr. Henry Wallace, president of the congress, that he would read today an explanatory letter from the former president created not little comment.

Addresses by Walter L. Fisher, secretary of the interior, and William Jennings Bryan, discussion of good roads in relation to the farmer, practical forestry, soils, the election of officers and choice of next year's meeting place were among the important features of today's program.

Talked of Good Roads.

The most important incentive to prosperity and social happiness on the farm is good roads, said Curtiss Hill of Jefferson City, state highway engineer of Missouri, addressing the congress today.

J. B. White, prospective president, sketched the forestry movement in an address on "Practical Forestry in Europe and America."

"The Trend of the Conservation Movement" was the subject of an address by Dr. W. J. McGee of the bureau of soils, United States department of agriculture.

Berlin Minister of Foreign Affairs Gives Formal Notice.

One War Cloud Disappears Entirely From European Horizon.

Paris, Sept. 27.—The German minister of foreign affairs, Herr Von Kidderlein-Waechter, received the French ambassador to Germany, M. Cambon, at the foreign office in Berlin at noon today, and informed him that Germany accepted the latest French proposals concerning Morocco.

War Cloud Has Passed.

Washington, Sept. 27.—According to understanding here, the announcement from Paris that Germany has accepted the latest French proposals regarding the Moroccan trouble means that the war cloud that for the last few weeks has hung over Europe has completely disappeared. There still is the difficulty between Italy and Turkey to be reckoned with, but there is no way by which this difficulty, even should it develop into actual hostilities, could be magnified into such proportions as would have arisen from a clash between France and Germany.

Had these two last named nations come to blows, England would have been almost sure to become involved more or less directly, and Italy, by virtue of her interests in Africa, would have been more or less concerned in the conflict. In fact, ever since the trouble which terminated in the Algeciras treaty, the Moroccan situation has been a menace to the peace of Europe, with Spain, Germany and France the most actively interested parties. It is believed here that the concessions granted by France to Germany will bring about a readjustment of relations in the African continent that will go far toward making international peace more secure.

"Where I go, ye cannot come," he quoted from the Bible. "But I go to prepare a place for you."

"You're doing that every day," Mr. Grimmer retorted, quickly.

Mr. Hayes moved just a bit more rapidly when he heard.

State Auditor Fixes Total Levy for 1911 at 3.88 Mills.

Increased Levies for Revenue and Road and Bridge Funds.

Caused By the Decrease in the Railroad Gross Earnings Taxes.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Approximately $1,360,000 more money must be raised by taxation for conducting affairs of the state during the present fiscal year, than was raised for the year 1910, according to instructions sent out today by S. G. Iverson, state auditor. The total tax levy in 1910 was 2.70 mills. The total levy for 1911 will be 3.88 mills, an increase of 1.18. This is the highest levy by the state since 1873. The following table shows where the increases come:

| | 1910 Mills | 1911 Mills |
| Revenue fund | .90 | 1.90 |
| Soldiers' relief fund | .10 | .10 |
| Road and bridge fund | .05 | .25 |
| University campus fund | .17 | .15 |
| Prison building fund | .25 | .25 |
| School tax | 1.23 | 1.23 |
| Total | 2.70 | 3.88 |

The general revenue fund grows from nine-tenths of a mill in 1910, to one and nine-tenths mills in 1911, an increase of exactly one mill. The road and bridge fund grows from five-hundredths of a mill to twenty-five hundredths, an increase of two-tenths of a mill. The university campus shows a slight decrease. The soldiers' relief, prison building and school tax fund levies, will be the same as in 1910.

EXPECT ACTION IN FLAGG CASE

"Fifty-Two Per Cent Profit Brokers" Taken Before Grand Jury.

New York, Sept. 27.—The federal grand jury was expected to act today in the case of Jared Flagg, the "52 per cent profit" broker, and his friends, who were arrested recently, charged with defrauding customers through illegal use of the mails.

The jury was waiting to get the testimony of Miss Madeleine Russe, the little blonde stenographer who is supposed to know the details of Flagg's immense business, by reason of her confidential position.

Since the raid of Flagg's offices last Saturday the postoffice inspectors have sought Miss Russe in vain, but they had assurance that she will surrender herself.

The authorities have been baffled to a large extent in the preparation of their case by the unwillingness of Flagg's investors to give evidence against him. After visiting more than fifty customers they were unable to find more than two willing to sign a petition to place the firm's affairs in the hands of a receiver. Flagg has declared that the most convincing proof of his innocence is his host of satisfied customers.

The only one of those arrested in Saturday's raid who remains today in jail is F. Tennyson Neely, the former publisher.

KIMMEL TOLD HIS STORY TO DULUTHIAN, IN PRISON

William P. Lardner Visited Niles Man in Cell at Auburn.

Convinced He Is Telling Truth —Victim of Strange Fate.

Did some strange and malignant fate pursue the wandering footsteps of George A. Kimmel, the man of mystery who is dividing the little town of Niles, Mich., against itself?

William P. Lardner of this city went to school with Kimmel, worked in the bank at Niles with him, saw him at the Auburn prison, has followed the career of adventure that reads as thrillingly as any dime novel, and believes without the least question of doubt that the wanderer returned to Niles is the real George A. Kimmel. The story of his wanderings was told to Mr. Lardner by Kimmel in Auburn prison.

Kimmel was an unusually bright boy, according to the story of Mr. Lardner. He was a good fellow; he drank and was perhaps somewhat wild, but he was "square" in those days back in Niles, when he worked in the bank of his uncle, says Mr. Lardner.

Following the time he left Niles and his recent return, adventures crowded into the passing years like the sensations in the yellow-backed novel.

Kimmel was slugged, was followed, an attempt was made to poison him, according to the story he told to Mr. Lardner, and all through his wandering years some perverse fate seemed to dog his footsteps.

Briefly, as Mr. Lardner related some of the main points of the story, Kimmel worked for his uncle, a banker of Niles, and the man who is believed to have taken a leading part in wrecking the mind and shattering the health of the man now seeking to prove his identity.

After saving $200 at the request of his uncle, Kimmel bought a mortgage. One day he disappeared and a shortage of $200 was found in the bank. It was supposed that Kimmel took the money. In the vault was found the mortgage, which Kimmel evidently left for settlement.

He was next heard of in New Orleans, where he was seen by two men from Niles. He was a member of the chain gang, with manacles around his feet, scrubbing the steps of one of the public buildings. Later he returned to Niles, looking rough and travel worn.

Later Kimmel went to Arkansas. He did several things in the interval, but from here the thread of the story begins. Some bonds were stolen from the Missori Pacific railroad.

Johnson, Kimmel's uncle, wired Kimmel at the bank where he was working in Arkansas, to buy some bonds of a man who would call on him, it is claimed. He stated that he had used all the surplus money of the Niles bank to buy some of the bonds.

Kimmel happened to see a circular telling of the theft of the bonds, also giving the numbers of the stolen papers, according to the story he told Mr. Lardner. When the man came in with the bonds, Kimmel requested him to leave the package and return later. He then compared the numbers of the bonds with the numbers published in the circular, and discovered that they were stolen property.

A wire to his uncle brought back the reply to take the bonds and keep his mouth shut, Kimmel said. Kimmel replied that he could not do this. Then came the instructions to meet his uncle in Kancas City.

At the Middleton hotel Kimmel was called from lunch by a man who said he would take him to his uncle. He offered a cigar, and while smoking it became ill. It is believed the cigar was doped. Reaching the house where his uncle was staying, Kimmel found Snyder and Hartman, men who he has since stated, prosecuted him. They went out and got some medicine for Kimmel, and after taking it he became unconscious and woke up to find himself in some room in St. Louis guarded by two men.

Believing that his food was doped and that he was being kept in an ill and half-conscious condition, Kimmel refused to eat any of the food that was brought to him with the exception of the crackers, drinking water from the wash pitcher.

Slowly regaining his strength and his mind becoming clearer, Kimmel watched his chance and sprang at one of his guards. His attack was so sudden that he knocked the man down, and ran into the other room and hurriedly put on what clothes he could find. The guard ran down stairs, and quickly as possible Kimmel followed. Half conscious, half starved, he wandered out in the dusk to seek some means of escape.

Coming down the street he spied through the gathering gloom the figures of three men. He attempted to hide in a gateway. Suddenly the three men crossed over and came down upon him. One of them, Kimmel said, was his uncle. He held a knife in his hand.

Fights for His Life.

Then the fight began. Kimmel grasped the hand of his uncle and struggled for his life. Suddenly he was dealt a fearful blow on the back of the neck and sank unconscious to the street. He was left for dead, a bleeding and terribly maimed man.

After his slow recovery Kimmel became a wanderer, against whom the hand of every man seemed turned. In New York he was offered a ride with a man in a buggy. The wheel broke and Kimmel was asked to hunt for a scantling to put under the axle.

Going up to a house he pried a board from the door, was later arrested, and tried on the charge of burglary. Later came his forgery of a check of 25 cents, the attempt to pass it on a small girl in a candy store, his arrest and conviction and sentence of five years in the Auburn prison. Such was the story Kimmel told at Auburn to Mr. Lardner. His mind was lucid at intervals. He told of many incidents of his youth and of his wanderings and the foul play he met with, or claimed he was the victim of.

Prison a Haven.

Prison, strange as it may seem, proved a haven of rest for this modern Jean Valjean. There after his wandering to England, and his taking the same boat back again to throw those whom he believed were following him off his tracks; after journeying to South America and Mexico, where Kimmel clams an attempt was made to poison him, he rested from as strange and terrible adventure as ever befell modern man.

Mr. Lardner is positive, not even the shadow of a doubt crossing his belief, that the man claiming he is George A. Kimmel is the same man he went to school with, worked with in the bank at Niles, saw later in Dakota, when Kimmel worked there for a while, and later saw, a mental and physical wreck, in the Auburn prison.

"George Kimmel was an unusually bright boy," Mr. Lardner said. "There is not the least doubt in my mind that he is insane at the present time. His mind may clear and he may recover from the terrible physical and mental ordeal he has undergone. He has little pecuniary advantage to gain by coming back and seeking to have his identity proven.

"The case of Kimmel is a strange one and is as thrilling as any novel I have ever read. One could talk for hours on the ramifications of the story. Many tangled threads are woven into the plot. Many diabolitical motives are imputed. Some things so vile as to be almost beyond human belief, have been alleged. It is a very strange story and the end will be interesting."

FAIL TO RECALL ABERDEEN MAN

Opponent Gets Fewer Votes Than Were on Recall Petition.

Aberdeen, S. D., Sept. 27.—At Aberdeen's first recall election under the commission form of government, held yesterday, Elmer Rasmusson, commissioner of police and fire departments, was indorsed by 1,156 of a total of exactly 1,600 votes cast.

In every ward of the city he received a vote nearly double that of A. E. Mehner, advanced by the opposition to Rasmusson's administration.

Mehner received a vote of 443, less by ten than the number of names attached to the petition for the recall of Rasmusson. The latter has been in office since May 1 last, and was elected for three years.

WANTS $7,000 FOR INJURIES

John Anderson Claims a 700 Pound Rock Fell on Him.

John Anderson wants $7,000 from John Nelson and Peter Olson, doing business as Nelson & Olson, contractors, for injuries alleged to have been sustained when a 700-pound boulder fell from a loaded flat car upon him.

At the time of the accident he claims to have been an employe of the concern, doing common labor. The firm was carrying out a contract for the Canadian Northern railway.

The case is being tried before Judge Ensign of the district court.

A jury in the case of Roy G. Coyne against the Great Northern Railroad company, tried before Judge Ensign, this morning allowed the plaintiff $1,750 for injuries received while working for the railroad concern. Coyne claimed that he lost a hand and asked $5,000.

MINER WANTS $10,200 DAMAGES

Says He Was Buried Under Pile of Earth and Debris.

Before Judge Dancer and a jury in district court Otto Swanson is trying to get $10,200 as damages from the Bangor Mining company for injuries alleged to have been sustained while in the employ of the company several months ago.

Swanson claims that explosives shook earth and debris upon him to such an extent that he has been laid up in the hospital for a period of eight weeks.

He states that he was employed in the Bangor mine at the time of the accident and that the accident was the direct result of negligence on the part of the company.

MONEY HELD IN VAULTS

Over $14,000 Is Drawing No Interest for the Government.

Although the First National bank of this city furnished the necessary bonds to the treasury department of the United States in order to become the depository for the postal savings station more than two weeks ago, no word has been received thus far from Washington approving them, and as a result the $14,000 that the people have turned over to the government for safe keeping lies locked up in a vault in the bank, bringing no returns, and merely adding to the expense of the department.

Furthermore, unless the federal authorities at Washington approve of the bonds soon, it will be necessary to rent some more vaults for the people are pouring their money over to Chief Clerk Gustaf F. Lindgren in lump sums, averaging over $1,400 for every working day.

The office has been doing business for the past ten days, and during that time over $14 000 has been turned over to the clerk. It is a peculiar fact that every day's business seems to run on the same steady pace, the variation being but very little. Yesterday was probably the smallest day when a little over $300 was deposited.

Postmaster A. P. Cook is preparing circulars published in various languages which are to be distributed throughout the different colonies in this county. So far the circulars which he distributed to the schools of the city calling attention to the postal savings cards and adhesive stamps which can be purchased for 10 cents each, have had good returns, for many pupils have purchased cards and are opening accounts. Any person over 10 years old may become a depositor and start a savings account.

Mr. Cook is also preparing another list of questions to be asked depositors with the view of determining the best method to adopt in recommending the removal of the barrier which prevents persons from depositing more than $100 per month. Other postmasters who have postal savings stations are adopting such measures, and it is almost certain that congress will be besieged by thousands to change the ruling, and permit deposits of any amount.

Bankers of Duluth claim that the postal savings station is not drawing a cent from the banks, while it is bringing out many thousands of dollars that have been tied up for years and which would be tied up for many years to come. As it is now, this money is turned over to the government, which in turn deposits it with banks, which furnish the necessary security, and which in return pay 2½ per cent interest, thus paying the expenses of the department.

Trout Fry Arrive at Night But Are Planted Before Morning.

Rainy Weather Fails to Dampen Enthusiasm of Duluth Anglers.

Despite the cold, rainy weather the 160 cans of trout fry, which reached Duluth last night, were quickly snapped up by enthusiastic fishermen who hurried them to nearby streams for planting.

It was at first feared that the weather would dampen the ardor of the disciples of Izaak Walton, but these qualms were dispelled long before the train reached the station when the rigs and automobiles were seen lined up and waiting. Every can was loaded on a rig as soon as it was taken from the train. Those who got the fish did not wait until this morning to put them in the streams, but hurried off into the night and over the muddy roads to plant them.

As with the consignment which was received last week, most of the trout went into nearby streams. French, Sucker, Lester and Talmage rivers, Silver creek and Hasty brook all received their share.

As before, most of the fish were finger length and many of them will be of sufficient size to catch next season.

The trout were sent to Duluth at the request of Deputy Game Warden Thomas J. Storey. When the first batch came the demand for them was so urgent and so many people had to be turned away disappointed, that he prevailed upon the game and fish commission officials to forward another lot to this city, which arrived and was planted last night. Warden Storey again expressed his appreciation of the assistance which had been given him by local fishermen in distributing the trout.

CARING FOR WOMEN WHO COME FOR LAND.

Gregory, S. D., Sept. 27.—Perhaps greater effort looking to the comfort and welfare of women land-seekers is being made in Gregory on the eve of the opening of the Rosebud and Pine Ridge reservations for settlement, than has been known at any previous land opening in this country. The registration will begin Monday night.

Under the directions of Mrs. O. I. Kippenbrock, lodge leader, trains will be met by escorts and accommodations provided for fair visitors in homes or hotels, at reasonable prices. The movement is designed to protect women from the discomforts that hitherto have attended rushes for homesteads and to shield them from overcharges by unscrupulous hotel managers and rooming house proprietors.

Hundreds of cots are being placed in private homes looking to this end. The women of Gregory say they are prepared to care for 5,000 women during the eighteen days of registration.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 27.—Dr. J. Grant Lyman, the federal prisoner who escaped from an Oakland hospital Sunday night, is being pursued by an armed posse headed by federal officials through the mountains near Shasta Springs. With him is Charles Thornet, a hospital nurse, who, according to the police, aided Lyman to escape. Lawrence Galindo, the chauffeur who drove Lyman to Sacramento, was arrested and has confessed.

FALL OPENING AT FREIMUTH STORE

Shoppers Attracted By Complete Display of Apparel for Women.

One of the largest opening crowds of the season visited the store of I. Freimuth & Co. today, the occasion being their annual fall opening. Bright touches of color were added to the resplendent beauty of the shop with branches of scarlet and yellow autumn leaves effectively arranged and stately palms placed here and there added to the effect.

The windows were filled with beautiful garments and materials well displayd on models and standards. Every department was represented in the windows and the garments displayed were but a fair sample of the excellent stock with which the store is filled.

The millinery department was resplendent with its many floral colors artistically made up. The shopper saw here fine street hats, dress hats and little evening caps which were all stunning.

Another pretty evening hat was of pink velvet in a modified poke bonnet shape trimmed with pink marabou and a large pink velvet poinsettia.

Still another set which caught the eye was a cape, muff and bag made of fancy gold and black lace over corn colored ribbed silk, edged with deep black silk fringe. The cape was pointed in front and back hanging to the waist line and in a short pointed cape over the shoulders. The muff was extremely long with a pointed flap on the front and was lined with shirred black satin.

Next the shopper went to the waist department where she saw any number of dainty chiffon, silk and lingerie creations. One pretty waist on a model was of purple chiffon over white silk with collar and cuffs at the elbow of white lace. The front was daintily embroidered with silk chenille in bellotrope shades. Another was of blue chiffon over white with a fancy front and back made with a piece of red silk forming sort of a bib and there were pipings of the red.

The evening gowns here were exquisite. Delicate fabrics in the new colors were elaborately made up. There was a pretty gown of white chiffon over white messaline with bands of pink under the chiffon which hung loose and full with a fringe of beads around the hem. It was a very low neck with tiny peasant sleeves.

There were black and white combinations, combinations of coronation purple and lighter shades and pinks, blues and lavenders.

The line of coats was complete and attractive and the fur department held the shopper for some time.

In the silk and dress goods department materials of all kinds were as attractive as the made up garments

It is a velvet season and the plain velvets, velvet cords and velours are holding first place. They come in extremely wide widths for coats and suits and in all of the good colors. Blacks as usual are the leading colors, with golden browns and coronation purples next. The velvets are being used for gowns, suits and coats.

The wool back satins for street and evening wear in suits and coats are extremely good just now and they come in both the darker and the evening shades. Brocaded satins in self tones are popular and chiffons and messalines are extremely good. The chiffon taffetas, which are a new material, are very much in vogue in the East. Bordered shalleys are very good made up in pretty dainty colors, with stripes and checks.

For suitings they have some good substantial cloths, fifty and fifty-six inches wide in the reversible cloth, and coronation cloth with the little showing of the purple in the mixed fabrics. These come in grays, stripes and plain colors.

For coats they have the polo cloth in pretty shades and effective combination of colors. There are the tan and plaid reversible, the brown and striped, the cube check and plain blue, the mottled and the old rose and the brown and black. There is also a new goods called the "foule" cloth which is striped and makes a very good imitation of corduroy, but is all wool.

Then there are the fine pastel broadcloths in the light blues, gray, pink falcon and amethyst for evening wraps.

A semi-made tunic is displayed in this department, which ought to prove a good seller. They are of chiffon in the whites, pinks, blues and blacks and also of black nets, embroidered in the pastel shades, beaded or spangled, and ready to be slipped over a gown of messaline or other soft material. They are finished at the neck and arms put into a belt but left unfinished at the hem and seams so that they may be fitted over the silk garment.

REFERS CASE FOR FURTHER HEARING

Judge Morris Instructs Special Master to Get More Testimony.

Following the hearing on exceptions to the report made by Judge W. D. Edson, special master appointed by the federal court in the matter of John D. Gunn and others, petitioners, and Hansen E. Smith and others, bankrupts against Thomas Merritt and H. H. Phelps and others, which was held yesterday by Judge Morris of the United States court, an order was issued by the court referring the matter back to the special master for further testimony.

It is the contention of the petitioners and bankrupts, that the land sold by the trustee, L. A. Barnes, upon the counsel of H. H. Phelps, to Mr. Merritt and others at $750 was disposed of before the creditors of the defunct Merchant's bank of West Duluth could object. The sale was a private one, it is claimed, and the purchasers bought it upon the advice of Mr. Phelps. Land on two sides of this parcel has shown ore deposits and it is believed that ore is to be found there also, which would make it a valuable property.

In the report to the court, Judge Edson relieved Mr. Pheips of all blame from any fraudulent deal, in connection with the case, of which the petitioners accuse him.

RAILROADS

HOBBLE SKIRTS CAUSE ACCIDENTS

High Heels and Tight Dresses Throw Women, Say Officials.

Statisticians of the Pennsylvania railroad have gathered figures which show that not a small portion of the injuries sustained by women while getting on and off trains, mounting and descending stairways in stations, is due directly to high heels and hobble skirts. After an investigation conducted by the company and extending over a period of three months, 73 cases were recorded where the tight skirt or the dangerous high heel was the cause of the accident. This number was over sixty per cent of the total number of cases investigated.

The injuries ranged from slight contusions to painful sprains and bruises, and in some instances led to serious results owing to the shock following the accident. Many of the reports of the employes who witnessed the accidents attribute the cause openly and directly to the two dangerous features of women's dress. "Heel caught on step of coach and torn off;" "high heel caught while descending stairs," and "injured party wore tight-fitting hobble skirt," are typical causes given in the reports.

SOO SETTLES UP.

Pays Back Taxes and Penalty for Its Oversight.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 27. — The Soo Line railway has paid $12,506.82 for omitted gross earnings to the state. The public examiner's department, delving into the road's books, found that it had ommitted returning certain items for taxation and that it has not reported the full mileage made by the trains in the state. The company investigated the examiner's report and admitted it. The draft followed. Of the sum, $595.66 was penalty.

SELL A. N. & S. ROAD AT PUBLIC AUCTION.

Atlantic, Iowa, Sept. 27. — One hundred and fifty stockholders of the Atlantic Northern & Southern railway, who had joined in a petition to postpone the sale of the road, have withdrawn their petition and the road will be sold by Receiver Harlan at the courthouse door here today. It is predicted that the road as a whole will bring about $300,000. The physical value of the property is estimated at over $1,000,000.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL REVENUE IS GREATER.

Chicago, Sept. 27. — The total operating income of the Illinois Central railroad for the year ending June 30, 1911, was $60,977,031.49, the largest in its history, according to the annual report of the road. The revenue for 1910, formerly the banner year, was $57,884,721.09. The operating expenses for 1911 were $43,856,228.13, an increase of $535,497.74 over the operating expenses of 1910.

The expense of maintenance of equipment showed a decrease of $1,184,885.39 over 1910. Much of this saving was credited to changes following the indictment of numerous Illinois Central officials for alleged dishonesty in the car repair department.

CHANGES ON THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

J. E. Dalrymple, assistnat traffic manager at Winnipeg, is appointed vice president at Montreal in charge of all traffic.

MURDER OR SUICIDE?

Police Still Puzzled Over Finding of Body on the Lake Shore.

Money, Watch and Pocketbook Missing From His Clothes.

The circumstances surrounding the death of Ed Dolsey, whose body was found in the shallow water of the lake near the foot of Fifth avenue east shortly after noon yesterday, are still puzzling the authorities. The present indications are that it will go into police annals as another "Unsolved Lake Shore Mystery."

The available information precludes any positive theory as to whether he committed suicide or was robbed, and then thrown into the lake. The postmortem performed by Dr. Walker at the undertaking rooms of Flood & Horgan last evening did not throw much additional light upon the case. It showed that death had been due to drowning and traces of liquor were found in the stomach, but it was impossible to determine whether or not he was under the influence of intoxicants at the time of his death.

Relatives state that he had not the slightest reason to take his own life and that he was of a cheerful, rather than of a morbid disposition. Married only six months and living happily, they state that he was making preparations for moving from their home at 706 West Second street to a place on Seventh street. When he left at 6:30 o'clock Monday evening to buy a pair of working shoes he told them that he would be back in a short time. When he stayed away all night the occurrence was so unusual that the police were notified of his disappearance yesterday morning. About noon his body, without any marks of violence upon it, was found within three blocks of the police station in a few inches of water.

When he left the house he took about $5 in silver with him and had a watch. An examination of his clothes showed that his pocketbook, containing the money, and his watch were gone. But his clothes were not in disarray and not a single pocket was pulled inside out.

When he was first found, wearing a new pair of shoes, it was believed that he had spent part of the money for shoes. But later inquiries showed that he had worn a pair of new shoes when he left his home and had intended to get a pair of cheaper shoes for working purposes. He announced his intention of going to a second hand store on the Bowery as the other stores were already closed.

The police still maintain the belief that Dolsey ended his own life and incline to the opinion that in no other way could he have met his death. They think that he must have had serious trouble of some kind at home or elsewhere which caused him to become so despondent that he jumped into the lake.

STATE TAX LEVY FOR PRESENT YEAR TO BE HIGHEST SINCE 1873

ment of property this year will be approximately the same as the total last year $1,195,000,000. A tax of one mill, allowing for delinquencies which always occur, will yield approximately $1,150,000. Computed on this basis, the 3.83-mill levy this year will bring into the treasury approximately $4,630,000 as against $3,225,000 returned by the 2.7 mill tax in 1910. Were all taxes to be paid—no delinquents be reported at all—the levy would produce many thousand more dollars, but officials expect some of the tax dodgers will get by, regardless of the work done to catch them.

The two-tenths mill increase in the road and bridge fund, will bring approximately $210,000 into that pocket. The levy for university campus will net something less than $175,000. For soldiers' relief the income will be about $115,000, and for the prison building about $275,000.

The legislature of 1909 prescribed that there should be collected for the general revenue fund in the years 1909 and 1910, taxes amounting to $1,100,000 and fixed the maximum levy at 1.9 mills. In 1909, however, it was found necessary to levy only one mill, while in 1910, because of the big inheritance taxes and back taxes on railroad gross earnings collected by Attorney General Simpson, the levy was cut to nine-tenths of one mill and the state still had left enough surplus to call in and cancel $850,000 worth of capital certificates. The legislature of 1911 prescribed that there should be collected for the years 1911 and 1912, taxes amounting to $2,200,000 for each year, and fixed the maximum amount of the levy at 1.9 mills. And it has been found necessary, according to Mr. Iverson's estimates, to collect this full amount, 1.9 mills for the revenue fund.

Gross Earnings Taxes Less.

"Because of the reduction in shipments of iron ore and the consequent lessening of railroad gross earning taxes and for the further reason that there is no material increase in assessments," Mr. Iverson said, "we will not be able to reduce the tax levy this year. A one mill tax levy will be required for the general revenue fund. This increase, together with the increase in the road and bridge fund of two-tenths of a mill, should yield us something more than $1,410,000, but the delinquents probably will cut it to about $1,360,000."

The tax levy, outside of the state school tax, will amount to 2.65 mills. The state school tax is levied in addition to the local mill and special taxes for school purposes.

TAFT MEETS POLITICIANS

cal leaders of the state, both Republicans and Democrats. In addition to United States Senators Curtis and Bristow, Governor Stubbs, Former Governors Hoch, Bailey and Crawford, Congressmen Campbell, Anthony and Young, and Former Congressman Scott and Former United States Senator Long were at the breakfast.

On the way to the club the president rode in Governor Stubbs' car, driven by the governor's son.

In dedicating the flagpole at Washburn college, Mr. Taft said the feeling is growing in this country that to have real patriotism the children must be taught the significance of the starry flag.

Talked to 40,000 People.

The president's main address was made on a stand in front of the state capitol. The steps of the big building were black with people and thousands more filled the grounds in front of the platform. It was the largest crowd the president has so far addressed and was estimated at over 40,000. The president stood on a table to make his speech, with the hot sun beating down directly in his face. He addressed himself to the Grand Army men of Kansas, and discussed the part which the state played in the Civil war.

"Looking back over the years since the war," the president said, "there is no problem facing the nation that does not seem light in comparison."

To Abolish War.

The president invoked the assistance of the men who saw war to use their influence to bring about an end of war by arbitration treaties with the world.

Little Flare of Politics.

Hutchinson, Kan., Sept. 27. — Near the close of what had been a nonpartisan celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Kansas as a state with President Taft as the principal speaker, a political incident flared up here yesterday and gave a thrill to the thousands of Kansas people who packed the grandstand at the state fair grounds.

Walter L. Fisher, secretary of the interior in President Taft's cabinet, just back from Alaska, made a three-minute speech in which he said some things about the difference between real progressives of the middle of the road type like Mr. Taft and "hypocritical, demagogic progressives who opposed every practical progressive policy put forth."

Bristow vs. Fisher.

Senator Joseph L. Bristow, ranking second only to Senator La Follette of Wisconsin among the progressives of the senate, followed Secretary Fisher and quickly caught up his challenge.

"We in Kansas," he said, "are always willing to grant that the other fellow is honest, and we expect him to grant that we are honest in our views. I want to say to President Taft and to Secretary Fisher right now, that in working out the problem that confronts us, we of Kansas will have our part and have our say, to the end that there shall be equal justice to all and special privileges to none."

Both Secretary Fisher and Senator Bristow were wildly applauded. The throng seemed to appreciate the verbal passage at arms, and the practical serving of notice by the junior Kansas senator that, while he was participating freely and gladly in the welcome to President Taft in this state, there was to be no let-up in the factional fight as soon as he had left the borders of the commonwealth.

The president, himself, had made absolutely no reference to politics.

Secretary Fisher reached Hutchinson yesterday afternoon and had a long conference with the president regarding Alaskan affairs. The secretary is convinced that the people of the Far Northwest need relief, and he is going to do his utmost to see that they get it. He is going to set about solving the coal question if he possibly can.

Talk on City Government.

In laying the cornerstone of the new city building here, President Taft announced himself as in favor of fixing the responsibility for municipal administration on one man, or upon a very small body of men. Mr. Taft came very close to openly advocating the commission form of government.

"Experiments, he said, "have been made as to the character of the best municipal government. I think the general tendency of the modern views is that the municipal government is best, at least for cities of any size, which fixes the responsibility on one or a very small body of men, and makes them answer to the whole people of the city for the efficiency of the government. The method by which the people elect eight or ten or twelve or fifteen different officers takes away the opportunity of the people to hold some one responsible for defects in the actual government.

"But if you give the mayor, under the so-called federal system, the right to appoint all the officers, and any officer fails, the mayor is responsible because he appointed him and ought to remove him if he is a bad man, or make him better if he is capable of improvement.

"Under the so-called commission system, which I believe you have in Kansas, the same principle is exemplified."

ITALY SENDS ULTIMATUM TO TURKEY ABOUT TRIPOLI

that there is a panic among the Italian residents there, as it is feared the landing of troops would be the signal for a massacre of Europeans. The Anglo-Maltese colony in Tripoli today sent an appeal to their compatriots saying:

"We implore our brethren to appeal to the government to assist us and to come to our help, as the Italian steamers refused to receive any but persons of their own nationality."

Prepare for Rupture.

Constantinople, Sept. 27. — The Turkish cabinet in council yesterday decided, in the event of a rupture of the relations between Italy and Turkey, the Italians would be deprived of all benefit of the capitulations. The capitulations are Turkish state papers guaranteeing to foreigners residing in Turkey and its dependencies, extra-territorial rights and immunities, such as trial by consular courts in cases where Turkish subjects are concerned.

Suggests Holy War.

Constantinople, Sept. 27.—The newspapers suggest that all Ottoman subjects refuse to pay their debts to Italians in the event of an Italian occupation of Tripoli.

The authorities have prohibited a public meeting of protest against the threatening attitude of Italy, arranged at Stamboul.

The Tanin's leading article today says:

"The Tripolitan question brings upon the tapis the whole question of the relations between Christianity and Islam. The Turks have trespassed on nobody's rights, yet Italy is preparing to occupy Turkish territory on the pretext that Germany and France have taken away the independence of Morocco.

"No Justice in Europe."

"Such conduct is a violation of the principles of international law, humanity and civilization. It is evident that there is no justice in Europe. Treaties are merely instruments of deception which are destroyed when an advantage is to be gained thereby.

"The Italian aggression is really the outcome of the animosity of Christianity toward Islam."

The Tanin regrets its former belief in Germany's friendship and adds that it is apparent that Turkey has no friends in Europe.

It is understood that Germany is trying diplomatically at Rome and Constantinople to arrange an understanding, but there is no hope here that the effort will succeed.

The Turkish transport Berna, which sailed with ammunition from Constantinople and was detained for several days at Smyrna, arrived at Tripola yesterday.

recites that on Sept. 12 Ferguson appeared before the grand jury and testified substantially as follows:

"I met Dr. Dumas on June 15 in Cass Lake, and he said he had my moose head in his office and asked me if I should like to come up and see it. I said 'no.' He said that he would pay me for the moose head but I told him that I did not want money, and he said, 'What can I do for you,' and I told him that I had two stumps on my place at Deer River, near my shanty, that I should like to blow up and that I should like to have him get some high grade dynamite, and Dr. Dumas said he would.

"In the afternoon of the same day I went to Dr. Dumas' office and he went into a back room and brought out what he told me was three or four sticks of 90 per cent dynamite wrapped in a newspaper.

Got Some Dynamite.

"I took the dynamite and put it in a valise and took it to the Pefford hotel, and took it home two or three days later, and put the dynamite, three sticks, I think, under a stump two and one-half feet across and twenty-five feet from the front of my home, and blew the stump on about July 1.

"I filled the hole with dirt and sowed it to timothy seed. I put all the 90 per cent dynamite under this stump, but I blew another stump at the same time, using 40 or 60 per cent dynamite, which stump was also near the house, and which dynamite I had on hand at the time. Dr. Dumas told me that the dynamite which I got from him he got from the mill at Cass Lake."

The grand jury indictment alleges that Ferguson did not blow any stump as stated, and that in fact Dr. Dumas did not give Ferguson any dynamite.

EXPECT NOTE FROM TEDDY

lege on proper methods of soil cultivation, was scheduled for this afternoon, and Prof. Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois was to deal with the subject of "Worn Out Soils."

Addresses by A. P. Grout of Winchester, Ill., and Dr. H. J. Waters, president of the Kansas State Agricultural college, also were scheduled.

Mr. Bryan's address was expected to be delivered late this afternoon.

Fisher Talks of Alaska.

"I have just come from Hutchinson, Kan., where I had a long conference with President Taft relative to the policy of my department," said Secretary Fisher of the interior, addressing the congress shortly before noon. "I find that his views and mine relative to the conservation of the public domain are in complete accord. We especially discussed the Alaskan situation, so much before the house here of late and find that we agree completely on a policy for that much-misrepresented country. My plans in regard to Alaska are perhaps not ripe enough for a full delineation at this time, but they will constitute a remedy.

"My idea of the proper conservation is a wise development of all the natural resources in the public interest—public interest in the broadest sense of the word—which recognizes the rights of all."

White Elected President.

The report of the nominating committee presented yesterday was accepted today.

J. B. White of Kansas City, Mo., the newly elected president, has long been active in conservation work. In 1907 he was appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the affairs of the Cass Lake, Minn., Indian reservation. Later Mr. Roosevelt made him a member of the forestry section of the national conservation commission, which was the direct outgrowth of the first conference of governors held at the White House in May, 1908.

The following officers for next year were elected: President, J. B. White, Kansas City; executive secretary, Thomas R. Shipp, Washington; treasurer, D. Austin Latshawa, Kansas City; recording secretary, James C. Gipe, Clarks, La. The last three were re-elected.

Crowd Hears Wiley.

A great crowd assembled in convention hall last night to hear Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, in the department of agriculture, deliver a speech on the "health of the people." A feature of the speech was an attack on the manufacturer who sells adulterated foods and drugs, and who was characterized as a "thief and a corrupter of public morals."

The officers of the congress announced last night that the principal subject to be considered at next year's meeting probably would be pure food and the conservation of the public health.

Dr. Warren H. Wilson of New York, and Mrs. Philip N. Moore of St. Louis, also delivered addresses at the night session.

Dr. Wiley told the congress that the health of the nation was worth $540,000,000,000. He made this estimate on the basis of $600 per capita average annual earning of 45,000,000 wage-earning adults, each representing a capital of $12,000 invested at 5 per cent. He advocated limitation of marriage to normal and healthy individuals; segregation of tubercular and typhoid fever patients as in smallpox, yellow fever and leper cases; establishment of a national department of health and rigid enforcement of pure food and drug laws.

Dangers to Health.

The dangers which confront the health of the nation Dr. Wiley said, were the inheritance of disease or of weakened bodies, poor nutrition, unwholesome and adulterated food, the taking of disease by infection and unsanitary conditions, the latter caused by overcrowding in big cities and by lack of hygienic knowledge in the country districts.

"In order to unify the national and state activities making for the public health," he declared, "the establishment of a national department of health is almost a necessity. Do not be deterred by the cry which goes up of a 'doctors' trust.' The wise physicians are in favor of such a department, not because it is a 'physicians' trust,' but because it is for the good of the people.

"The selfish physician will be glad to see the present condition of affairs continue because it tends to produce disease and thus throws into his hands an increased practice. The altruistic physician believes in prophylaxis rather than in therapeutics. He is willing to sacrifice his own income in his devotion to the public service.

Up to Congress.

"Congress should take early steps towards securing in the councils of the nation an adviser to the president charged with the protection of the health of the people and the proper education of the people in matters relating to their well-being, both moral and physical. What is needed is to bring together all the activities of the national government into one department, having the prestige and power of presidential advisement."

Vigorously did Dr. Wiley attack as a "thief and a corrupter of public morals," the manufacturer who sells adulterated foods and drugs. The human animal, he declared, is entitled to a pure and wholesome diet.

"The drug store and the grocery store," he said, "should be distinct concerns, and not sell each other's wares. The man who converts peanut shells into pepper, on the ground that the poor man is not able to buy pure pepper, is a thief and a corrupter of public morals. The rich man possibly may be able to afford peanut shells, but the poor man never. The man who dilutes the milk waters the stock of the wealthiest company in the world."

He declared that no penalty is too severe for the man who deliberately puts a poisonous dye into candy to sell the stick for a penny and puts two-thirds of the penny in his own pocket.

Big Co-operation Plan.

An action of far-reaching importance was taken by the congress late yesterday afternoon when a recommendation of the executive committee that the constitution be so amended as to create an advisory board to be made up of one member of each national association having a conservation congress, was adopted. This brings all the important national organizations, such as the National Board of Trade, the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Federation of Labor, into direct co-operation with the congress. Heretofore these organizations have worked independently of the National Conservation congress.

THREE MEETINGS CLAIM ATTENTION

Duluth Will Be Represented at Bismarck, Madison and Aitkin.

The Industrial Exposition at Bismarck, N. D., the Lac Qui Parle county rally at Madison, Minn., Friday, and the Aitkin road conference Friday, are claiming the attention of the Commercial club this week. Delegates to the different gatherings are being recruited and Duluth will be represented at each.

The Duluth Board of Trade will have delegates at Bismarck and it is very likely that some other Duluth business men, who are interested in North Dakota affairs will also be there the last two days of the week.

Some time ago the Commercial club received an urgent invitation to send delegates to the Lac Qui Parle gathering. No delegates have been selected, but it is understood that some Duluthians will attend the affair on their own responsibility and will represent the city.

The Aitkin road conference is a postponement of the gathering held at Brainerd the latter part of last month to consider the road between Moorhead and Duluth. At the Brainerd meeting, the Carlton and Aitkin county people had not been able to agree on the route of the road through those two counties and an adjournment was taken until a route could be decided upon. The matter has now been adjusted and it is expected that the route will be definitely settled Friday.

J. S. Pardee of the Commercial club, who is a member of the good roads committee of the Northern Minnesota Development association, will attend the meeting. It is also expected that the county will be represented on account of St. Louis county's interest in that part of the road from the Carlton county line to Duluth.

COL. LUCE IS PRESIDENT

Next Meeting in Minneapolis —Capt. K. A. Franklin Secretary.

The next annual meeting of the Minnesota National Guard association will be held at Minneapolis. Col. Erle D. Luce of Minneapolis, commanding officer of the First regiment, is the new president of the association, having been elected late yesterday afternoon at the closing session of the convention which opened Monday. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Capt. George E. Leach of the First field artillery, Minneapolis; secretary, Capt. K. A. Franklin of Company A, Duluth; treasurer, Maj. W. H. Hart, St. Paul.

One of the most successful conventions in the thirty-two years' history of the association, closed shortly after 6 o'clock last evening. The delegates left on last evening's trains, but not before they had expressed themselves as delighted with their two days' stay in the city. Warm commendations were given Lieut. Col. F. E. Resche, Maj. H. V. Eva and other Duluth officers who arranged for the entertainment of the visitors.

About thirty automobiles carried the officers around the city yesterday afternoon. A visit was made to Maj. J. Uno Sebenius' Trianon farm and from there the trip was continued through the East end residence district and around the boulevard.

The principal address yesterday afternoon was on "The Battle of the Yalu," by Maj. Arthur Johnson, Nineteenth Infantry, U. S. A. Maj. Johnson observed the battle, having been attached to the Japanese army as a representative of the United States army at the time. With a large chart, Maj. Johnson pointed out the movements of the Japanese and Russian armies in the famous battle and indicated to the officers wherein he believed mistakes were made by both commanders.

Col. Charles F. Johnson of the Third regiment talked on the drilling of green men. Col. Luce of Minneapolis suggested that some change be made in the plan of electing company officers. He said that personal popularity is not always an indication of ability to command. The matter was placed in the hands of a committee, which will report at the next meeting of the association.

INDIANS CRUCIFY MAN IN MEXICO

Horrible Barbarities Practiced on Women and Children in Chiapas.

City of Mexico, Sept. 27.—Wencesiao Francos, a resident of Acala, a small town in the state of Chiapas, was crucified by the rebellious Chamula Indians when they sacked that place last Saturday, according to telegrams received by El Imparciale from Tuxetla Gutierrez, the state capital.

Francos' wife and others, who brought the story of the crucifixion to Tuxetla Gutierrez, also told tales of horrible barbarities committed by the half-savage hordes in Chiapas. Women and children have suffered most, the savages making gruesome sport of pitching the babes high in the air and catching them on their lances. A leader of one of the fanatical mobs was a priest, who himself was killed. Francos' wife was stabbed seven times and left for dead.

Semi-officially it is stated a military governor, probably Gen. Jose De La Luz Blanco of revolutionary fame, will be sent to Chiapas to restore order.

ELECTION RIOTS IN NEW YORK CITY

Fists and Bullets Are Used and Tammany Leader Is Clubbed.

New York, Sept. 27.—Primary election contests in fifteen assembly districts in New York city yesterday developed into fights in which fists and bullets were used as well as ballots.

Three men in a crowd of voters in an East side polling booth were shot and seriously wounded, and in a number of other districts warring factions came to blows, notwithstanding that Sheriff Shea had mobilized his entire force of 1,000 deputies and Police Commissioner Waldo had assigned practically his full army of 10,000 blue-coats to keep order.

James Ahearn, a Tammany district leader, was struck by a policeman's night stick and had his arm fractured in three places when he was thrown from a polling place while trying to make an arrest. A policeman, in trying to quell the small riot which ensued, is said to have struck Ahearn three times.

A trio of toughs shot at random into a crowd of voters in front of the Democratic polling place on the East side. Three young men fell wounded, one shot in the abdomen, and the other two in the arms. None of the injuries is mortal. The assailants threw their guns away.

There were serious riots in other districts and many arrests were made for alleged illegal voting.

HITCHCOCK FLIES WITH U. S. MAIL.

New York, Sept. 27.—F. H. Hitchcock, postmaster general, qualified as an aerial mail carrier on Long Island late yesterday. While a large crowd cheered vociferously, the postmaster general took a seat beside Capt. Paul Beck of the United States army, in the latter's aeroplane at Nassau Boulevard aerodrome, carrying seventy-eight pounds of mail matter. Without the slightest mishap the two made a seven minute flight to Mineola, where, upon signal, the postmaster general dropped the mail to one of Uncle Sam's carriers. When the postmaster general returned to the aerodrome, he was again cheered and the large crowd rushed onto the field to greet him.

"The time is certainly coming," he said enthusiastically, "when we must depend upon the aeroplane for carrying the mail. It is not effective yet, but it is being developed in a marvelous way, and I think I shall soon find it practical."

Another feature of the fourth day of the international meet was a flight by Lieut. T. Dewitt Milling, U. S. A., who broke the American record for carrying a passenger. He and a private of his regiment were aloft for 1 hour, 51 minutes, 42 3-5 seconds. Claude Grahame-White and Tom Sopwith and Mmle. Dutrieu also made successful flights.

CROKER'S DAUGHTER SUING FOR DIVORCE.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Jack Breen, while here recently as driver of the string of show horses, was served with papers in a suit for divorce. ## PLAN ADDITION TO CITY JAIL

Council Committee Has Offer of $100,000 for City Property.

The council committee on city property, consisting of Aldermen Barnes, MacDonell and Hector, met at the city hall yesterday afternoon to discuss the proposed improvements to the city jail. The conference committee provided $20,000 for this purpose in fixing the budget for 1912 and the work is so necessary that efforts will be made to have it done at the earliest possible moment. Two suggestions have been made. One is to erect another story, and the other is to lower or raise the second floor so as to allow of the additional floor without changing the height of the building. No action was taken by the committee.

An offer of $100,000 for the property now occupied by the city hall and police station was received, but it is not thought that serious consideration will be given to it at this time. Other offers have been made for the property. It is constantly increasing in value and officials at the city hall have said that it would not be good business for the city to dispose of its holdings until it knows exactly where it stands in the matter of a new city hall and police station.

ROOSEVELT TALKS TO KEYSTONE FARMERS.

New York, Sept. 27.—Theodore Roosevelt told a hundred Pennsylvania farmers here yesterday that he was with them in their efforts to get more money for their crops. The farmers were guests of the United Shares association, which is engineering a movement to eliminate the middleman in the disposal of farm products.

"I never object to paying more for what I get," he said, "if it means more profit to the farmer, more for the wage earner. But I do very much object to paying more if it means nothing but profit to the men who stand between the farmers and wage earners and me."

Nett Lake Indians Want Inspector to Visit the Reservation.

Worried Over Recent Letter —Refuse to Abandon Lodge Work.

The Net Lake Indians are worked up over a recent letter received from the Indian department, by some of the chiefs in which the Indians are ordered to give up gambling, their medicine men, and certain forms and customs.

F. H. Pequette, the missionary from Net Lake was in the city yesterday with Chief Mah-ge-skung. They visited County Attorney John H. Norton and asked his advice.

It seems that the Indians are willing to give up the medicine men, use the reservation doctor and give up gambling. What bothers them most, however, is that they think the government wants them to give up the Meda lodge ceremonies. None of the older Indians want to do this.

The Meda lodge is a sort of Masonic lodge among the Indians. In all eight degrees are given the candidates The lodge is strong with the Indians. It is a part of their old religious belief and they refuse to give it up.

It is thought hardly probable that the government orders were aimed at the lodge. It is understood that the only object of the government was to stop gambling, direct the use of regular doctors and notify the Indians to live strictly up to the laws of the reservation.

Chief Mah-ge-skung and Chief Day-bway-wain-dung are both pagan Indians, but both are said to frown on gambling among their people. They have both agreed to use the regular doctor, but will not agree to give up their lodge ceremonies

The two chiefs recently visited Warren E. Greene, the assistant county attorney, to ask him regarding the letter. Mr. Greene was unable to understand what they wanted of him, and as nearly as he could make out at the time, the two chiefs were protesting against the missionary trying to convert them from their old religion, and that they wanted to know whether they had to accept the Christian faith.

"That is not what they wanted," said the interpreter, Mr. Pequette, yesterday. "They are pagan Indians and have not accepted Christianity, but what they wanted to find out was whether they had to give up their lodge work.

"I have not tried to interfere with their lodge work. It is part of the religious belief of these old men. It is impossible to convert these older Indians to Christianity, and I am working chiefly with the younger generation. The chiefs did not protest to the attorney about my efforts to convert them."

This was translated to Chief Mah-ge-skung and he grunted his assent.

The chief, through the interpreter, also stated that the Indians on the reservation have many grievances, and that they want an inspector sent there to investigate. He said that he had written for an inspector, but received no reply, and that if one did not come by the time the snow covers the ground, he and Chief Day-bway-wain-dung will go to Washington and see the Great White Father about it.

FAIR

The beautiful fall weather is still on tap and Duluth is enjoying it. Of course the weather conditions are not conducive to picnics and motor boat trips, but summer temperatures aren't to be expected in the latter part of September and one shouldn't complain when the approach of winter is heralded. Continued fair and cool weather is promised for tonight, with unsettled conditions tomorrow.

Fair weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 6:02 and it will set at 5:56 this evening, giving eleven hours and fifty-four minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The barometric depressions which overlie the Lake region, the Rocky mountains and Alberta have caused rains in the first mentioned district, the upper Mississippi valley, New England, Oregon, Washington and the extreme Southwest during the last twenty-four hours, besides a marked increase in warmth over the Lake region, Ohio and upper Mississippi valleys. An increase in pressure from the Rocky mountains westward has resulted in cooler weather over the Plateau region and North Dakota. This change to cooler will reach the Head of the Lakes tonight."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Thursday:

Upper Michigan: Fair tonight and Thursday; colder tonight with frost.

Wisconsin: Generally fair tonight and Thursday; much cooler tonight.

Minnesota: Fair tonight, followed by increasing cloudiness Thursday; cooler in east portion tonight.

Iowa—Cloudy and probably unsettled tonight and Thursday; cooler tonight.

North and South Dakota: Generally fair tonight and Thursday.

Montana: Unsettled but generally fair weather tonight and Thursday.

Upper Lakes: Moderate to brisk west to northwest winds. Fair tonight and Thursday, preceded tonight by showers on Huron.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Empress vaudeville.
ORPHEUM—Vaudeville.

Next Saturday matinee and night, the Lyceum theater will be given over to the music lovers of the city. Grace Van Studdiford will then appear in the Parisian comic opera bouffe, "The Paradise of Mahomet." The personal popularity and high standing in the musical world of Miss Van Studdiford insures a crowded house, for everybody recalls the magnetic personality and glorious voice this prima donna displayed in "The Golden Butterfly" two seasons ago. Something a great deal better is the alluring promise that its tenor, will bring his all-star company to the Lyceum theater Sunday and Monday nights. The Sheehan Opera company this year is said to excel all previous efforts. It consists of the pick of the Chicago and Boston company, each principal being selected for his or her fitness for the roles they will sing and the chorus is the cream of the two big companies.

Never before in America has an all-star opera company been put before the public and no greater compliment can be paid this organization than to say it is on a par with its leader.

The popular opera, "The Bohemian Girl," will be given on Sunday evening and the world's greatest comic opera, "The Love Tales of Hoffman," will be presented on Monday night.

Probably no man has more fun out of his business than Edward F. Reynard, the ventriloquist who is at the Orpheum this week, presenting one of the most talked of feature acts of the present season.

Mr. Reynard manages to extract a lot of amusement for himself and his friends from his gift. Recently he was dining in Delmonico's in New York when a Frenchman came in and took a seat at an adjoining table. He had ordered a whole chicken, and it was brought to him shortly after he took his seat. He jabbed a fork into the bird, and a prolonged "oh-o-o-o-oh" came from the plate. The Frenchman dropped his knife and fork and looked about him to see if anybody had noticed the sound. Nobody appeared to be paying any attenton, and once more he attempted to cut the bird. Again came the groan, more appallin~ than the first time. He dropped his knife and fork, grabbed his hat, called for his check and hurriedly left the room, leaving the ventriloquist and his friends in almost a state of collapse.

"I always try to avoid practical jokes that will cause anybody any pain or embarassment," said Mr. Reynard "It is very easy for a ventriloquist to make a nuisance of himself, but harmless jokes add to the merriment of nations."

Manager Daniel V. Arthur holds out. Included in the long list of well known singers and comedians who are along with Miss Van Studdiford are the names of Laura Burt, John J. McCowan, Florence Rother, Edward Mora, Florenz Roth, Hudson Freeborn and a remarkable singing chorus.

"In the Bishop's Carriage" in which Gus A. Forbes will reopen his Duluth esgagement, proved one of the most popular successes of recent years both in its book form and as a play. People love a story about the under dog. A clever criminal who can outwit the police and society has society's sympathy. The heroine of "In the Bishop's Carriage" is not only a thief but a girl, a double appeal.

Miss Corinne Cantwell, the young woman for this special engagement of four weeks, will make her debut to Duluth theater goers as "Nancy" a part played by Mabel Taliaferro and later by Miss Jessie Busley. The first performance will be given next Tuesday evening and it will be repeated every evening during the week with Saturday and Sunday matinees.

Empress vaudeville will hold the boards for the remainder of this week.

STEEL TRUST TO CONTINUE

Dissolution Rumors Denied in Statement By the Directors.

Morgan and Gary Sign Declaration of Legality and Intention.

New York, Sept. 27.—Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, in a statement late last night, declared emphatically that no negotiations whatever between the Steel corporation and the department of justice had taken place looking to the dissolution or disintegration of the United States Steel corporation. The statement, made public by Judge Gary, is as follows:

"Pursuant to the unanimous vote of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation at a meeting held here this afternoon, at which there were present J. Pierpont Morgan, H. C. Frick, Norman B. Ream, P. A. B. Widener, Robert Winsor, Elbert H. Gary, George W. Perkins, John F. Dryden, Saimuel Mather, Daniel G. Reid, Henry Walters, James A. Garrett and James H. Reed, the following statement is published:

"No negotiations whatever have taken place between the Steel corporation and the department of justice looking toward the dissolution or disintegration of the corporation.

Organized for Business.

"The corporation was organized for business reasons, and purchased its various plants to promote such business, and not to restrain trade or obtain a monopoly. In all its operations the company has scrupulously observed the law and recognized the joint rights of its competitors and the consumers of its products. So far as its directors are aware, no complaint has ever been made against it by either of these interests. The directors are advised by its counsel that its existence is not in violation of the Sherman act as interpreted in the recent decisions of the supreme court.

"In view of this record and this advice, the directors feel that their duty to their stockholders, their employes and the public requires that they should set at rest all rumors to the effect that they are contemplating any voluntary dissolution or disintegration of the corporation, or have any belief that it is subject to such dissolution or disintegration by legal action.

Believe It Is Legal.

"We believe that the organization is legal, and that its management is proper. Its properties are of immense intrinsic value and the corporation is of benefit to the public interest.

H. H. OSTERHOUT OF AITKIN DIES

Father-in-Law of Aitkin Editor and Old Friend of Dr. Clemans.

Aitkin, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—If Rev. Dr. E. C. Clemans, former superintendent of this district of the M. E. church, arrives in time from Buffalo, N. Y., the funeral of the late H. H. Osterhout, who died yesterday, will be held Friday. The date of the funeral is predicated upon Dr. Clemans' arrival, because the deceased and the divine entered into a compact years ago when Mr. Osterhout, who was well known as an evangelistic worker, during a powerful religious address at Morristown, Minn., moved Dr. Clemans, then a young teacher, to a religious conviction and each agreed to preach the other's funeral.

Born in Detroit, Mich.

Mr. Osterhout was born in Detroit, Mich., in 1831, was married there and in 1857 moved to Northfield, Minn., then returned to Detroit, but in 1877 came back to Minnesota locating at Morristown, and coming to Aitkin in 1900, where he ran a head lining and stave factory. He was a devout Methodist for many years, having been ordained by an M. E. conference many years ago although he had not studied for the ministry, an honor rarely conferred. Casting his first vote for Franklin Pierce for president in 1852, the deceased never missed a chance to record his vote for Democratic candidates since.

Mr. Osterhout is survived by his wife and two sons and one daughter, the latter the wife of B. L. Hollister, editor of the Aitkin Age, and superintendent of 1910 census for this district.

TRAGEDY NEAR MINOT.

Gasoline Torch Used at Night on Tractor Explodes.

Minot, N. D., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Using a gasoline torch to light him along the way as he operated a gasoline tractor on a farm near here cost Lewis Thompson, aged 46, his life.

The gasoline torch was a crude contrivance, arranged for the purpose of providing some light by which the tractor plow could be operated and in some manner it exploded. Thompson's clothes were covered with the flaming oil and he suffered burns that were so extensive and severe that there was, from the start, little hope for recovery.

The wisdom of the Ages has produced no other remedy to equal

S.S.S. for the BLOOD

There have been many new "blood remedies" placed upon the market since S. S. S. came into existence more than forty years ago. A great many of these were "fads" for a short period, some were introduced as "miraculous wonder workers," while others claimed to have the endorsement of the scientific world. But they failed in the real test and were unable to accomplish results credited to them, so one by one they have passed out of existence.

How different is the record of S. S. S.; this medicine has succeeded because it possesses merit; it cures blood diseases because it is a real blood purifier, composed of the most active and reliable ingredients. The length of time S. S. S. has been on the market, and the fact that more of it is manufactured and sold each succeding year, proves its genuine worth beyond question.

S. S. S. is especially successful in the treatment of that peculiar blood disease so dreaded by humanity because of its stubborn nature and distressing symptoms. So intense is the virus of this trouble that it quickly permeates the entire blood supply, and usually produces such symptoms as ulcerated mouth and throat, brown splotches on the skin, gradual loss of hair, pains in the limbs, skin eruptions, etc. S. S. S. has cured many thousands of the most aggravated cases; and it always cures permanently. It goes down into the blood and removes all germs, virus and poisons, and one who has been cured by the use of S. S. S. need not fear any future breaking out of the malady.

No other medicine acts with such satisfactory results in these cases as S. S. S. It is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, each of which possesses blood purifying and tonic properties. This medicine takes hold of the disease at once by going directly into the circulation, and beginning the necessary work of driving the powerful virus from the blood. S. S. S. is thorough in its service; it leaves no trace of the old trouble, and when it cures, the blood is in perfect condition. S. S. S. may be used with absolute safety; it will not unpleasantly affect the stomach, bowels, or any other portion of the system. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers and it cures because of this fact. If you are afflicted with this disease do not waste valuable time with experimental medicines, but write for our Instructive Treatment book and let us send you an abundance of proof that S. S. S. is the remedy most certain to cure you. No charge for the book or any special medical advice that may be desired. S. S. S. is for sale at drug stores.

List of Towns Which Will Be Visited on Trade Excursion.

Forty-Nine Stops Will Be Made During Three Days.

The itinerary for the next boosters' excursion under the direction of the wholesalers' committee of the Commercial club, has been completed and approved by the railroads over which the special train will run.

The start from Duluth will be made Tuesday morning, Oct. 3, at 12:30 and the train will arrive at Bayfield, the first scheduled stop, at 5:10 in the morning. The first night will be spent at Park Falls, a town of 2,000 people in Price county. Fifteen towns will be visited the first day.

Nineteen towns are to be visited on the second day and the day's run will end at Eau Claire, where the stop for the night will be made.

Fifteen stops are scheduled for the third day and the train will return to Duluth at 6:50 Thursday evening, Oct. 5.

The Commercial club is receiving many responses to the invitation to Duluth business firms and civic bodies to join in the excursion and it is expected that the crowd will be considerably larger than that which made the trip over the Soo road the latter part of last month.

WARRANT FOR CLERK OF CANADIAN CUSTOMS.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 27.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of D. Spencer McCaig, chief clerk of the Canadian customs office at Lethbridge, Alberta. It is alleged that McCaig is several thousand dollars short in accounts. McCaig is supposed to be on his way to Montana.

CONFERENCE IS PLANNED

Meeting of State Charities Will Take Place Here Next Month.

President Vincent of State University to Deliver Opening Address.

A four days' conference of the state charities will be held in Duluth Nov. 1 to 4, inclusive.

All the charitable societies of the state will send delegates to the Duluth meeting. About 100 are expected to be in attendance.

President Vincent of the state university has promised to be in attendance and deliver the opening address. President F. E. McVey of the University of North Dakota is also planning to be here. He will deliver an address.

With the coming of fall, the work of the Associated Charities is increasing.

During the summer months the number of cases fell off, but with the coming of winter they are beginning to come in again.

Yesterday seventeen cases were reported. During the summer the number did not run over two or three a day. In the late fall and winter the cases run as high as twenty-five in a single twenty-four hours.

So rapidly is the work increasing as the fall advances, that there will be many kinds of cases to talk over at the mass meeting of representatives from all the societies which is beng held this afternoon.

This meeting was called some time ago by Courtenay Dinwiddie, secretary of the Associated Charities. It is for the purpose of talking over the system of dealing with certain kinds of cases and to equalize the work between the different societies.

The rush of the season catches the Associated Charities short-handed. Miss Meeker, assistant to Mr. Dinwiddie, was called home to Elizabeth, N. J., yesterday on account of the serious illness of her sister.

ENDEAVOR RALLY DAY

Young People's Societies of City Will Meet Friday Evening.

At the First Presbyterian church Friday evening of this week the local Christian Endeavorers will gather for the third quarterly rally of 1911. The occasion will be of especial interest to all who are in touch with this work, as in addition to the regular business which comes up at each quarterly rally the union will elect officers for the ensuing year, and the report of the convention held in Atlantic City last July will be heard.

Miss Annie M. Hicken, who has represented her society, the Lakeside Presbyterian at many conventions, ranging from local gatherings to the international convention at Atlantic City and the world's convention in London several years ago, was the delegate of the local union to the last gatherings and has an interesting story of events there. She will describe fully her impressions of the great gatherings and will bring to the local endeavorers some idea of the methods and ways of work that the greatest leaders in young peoples religious work are now employing. From previous reports that Miss Hicken has made, the Duluth C. E. members are looking forward to a most inspiring and helpful meeting.

C. J. Hockin, who is just finishing his term as president of the local union states that there will be considerable rivalry in the nominations for several of the offices to be filled. Material for workers in the Endeavor union is plentiful, and the nominating committee has prepared a strong set of names to be voted upon.

One of the features of the rallies which have been held in this city, have been the entertainment, generally musical, which has been part of the evening's program. For this occasion James McGhie and Miss Maude Mattison are on the program for solos. Miss MacAskill will be the pianist and S. W. Richardson, director of the general music.

It is expected that several delegates from outside the city will be in attendance as in former rallies of this kind.

KIMMEL CASE TO BE HEARD IN COURT SOON.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 27. — Whether the man of mystery now in Niles, Mich., claiming to be George A. Kimmel, missing bank cashier, is the real Kimmel or an imposter, may be legally decided in St. Louis within the next few months. The test will be made in the trial of a suit of George C. Rankin, receiver for the First National bank of Niles, against the New York Life Insurance company to compel it to pay a $5,000 policy on Kimmel's life. The case, which has been twice tried, is on United States District Judge Dyer's docket.

NATIONAL WEATHER BULLETIN ISSUED

Washington, Sept. 27. — Unusual warmth, abundant sunshine and deficient rainfall were the marked feaures of the weather over Eastern and Southern districts, while in the Northwest it was generally cool, partly cloudy and continued dry during the last week, according to the National Weekly Weather bulletin. Summarizing the weather the report says in part:

"In the corn and winter wheat growing states the weather was favorable for the ripening and cutting of corn, and the soil continues in generally good condition for fall seeding.

"In the spring wheat states the weather was generally cold with some frost.

Little rain occurred, however, and conditions were favorable for thrashing and other fall work."

PULP AND PAPER FROM NEW BRUNSWICK FREE.

Washington, Sept. 27. — Practically all the wood pulp and print paper produced in New Brunswick until Aug. 1, 1912, will enter the United States free of duty. This is made possible by a revised ruling by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Curtis, under the only operative clause of the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

The surveyor general of the customs of New Brunswick advised the treasury department that the new law of that province restricting the exportation of wood pulp and print paper did not apply to lands operated under licenses issued or renewed prior to Oct. 1, on which date the act becomes effective. The lands are used under long term leases, governed by yearly licenses, and Aug. 1 is the date for renewing these licenses. Consequently, until that time, there will be no American import tax on pulp wood or print paper originating from those lands.

Regulations also were issued by Mr. Curtis governing the taxation of Canadian pulp wood and print paper coming partially from crown lands and partially from private lands. American customs collectors will insist upon sworn statements showing the percentage of origin, assessing the duty on products of crown lands, where the exportation is restricted, and entering the remainder free.

CASHIER LEAVES MAN IN BANK; $400 GONE.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—The State Bank of Winnetka, a suburb fifteen miles north of here, was robbed of $400, the contents of the open money drawer, yesterday. Two men are believed to have been involved in the robbery.

Henry R. Hale, cashier, was alone in the bank at 2 o'clock when a stranger entered and engaged him in conversation. While they talked, an employe of a drug store next door called Mr. Hale to the telephone, saying the telephone in the bank appeared out of order. The cashier left the stranger alone in the bank while he went to the store.

He was kept at the telephone for several minutes by an unknown person, and on his return he found the stranger had entered his cage and taken the cash from the drawer.

CALL AN EXTRA SESSION!

The state auditor announces that the state tax rate for 1912 will be 3.88 mills, or $3.88 per $1,000. This is the highest state tax rate since 1873, according to the figures in the state auditor's annual report.

Here is something for the average taxpayer to think about. While he is thinking about that, here are a few more points for him to think about:

Railroad property in this state is taxed 4 per cent on its gross earnings, but if it were assessed and taxed as other property is assessed and taxed it would pay the equivalent of more than 6 per cent on its gross earnings, according to figures prepared by the state tax commission.

That means that railroad property is paying a third less taxes than it should pay, which means that owners of other classes of property, besides paying their full share of state taxes, are also paying what the railroads should pay and do not.

If the railroad tax rate should be raised to 5 per cent, the gain would be nearly $1,000,000 a year, or almost as much as the increase in the state tax levy over last year. If it were raised to 6 per cent the gain would be much more than the increase in the levy.

Clearly, railroad taxes should be increased.

But before they can be increased the people must vote on the proposition after the legislature has submitted it to them. If the legislature does not act until the regular session in 1913, the people cannot vote on the increase until 1914, and the increased tax will not be effective until 1915.

But if the governor calls the legislature in special session this winter, and the legislature proposes an increase, as it certainly will,—The Herald has pledges from enough members to pass the bill,—the people can ratify the increase at the general election next year, and it will be effective in 1913, or two years sooner than it can be managed by waiting for the next regular session.

Shall Minnesota taxpayers be condemned to bear unnecessarily for two years the highest tax rate in nearly forty years? Or shall the governor be compelled to protect the farmers and merchants and bankers and laborers who are now paying a third of the railroads' taxes, by calling the legislature in extra session next January to make the railroads shoulder their full share of the tax burden?

That question is up to the people of Minnesota. That question is up to the governor of Minnesota. Neither can avoid it. If the people must pay during the next two years the highest state taxes in more than a generation, it will be because Governor Eberhart deliberately neglects his duty to save the millions of dollars in railroad taxes that will be lost forever if he refuses to call the legislature together in special session.

NO MERCY FOR MASHERS.

"Any 'mashers' who are convicted before me need look for no mercy," Judge Windom of the municipal court is reported as saying. Good for Judge Windom!

The masher is a brainless, useless wart on the face of creation who stands about street corners with his hat on the back of his head, a cigarette in his mouth, an evil leer in his eye and vacancy in his head. His chief joy in life is making it uncomfortable for young women who pass him in the street, and it ought to be anybody's chief joy in life to get the chance to punch the putty face of this miserable reptile.

A straight jail sentence, such as Judge Windom suggested, is the only remedy for such disfigurements of the streets, and it needn't be too short, either.

Chief Troyer says that the ordinances are lame in this respect, and don't give the police power enough. If that is true the council ought to take pleasure in putting through an ordinance that will put the masher out of business in this community for all time to come.

THE LIMIT OF ABUSING A PRIVILEGE.

The congressional franking privilege and the congressional leave to print things in the Record both have been abused freely, until the patrons of the postoffice are paying for the free hauling of an amazing miscellany, and the Congressional Record is anything but a true report of what happens in congress.

But so far as we have observed the limit of abuse along both lines has been reached by the city of St. Louis and Congressman L. C. Dyer of that city.

There comes through the mail an envelope bearing Mr. Dyer's frank, entitling it to free transmission. The excuse for this is that its contents appeared in the Congressional Record, and they did.

But the matter contained in the envelope is a frank and brazen advertisement of the city of St. Louis, and though it was printed in the Congressional Record and therefore is technically entitled to free transmission it is obvious that the "speech" thus being distributed never was delivered on the floor of congress.

To make it certain that nobody would misunderstand the purpose of this widespread distribution of Mr. Dyer's speech, the envelope has this inscription printed in red—apparently with a rubber stamp—upon its face: "A Talk About St. Louis."

The occasion for Mr. Dyer's eulogy of St. Louis was the discussion of a resolution requesting the president to invite foreign nations to participate in the celebration of the completion of the Florida East Coast Railway company's line connecting the mainland of Florida with Key West. Mr. Dyer appears from the Record to have arisen upon this occasion to approve the passage of the resolution, and to have progressed from that to a general approval of such celebrations, then to a discussion of what the Louisiana Purchase exposition did for St. Louis, and finally to eight closely printed pages of "boosting" for St. Louis. Of course he never delivered such a speech on the floor of congress. Undoubtedly he made a few introductory remarks, got leave to "extend his remarks in the Record," and then deftly introduced his panegyric of St. Louis.

St. Louis, obviously, is thrifty. It is willing to save printing and postage bills at the expense of Uncle Sam's government, and yet it is alive to the need of advertising itself.

Yet it is to be questioned whether it is advertising itself more for the nice things and no doubt true things Mr. Dyer said about it—to his stenographer—than for its picayune policy of letting the government of the United States pay its advertising bills.

This surely caps the climax of abuses of the franking privilege and of the "leave to print" privilege. If the example of St. Louis is followed by other communities, presently the Congressional Record will be a bulky volume every day, containing long and verbose encomiums about Pumpkin Hollow, Kalamazoo and Cedar Grove, and the mails will be flooded with advertising literature printed by Uncle Sam at cost and carried by him free of charge.

Better, however, for congress to take action at once to put a stop to such absurd pilfering from the public till.

CALIFORNIA'S IMPORTANT ELECTION.

The people of California are going to get together at the polls Oct. 10 to decide upon a number of very important details of the public business—which is the people's business. The election is, in many respects, one of the most important state elections ever held in this country.

It is important both because of the vital things involved in it, and because it is the people who are to decide them and not the people's representatives, who have almost always in the past been entrusted with important public matters on the outgrown theory that the people are not fitted to decide their own public business.

Twenty-three questions are to be passed upon by the people of California at this election. All are important, but some are of first importance. These are as follows: Woman suffrage, the initiative and the referendum, the recall (including judges), regulation of railroad rates by a commission of five members to be appointed by the governor, abolition of railroad passes and provision for a workingmen's compensation act.

Among the minor proposals are the following: Putting regulation of weights and measures under the state government; home rule for counties, a new and interesting plan; provision for a recess of thirty days or more during the legislative session to allow the lawmakers and the public to digest pending measures at home; prohibiting appeal judges from reversing criminal convictions on minor technicalities; authorizing a state civil service law; giving the railroad commission power of control over all public utilities not municipally owned; authorizing municipal ownership; allowing war veterans exemption of $1,000 from taxation. The other measures are details of state and local government not of much general importance.

This is a pretty full meal for the voters to digest, but they have had plenty of time to consider the pending measures, and there is no reason to expect that they will not vote intelligently upon them, particularly as in its recent elections the state has given proof that it has thrown off the blinders of sodden partisanship and the rule of corporation-directed bosses.

The provision for home rule for counties gives each county, by popular vote, the right to fix the number of its officials, their duties, salaries, etc., thus placing the county on the basis of independence and dignity enjoyed by home-rule charter cities. The provision for a divided legislative session is wholesome. It provides that after the legislature has been in session thirty days, during which bills must be introduced, it shall take a recess for thirty days or more and go home and talk it all over with the folks. This will keep the legislators more closely in touch with the people, and will give the people a chance to express their opinions of pending measures.

The initiative, the referendum, the recall and woman suffrage are, of course, the matters of first importance, involving as they do the system by which the people are governed. It is to be hoped that the people of California will adopt all these measures, and judging from reports that come in advance of the election, they are very likely to do so; almost certain so far as direct legislation and direct control of public officers are concerned. if they do not go so far as to give women the ballot.

OPPORTUNITY BECKONS.

The New York Sun expresses its double-leaded dissatisfaction with President Taft's attitude toward public questions on his trip in an editorial of which the following is a part:

"There is only one issue at the present time of sufficient magnitude to take a president of the United States away from his post of official duty to give oral instruction to the population betwen the two oceans. That is the supreme issue forced into being by the progressive disorganizers of government; the issue with Socialism disguised, half clothed or naked. Everywhere and in both parties men of patriotism and men of business are looking hard for a leader with the discernment to recognize this central fact of the situation and with courage enough to face the people and tell them the truth about it.

"Has Mr. Taft the discernment? Has he the courage? If so, Opportunity never beckoned more eagerly to the right man. If so, he will let the complexities of the Sherman act and the perplexities of tariff schedules go to Gehenna, and put himself speedily and unmistakably at the head of the conservative political forces that are bound to prevail if this Republic is going to endure."

Here is, indeed, a beautiful chance for the president. The Sun, speaking no doubt the mind of morganized Big Business, offers him the leadership of a small but select band of patriots who are firmly convinced that unless they continue to rule it the Republic is tottering to its fall. Every whelp of Special Privilege, every waterer of stocks, every beneficiary of tariff favoritism, every enemy of popular rule, every prebendiary of Mammon, every traitor to democratic government, will flock eagerly to his standard if he heeds this beckoning of a siren Opportunity.

THE STATE PRESS AND THE EXTRA SESSION

Governor May Reconsider.

Bemidji Pioneer: At a considerable expense, work and worry, The Duluth Herald obtained an expression from every member of the Minnesota legislature as to the advisability of convening the legislature in extraordinary session to enact railroad legislation. In the first place it must be conceded that The Herald is enterprising. It is no small task to obtain expressions from nearly two hundred persons, especially when those persons are in public life.

Ever since the court ruled that the Minnesota railroad legislation which provided for the two-cent fare and cheaper freight rates was not worth a hill of beans, The Herald has been in for an extra session to increase the gross earnings tax in order to make up what it figured will be a two million dollar increase in the taxes of the state. It has been contended that it would be folly to call an extra session, and the governor has given this as an excuse, until the higher court has passed on the pending proposition. However, The Herald poll is interesting because it shows that a majority of the members of the legislature are themselves in favor of reconvening at St. Paul this winter to pass, not only railroad legislation, but some of the other needed reforms Prominent among these reforms is our old friend, Reapportionment.

While the Pioneer does not believe that The Herald is sound in its deduction as to the wisdom of convening the law makers to pass railroad legislation at this time, this paper long has contended that an extra session might pass a reapportionment bill and, if this is true, the cost of convening the legislature would amply repay. Therefore, we confess to some selfish interest in The Herald's investigation as to the legislature in regard to gathering again in the near future.

And it would seem that Governor Eberhart must take some notice of the expressions of the legislature as given to The Herald and that he possibly will reconsider his determination not to convene the legislature. It is likely that if the governor is convinced that there is an honest and popular demand for added legislation the coming winter, that he will yield to this demand and convene the lawmakers. So far as reapportionment is concerned there is some reason to believe that a bill might be gotten through. As we have often said, a real reapportionment bill never was before the senate. It is pretty freely admitted that if certain southern senators, who are leaders in the senate, had been approached and their aid solicited in putting through the bill, so that they might claim some of the glory, the bill would have gone through in some shape and would at least have given the North some degree of relief. As the matter stands now, according to many legal lights, it will be impossible for the senate to reapportion until after the next census, which means that the North must continue to permit the over-represented districts of the South to tell a majority what legislation should and what legislation should not be passed.

We congratulate The Herald on its enterprise and hope that its efforts may result in good.

We are Seeing.

Brainerd Journal-Press: The Duluth Herald's campaign for an extra session of the legislature to raise the tax on railroads, meets with the approval of the majority of the state press. It is a move in the proper direction, but we haven't much faith in the governor ever calling it. The Herald has enough votes pledged to pass this measure. Now let's see what the governor is really made of.

A Silent Governor.

Mahnomen Pioneer: Twenty-six governors in session in New Jersey condemned the decision of Judge Sanborn in the Minnesota rate cases and the railroads for being so quick to take advantage of it. One governor in Minnesota evidently has never heard of it judging by his silence in the matter.

People or Railroads?

Fairmont Independent: This paper has been a consistent supporter of Governor Eberhart. We think he has meant well, but he has been talking too much, or the newspapers have misrepresented.

When he came out flat-footed and slapped the progressive Republicans and lined himself with the standpatters, he made a very serious mistake. If the reports, as published in the papers, have been false, he should lose no time in setting himself right.

Again The Duluth Herald has had an interview, and published the same, with every member of the present state legislature, and a large majority of them have expressed their desire to vote for the bill increasing the gross earnings tax of the railroads.

This will be in the nature of constitutional amendment, and if they wait until their regular session of the legislature, it will be put off nearly four years. By calling a special session, it will be less than two.

It is now up to Governor Eberhart to show his hand, whether he stands with the people or the railroad companies. A special session of the legislature, for some reasons, is to be regretted.

This is a matter of public necessity and means a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the people of the state and just rebuke to the railroad companies, who in violation of law and with the aid of the courts have increased the rate of passenger and freight tariff above that established by the statutes of the state.

People Are for It.

Motley Mercury: The people of Minnesota are for an extra session for the purpose of increasing the gross earnings taxes of the railroads, but Governor Eberhart seems to have no ear for the wants of the people but listens only to the siren voice of the big interests which already have a death-like grip on us. Does Eberhart think the people are never going to awaken to the condition of things? Does he think that they are going on forever electing men to public office who will sell the state, body and soul, to the big interests? If he does and expects to occupy the governor's chair for another term we are afraid that he is due for a rude awakening in the near future.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THE SETTLERS AND THE GAME LAWS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The recent activities of the game wardens in this locality have aroused the settlers to a lively discussion of the merits of the present game laws and the method of their enforcement.

It is needless to say that the settlers, generally, consider them unfair and unjust, and not worthy of commanding obedience.

The text of the law is itself proof that those who drafted it had no regard for the rights of the settler or a thought of the hardships it might impose.

But, as the settler has no one to represent his cause before the public, his protest is unheard and the injustice continues.

The man who leads his family into the trackless forest, with the intention of establishing a home, and adding to the wealth of the state, considers the game there to be found, one of his principal resources and dependencies.

It takes years of toil and hardships to change a worthless jungle of brush and stumps into productive farms. During these years the farmers must have subsistence. If the earning of money to support his family requires all the settler's time, he must neglect his homestead so the development of a home is much deferred. Such conditions drive many hard workers back to the workshop of the city or tenantry on developed farms.

If he is sure of his meat supply, half his living is provided. But if he is harrassed, as at present, by an armed aggregation of wardens, subsidized by the state in the interest of a worthless parasitic class of sportsmen and is forced to buy his meat at the present exorbitant prices, or, as is more often the case, do without it, his hardships are materially increased, and his years of privation doubled.

The game of the forest has always been considered a necessary part of the pioneer's resources. But in this day of gilded plutocracy, all things must be preserved for the profit or pleasure of the idle rich. The economic side of the question is not considered; only the wishes of the sporting fraternity.

Nor have sports any conscientious respect for the law. They go into the woods for amusement, and their amusement consists in shooting any game that may be seen.

Moose, cows and calves suffer alike, but only the bulls, or their heads, are removed from the woods. These are the real destroyers of the game. All they seek is the excitement of the chase. Many take only the heads of the moose, leaving the carcass to furnish food for the wolves. This is criminal waste. To deny the settler the right to kill and use these animals for himself and family, whether it be season or not, and then permit these "head-hunters" to destroy the game merely to satiate their love for killing, is the direst injustice to industrial society.

A law which is just does not need an army of special detectives to enforce it. The local sheriff with the aid of the law-abiding citizens, fully enforces the liquor and other criminal laws. Why cannot the same authorities enforce the game laws?

All desire the preservation of the big game of our forests, but we do not favor its preservation merely for the pleasure of the sporting element, but for the aid of the struggling settler in developing the great resources of this country. This is the only logical, just and satisfactory way to deal with this question, and we hope that some day we will be able to place in our legislative halls men who can discern the difference between justice and political patronage.

G. W. ROBERTSON,
Grand Marais, Minn., Sept. 25.

Our Dumb Animals: The pictures of animals, featured in many magazines, books, and even daily newspapers, are supplying a popular demand. Photography furnishes nothing more attractive than trophies of the hunt with the camera. Instead of the dead bodies of innocent animals that love life, they show the life-like images of creatures that grace and beautify nature. Such pictures often teach humane lessons more effectively than any plea, argument, or sermon. A writer in the Poultry Journal thus points out the difference in results between camera and shotgun:

People in general have become educated to such an appreciation and love for our native birds and wild animals that they would ten times over rather see the photograph of one of these wild friends reproduced in papers, books, or magazines than to see or read of a man killing any number of them at one shot or in one day's sport. In fact, the sensible and humane huntsman of today shoots with the camera instead of the gun, and the intelligent and educated trapper lies in ambush to study the form, actions, and habits of the wild things of fields, forests, and streams, rather than crush them in jaws of steel and kill them for what their hides will bring.

Wild animals will hold their own among wild animals, and no species will become extinct or greatly reduced in numbers through natural enemies. All will share the open feeding and nesting grounds in balanced proportions. But no wild animals can withstand the attacks of man, and no species can multiply under the reign of the modern shotgun.

The Bills.

Here's the postman with his bills,
Monthly bills!
At his coming how my solar plexus thrills!
How it trembles, trembles, trembles
With a kind of quaking fright
As the missives he assembles
(While my tragic face resembles
A storm-threatened, starless night)
Seem to climb, climb, climb,
To an altitude sublime.
Heaping till they make a ghostly range of frigid-looking hills
Of the bills, bills, bills, bills,
Bills, Bills, Bills—
Heart-distressing, soul-depressing, unpaid bills!
Here are yellow wedding bills—
Golden bills!
What a world of weariness their quantity instills!
Though they're reminiscent, quite,
Of a time of pure delight,
Now they make me madly note,
And all in vain,
That I must have been the goat
When those turtle-doves were married —do they gloat
O'er my pain?
Oh, these bills are bitter pills;
What a juicy bank account their liquidation kills!
How it chills!
How it spills
Into nothing! How it rills
Into bill collectors' tills
While those endless checks I'm drawing,
Paying bills, bills, bills,
Paying bills, bills, bills, bills,
Bills, bills, bills—
As the color keeps retreating from my gills!—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Entitled to the Job.

Milwaukee Free Press: Joe, the regular office boy, had been sick for several weeks, so the head of the office was forced to engage a substitute. The substitute proved such an intelligent boy that the employer was loth to let him go.

"But I have worked for you for two years," pleaded the regular boy, as he asked to return.

"Well, if you can arrange it with Tommy, then you can come back," said the employer.

The next day the employer came down to his office. The top of his desk was smashed, an ink-bottle had been overturned, while the glass in the door was broken where a paper weight had been thrown through. The papers in the office were scattered over the floor and the furniture was in wild disarray.

Seated in the midst of this wreckage, his eyes beautifully blackened, his nose bleeding and his clothes torn nearly to shreds, was the regular office boy. When he saw the employer, his eyes lit up in triumph.

"Tommy is gone, sir," he said. "I've arranged with him."

"The Hussy."

Just witness how she did it;
The brazen little flirt!
She got your uncle going good
And then she did him dirt.
She cuddled comfy close to him
And, purring like a kitten,
She made him pop the question
And then gave him the mitten.

The hussy! She'll be sorry.
She'll yet regret the day
It wasn't right for her to treat
Your uncle in that way.
Her's is the fate of all coquettes
For her, slam after slam;
We neighbors can't respect her now
She's jilted Uncle Sam.

Quack Doctorin'.

Columbia, S. C., State: The New York World believes that Taft could recover by sending some guilty magnate to jail. But Taft would rather keep on taking Penrose's Protection Pills and stay sick.

Judge Morris concluded that the defendants were not guilty of so grave a charge, but thought an action for trespass could be maintained against them and one against the father for support of the child, he having failed to pay the amount agreed upon.

GROSSCUP ON TRUSTS AND THE LAW.

(From an article on the Standard Oil and Tobacco decisions in the July North American Review by the Chicago federal judge who is retiring from the bench because he wished "more freedom.")

It would be mere hypocrisy to say that the court has not turned upon itself. What the court fourteen years ago said was not in the act the court now says is in the act. Meantime not a letter of the act has been changed. What has changed is the attitude of the public mind—the public mind informed by this fourteen years of experience.

The explanation is that the Sherman act as previously interpreted was a wholly misconceived and misdirected public experiment. It was loaded with disappointment to those who sincerely are looking forward to a national prosperity more widely distributed, and with dynamite to those whose interest is wholly in the present. As a road to restored "individualism" in trade and commerce it led nowhere; every one of its boasted achievements, like the Northern Securities case for instance, faded entirely away the moment the last line of the decree had been written. The "dissolutions" were dissolutions on paper only.

As a road to better business and economic conditions the act had brought the country to the edge of the volcano. It was inevitable that an experiment of that kind would be stopped some time by somebody.

The "fact" that modern enterprise operates and must operate through combinations and even monopolies has become so obvious that every one sees it—every one except the "law." * * * In other words, the currents of "law" and "fact" respecting monopoly and combination, instead of running side by side as they should run, took to running in opposite directions.

In no place was the misplacement of the Sherman act as previously interpreted more clearly exhibited than in its application to the railroads of the country.

The practical result of the Sherman act as previously interpreted was that not only the carriers of the country and the so-called big trusts of the country but nearly every business of every character was put literally "under the condemnation of the law." Nearly every business movement with spirit in it became a national sin. And there was no escape from the wrath to come except to make one's peace with the executive authorities at Washington. Of course no president or attorney general ever wished to bring havoc to business. There was never a day, therefore, that the law was executed against all who fell literally under its condemnation. * * * Who should be punished for violating the law was a province transferred from the courts to the executive, and the transfer, unobserved as it was, was nothing less, as some one—Judge Lacombe, I think—has already said, than revolution in every ideal of English and American jurisprudence.

One word more. From the viewpoint of the business man and his lawyer, it is plain that the Sherman act, even as now interpreted, is still not definite; that no business foresight can discern what restraint of trade incidental to business may be held by the courts to be reasonable and what unreasonable; that every push of enterprise forward is to enter upon uncharted waters.

From the viewpoint of a large number of those to whom this inquiry is a matter of deep concern, perhaps a large majority yet, the Sherman act, as it now stands interpreted, will look like a gun from which the load has been extracted. As a weapon it will look dismantled. As a mere weapon it is dismantled. * * * Indeed, the paramount benefit of this latest decision, to my mind, is that it will bring the public mind to discern that we are in a new age in which combinations and monopolies ever are economic necessities, and that being here as the necessary economic equipment of the times, the thing to do with them is not to train guns on them as if they ought not to be here at all, but to so safeguard them as forms of investment, and so limit them in dividends allowed to be paid (their rights are state-given only, not the rights of natural persons) that they will have no motive to deal otherwise than fairly with the people and will become also, as property investments, representative of the people.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Husbands have made women very happy by not worrying them.

A man who can fix a lock in his house can also drive his family crazy doing it.

There is one way to do a thing right and a thousand ways to do it wrong to suit all comers.

Purgatory may help a man to appreciate heaven, but what is there to help him appreciate purgatory?

A girl waits till she gets her mouth puckered up before she decides whether she will laugh or cry.

Mother Is Waiting.

Your mother is waiting to hear from you, boy!
While her a letter today.
Or, if you would grant her greater joy
Abandon your work for a fleeting stay
With the dear old soul, my boy.

Your father is waiting to hear from you, boy!
The tears that moisten his cheeks
Are eloquent, though his words are few
Of longing and pain when he vainly seeks
For a letter from you, my boy.

They are your earliest friends, my boy!
They are your latest ones too.
And nothing your moments can better employ
Than the path of their later years to strew
With flowers of love, my boy.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Philadelphia Ledger: "It is the duty of every one of you to make at least one person happy during the week," said the Sunday school teacher. "Have you?"

"I did," said Johnny, promptly.

"That's nice. And what did you do?"

"I went to see my aunt, and she's always happy when I go home again."

Lippincott's Magazine: "Yes, he had some trouble with his eyes," said the celebrated oculist. "Every time he went to read he would read double."

"Poor fellow," remarked the sympathetic person. "I suppose that interfered with his holding a position?"

"Not at all. The gas company gobbled him up and gave him a lucrative job reading gas meters."

Everybody's Magazine: The professor of law was quizzing his class. Singling out a somnolent student in the rear of the room, he addressed a question to him. Confused, the student rose, and bent his ear to catch the stage whisper of his friends seated about him.

"Well, you ought to be able to answer," snapped the professor, "with all the aid you are receiving back there!"

"Professor," came the quick reply, "I could, but there's a difference of opinion back here."

Judge: First Aeroplanist—He's a good fellow, the "salt of the earth."

Second Ditto—He's 'way above that. He's the very oxygen of the air.

London Sketch: "You're rather a young man to be left in charge of a drug shop," said the fussy old gentleman. "Have you any diploma?"

"Why—er—no sir," replied the shopman; "but we have a preparation of our own that's just as good.

Chicago Tribune: "Brother Hardesty wasn't able to come to church last Sunday. He had caught a cold."

"Yes, and it settled him on his feet. That was our day for taking up the missionary collection."

Harper's Bazar: Agent—Don't you want to own a home of your own?

Knicker—No, I'd rather own the home of somebody else.

Judge: Child—Mother, where do autoists go when they go on a "joy ride?"

Mother—Most of them go to the hospital, my dear.

Fogg—Right you are! Wonder never ceases.

Drawing the Line.

Galveston News: We are not at all prudish, but still we think that the lady who sits in front of us at church ought not to wear a decollete that is cut lower than the back of the bench.

Habitual.

London Globe: Here is a story which Baron Douse, the celebrated Irish judge, once told in that exaggerated Irish "brogue" which he loved to employ.

"I was down in Cork last month, holding assizes. On the first day, when the jury came in, the officer of the court said:

"'Gentlemen av the jury, ye'll take your accustomed places, if ye plaze.'

"And may I never laugh," said the baron, "if they didn't all walk into the dock!"

WOMAN'S REALM.

A project to raise $1,000,000 in the United States from the Norwegians here to be used as a gift to Norway in 1914, the one hundredth anniversary of the establishing of the independence of that country, has been started by prominent Norwegians of this country.

Mrs. A. C. Floan of St. Paul, national president of the organization which is taking up this work, was in Duluth yesterday to interest people here in the plan and Mrs. H. Hovde of this city was appointed chairman of the work in St. Louis county.

The idea is not to raise the money by large donations but simply by small gifts from every Norweglan in this country.

Of this sum, $225,000 will be used to restore the Trondhjem cathedral at Trondhjem which was one of the first Christian cathedrals ever built and of the rest of the fund and interest part will be given each year on July 4 to whatever part of Norway it is most needed.

This is a big undertaking but with three years to accomplish it in the committee feels that the sum fixed can be raised.

Mrs. Crandall is organist at the House of Hope church in St. Paul and is an artistic accompanist.

Miss Gunderson, who will also appear on the program in violin numbers, is an accomplished violinist and altogether the program ought to be a great success in opening the work of the club for the year.

The auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. is to be used again this year for the club recitals and meetings.

Rosy As a Girl.

Summit, N. C.—In a letter received from this place, Mr. J. W. Church, the notary public, says: "My wife had been ailing for nearly 12 years, from female ailments, and at times, was unable to leave the house. She suffered agony with her side and back. We tried physicians for years, without relief. After these treatments all failed, she took Cardui, and gained in weight at once. Now she is red and rosy as a school girl." Cardui, as a tonic for women, has brought remarkable results. It relieves pain and misery and is the ideal tonic for young and old. Try it. At druggists

THE EVENING STORY

The Lonely Old Hen

By Julia H. Price.

"Say, Miss Abby, here's a letter for you. Guess it must be from your brother up Bolton way." The postmistress generally guessed who one's letters were from.

"Yes. Guess it is. I was expecting a letter today." It had been four months since Miss Abby had received a letter, but no one at Bellwood was ever surprised at receiving mail.

"Hope nothing's the matter with him. You haven't heard from him for quite a spell, have you?" solicitously inquired the postmistress.

"No. It has been quite a time since I heard from Sam, but I don't think anything is the matter. Anyway I must be getting home—all the flowers must be watered tonight and that's quite a job." Miss Abby betrayed no sign of emotion at receiving the first letter from her brother since he had left town five years ago. People had wondered, when there had been no correspondence between the two, but there had been no satisfactory explanation. So when the letter came at last Miss Miner, the postmistress, had casually remarked to all the women coming for the mail—

"Guess Sam Clark's decided to write to his sister once more. Its about time—don't you think?"

One and all agreed that it was and speculated as to the kind of letter, but they were all disappointed when they thought Miss Abby would tell for she carried her letter home before she opened it.

As she tore open the envelope she wondered what Sam would have to say after such longe years of silence. True she always searched the Bolton news in the "Weekly Gossip" as knew about Sam's latest horses, his new house and his prosperous business, but then this was the first real word from him in five years. The first words, "My dear big sis" brought tears to her eyes, he was the same affectionate fellow. Then she steeled herself and read on.

"Your brother is a pretty sick fellow and needs some one to look after him. Can't you forget his foolish speech and come to live with him? He will try to be good."

The letter was so pitiful, so boyish, that mother love told Miss Abby to go to him and take care of him forever, but her stubborn pride cried out.

"No. I won't go. I told him I would never live with him and I won't. Just because I didn't want him to marry that foolish Cary girl, he said that since I was a lonely old hen who couldn't get a cock of my own I needn't try to keep everybody else the same way. I told him then and there that so far as I cared he could go and take his hen with him, and that he need never say anything more to me about his affairs. Well, he hasn't said a word since his flyaway wouldn't have him until he needed a hen to take care of him—then I'm good enough. No, I won't go." She had torn the letter into bits as she was talking and as she finished she threw the scraps in a pile under her table. Then she went out to take care of her flowers, the only things on which she poured her whole love.

As she weeded the pansy bed near the fence, her neighbor came out and called cheerily:

"Hope there wasn't any bad news from Sam."

"Oh, no," answered Miss Abby trying to appear unconcerned. "Don't you think this bluish pansy is a beauty?"

"Yes. I always liked your pansies. They seem to grow bigger than most folk's do. By the way weren't pansies Sam's favorites. He always used to be picking them when he was a little fellow. John and I thought may be that was why you worked so much with your pansies, is it?" the neighbor was tactfully trying to learn more about the letter so that she might have the honor of retailing it.

"No, there isn't any special reason. I just fancy pansies myself. Miss Abby had turned to her sweet pea vines hoping to avoid further questioning and the neighbor finding inqury fruitless hailed a passer-by with the hopes of hearing the very latest from the village.

Despite Miss Abby's negation she knew that her neighbor's reasoning was right, for Sam had always called pansies his "velvet flowers," and helped her set them out, but she was too proud to acknowledge the truth. She had said time and again that all the love she had ever had for her brother had died when he had so unjustly taunted her. She went into the house more determined than ever to write her refusal in good plain English. She took out her gold pen—in the plush case was a tiny card on which was written in a boyish scrawl, "Merry Christmas from Sam to Abby." No, she couldn't make her refusal bitter enough if she used that pen so she looked through the desk to find another.

In the midst of her search, the minister interrupted to talk over some parish matters with which she was helping him. When he left it was late but she was determined to write her letter before she had time to think it over. So taking a rusty pen from an old pigeon-hole, she wrote very painstakingly:

"Mr. Samuel Clark: Dear Sir—It will be impossible for me to undertake any more duties. My time is fully occupied. ABBY CLARK."

As she reread it she said to herself, "Well, I guess that will show him that I can get along good enough without him and that I don't care to waste words on him. I surely hope he won't pester me any any more."

Then she tried all the windows and doors and went wearily into her room; she noticed scraps of her brother's letter under the table but she was too tired to pick them up. After undressing she sank to her knees and began slowly to repeat the Lord's prayer. When she reached "forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors" she choked up a bit but she went on determined to let nothing soften her heart. When she finally got into bed she found that she couldn't go to sleep. She heard the clock strike 12, 1, 2, before she dozed off to dream about a sick little boy with his head pillowed on a big velvety pansy.

She had not been asleep long before she heard a tapping on the floor near her bed, then a scratchy noise like some one tearing paper. She listened, frightened. What could it be? She lay perfectly still trying to think what was there in the room with her. An awful thought struck her. It was a ghost come to haunt her. Now it was tearing up the letter she had written. Now it was knocking, knocking as her brother had knocked to gain an entrance into her hard heart. She grew cold with fright; the silence broken only by that tapping noise oppressed her; she tried to pray but the words stuck in her throat. How could she ever hope for forgiveness when she had refused to forgive? She reached her hand out to pull the covers closer over her head, and as she did so a little piece of velvety fur just brushed her hand.

"Oh, Lord," she cried, now in agony, "If you will take away this punishment I will go to him in the morning. I have always loved him. Lord, forgive my pride. Spare me to go and ask forgiveness of him."

New strength seemed to come to her as she prayed and she got up bravely, lighted a lamp and dressed hastily, never noticing that several of the scraps of paper, with tiny foot-prints on them, were now lying between the table and the bed. It was still dark in the old house and Miss Abby was frightened at the squeaking of the loose boards, even at her own breathing but she marched bravely into the sitting room, took out her gold pen and wrote, forgetting all her fear.

"My dear little brother—Your lonely old hen is coming to the shelter of her protecting cock just as soon as ever she can. Take good care of the cock until she gets there. Lovingly, Your own Big Sis."

Then she went out into the garden, wet with the early morning dew, and picking the big, bluish pansy she placed a kiss on its golden center and dropped it into the envelope.

The Nursery

Birthday Remembrances.

As a friend of the little ones, let me express the hope that the time-honored custom of especially marking each birthday as it comes round is not going to die out, although it seems in danger of doing so. It is the greatest day in the whole year to a young child, and even those who are older the natal day is welcomed with warm feelings.

Simple Gifts and Toys.

We are not all in a position to give expensive presents, but some trifling toy ornament made by loving hands, or bought for a small sum—costing perhaps only a few cents, and arranged beforehand as a little surprise, will tend to make the child's birthday a time of joy and happiness—a day to be looked back upon with pleasure and gratitude on some of those dull grey days which come only too frequently when manhood or womanhood is reached.

Sunny Smiles.

Let the day be one of sunshine for the little one. Even should the weather be dull, cold, or even wet, the home can be full of light and happiness. In all probability the child may at times be tiresome and "naughty," as we call it, but on this day its little faults might be overlooked, remembering that childhood with its joyous carelessness and its capacity for taking everything on trust comes only once in a lifetime.

SANDWICHES AND SALADS

Every housewife knows of the trouble experienced in providing variety of salads and sandwiches for the ordinary household in the good old summer time. The staple ham and tongue sandwiches and chicken salad seem anything but tempting in the dog days.

Here are some tried recipes of housewives in all parts of the country; they are easily prepared and equally suitable for the picnic basket or the home luncheon:

Mock Crab Sandwich—A quarter of a cupful of grated cheese, a quarter of a teaspoonful each of salt, paprika and mustard, a teaspoonful of anchovy paste, a tablespoonful of chopped olives, a teaspoonful of California lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of creamed butter.

Cocoanut Sandwiches—A cupful of grated cocoanut, half a cupful of nuts ground fine, a teaspoonful of California lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar and three tablespoonfuls of thick cream worked in. Spread this between wafers or thin slices of bread and butter.

Walnut and Watercress Salad—Lay the kernels of thirty English walnuts on a layer of sliced oranges. Squeeze lemon juice over them and let them stand for twenty-four hours. Use California lemons and oranges in order to secure the necesary amount of citric acid to impregnate the walnuts. When the salad is needed, wash and pick over a pint of cress or chop a bunch of celery and add to the walnuts. Pour over all a rich French dressing.

Apple and Cheese Salad—Mix chopped pecan meats with twice their bulk of cream cheese. Add a little thick cream to blend the mixture. Season with pepper and salt and make them into tiny balls. Pare good tart apples, remove the cores and slice into rings about half an inch thick. Arrange the slices on lettuce leaves and put a cheese ball in the center. Serve with a French dressing made with California lemon juice instead of vinegar.

The St. Regis Salad—Use crisp white lettuce leaves, sliced red peppers and chopped olives with a few slices of cucumber. Pour over it a French dressing or mayonnaise, either of which should be mixed with California lemon juice in place of vinegar.

Advertising is telling people where they can get what they want. If there is no objection to this, there is none to advertising.

The Home-Making Wife

By VIRGINIA HARLAN.

Every wife who really wishes to be a help to her husband should always regulate her expenditures according to her means. Let the maxim be, as far as it is possible, "Pay as you go." If you can't pay, don't go. A careful and economical wife can help her husband enormously. Her partner will value her clever housekeeping, and if she keeps the expenses down and manages to save a little, even if it is only a few cents, he will realize and fully appreciate her efforts.

Many a wife by thinking only of what will please her partner, and trying to assist him in every way, will by that true spirit of sympathy, inspire a husband to do his very best for the dearest little woman in the world.

Whatever a husband's business may be, a wife should endeavor to learn something about it—enough, at any rate, to enable her to listen to him with interest when he talks about it, and to give him her opinion on certain points when asked.

Many a failure might have been averted had men been more certain of help and sympathy from their wives when danger threatened. So one of the foremost duties of a wife is to try and make him feel that anything he does is of vital interest and importance to her.

Of course, one of the foremost duties of a wife is to strive her utmost to make the home as happy as possible. It is a married woman's privilege to try and make her partner feel that home is the happiest place in which he can possibly be, and that one day passed under his own roof is worth a hundred in another place.

Hints for the Boudoir

By MILDRED WYCKOFF.

Care of Tooth Brushes.

Tooth brushes require a certain amount of care, otherwise they are very apt to lose their bristles more or less quickly. Naturally a tooth brush will not last eternally, but with a little attention it should see several months of service. After use, the brush should be well rinsed in clean water, dried vigorously on the towel, and then placed standing, bristles upwards, either in a glass or tooth brush receiver.

If it is allowed to remain in a wet condition until the next time it is required the bristles will soon drop out. A thorough wash with soap and water once a week also prolongs the life of a tooth brush.

Lait Virginal.

This famous old cosmetic is undoubtedly good for the complexion. It is made thus: Take a quart of rose water, orange flower water, or elder flower water, and add to it, drop by drop, stirring all the while, an ounce of simple tincture of benzoin. Twelve or fifteen minims of tincture of myrrh and a few drops of glycerine may be added. Care must be taken to obtain the simple, not compound, tincture of benzoin for this lotion, for the compound tincture contains ingredients which are not at all suitable for use as skin beautifiers.

The Household

The Use of Ammonia.

A cleansing agent which is indispensable in the laundry is ammonia. This is far better than soap or soda, as, owing to its volatile nature, it does not remain in the fabric. If used wisely, ammonia renders woolens soft and elastic, and is especially good for wool underclothing, for it takes away all the grease which naturally comes from the body. If added to the soaking and the boiling water, much less soap and soda will be required. Dirt and grease separates from the garments without the need for rubbing, and thus a lot of labor is saved.

About the "Blue Bag."

The blue water for white clothes should be of a very pale shade. Blue is used to counteract the yellow tinge which the action of soap gives to cottons and linens, but if the blue is too deep in shade its object is defeated. When used for black or blue materials then it may be a deep shade, for in this case the blue helps the black from turning brown and the blue material from fading.

Clothes must never be left in the blue water, as then the color would settle in them and leave a streaky appearance.

FORESTERS ARE ACTIVE

State and Federal Departments Co-operating to Prevent Fires.

Fire Ranger System Has Been Effective in Northern Woods This Year.

Co-operation between the state and federal forestry departments in the prevention of forest fires this fall is now being worked out by W. T. Cox, state forester, and J. G. Peters of Washington, a representative of the federal forestry department, who were in the city last evening en route to Bemidji.

The United States government has made provision for the expenditure of $10,000 for the fighting of fires in the state of Minnesota, to be paid to firefighters. This money will be used exclusively for timber protection at the head waters of the navigable streams.

The two foresters came to Duluth from Two Harbors, after a long trip through the timbered sections of the northeastern part of the state.

Under the management of Mr. Cox the fire ranger system which he inaugurated during the past year, has proved to be very successful, and according to his statement, has been the means of preventing many fires which might have proved disastrous. There are twenty district rangers assisted by seventy-five patrolmen in the employ of the state, who work in perfect harmony with rangers employed by the lumbering and railroad companies.

These men are constantly watching for fires, and it is reported that they have detected nearly 400 fires. Various means are used to make observations, especially that of constructing high towers from which expansive views can be had.

The state department has an annual fund of $6,000 to be used for the purpose of purchasing timber standing on various state parks, and owned by private concerns for logging purposes. The companies are holding this timber until the state is in position to take it all up, states Mr. Cox. Besides this there is $14,000 to $15,000 now available, for the same purpose. Mr. Cox states that the state cannot hope to purchase all the standing timber in the parks, but it can secure most of it, and that it has ten years in which to acquire possession of it.

Mr. Cox is especially enthusiastic over Burntside Park, which is about eight miles northwest of Ely, across the Burntside and Long lakes, and which is easily accessible by canoe. It is larger than Itasca Park, which has 22,000 acres.

Mr. Peters states that the Itasca region is one of the most important in the country as it is the nursery of the great river. The fund which is to be used was created under the Weeks act, which is better known as the Appalachian and White mountain national forest reserve law.

From Bemidji the two men will go to Itasca park, and various other state lands used for park purposes.

WANT HOGAN TO RUN AGAIN

At a mass meeting of the citizens of Duluth Heights, held last evening in the fire hall, Alderman John A. Hogan, of the Fifth ward, was unanimously indorsed as a candidate for the third term to represent that ward. Herbert Wilson, who presided over the meeting was mentioned, but he immediately withdrew.

Of the 110 voters of the Duluth Heights, fifty-five were present, there being almost as many Republicans at the assembly as Democrats to voice their approval to the Democratic alderman who is now completing his four years in the council.

Following the indorsement of Mr. Hogan, a committee was sent to his home and took him to the meeting where he delivered a brief address in which he expressed his willingness to accept the honor. Many of the voters spoke after the alderman and pledged their support, and expressed themselves as fully satisfied that their candidate would win again. A. A. Bruneau acted as secretary of the session.

COFFEE WILL GO HIGHER

Speculators Having a Messy Time With the Little Brazilian Beans.

Consumers Apparently Willing to Pay the Higher Prices for Drink.

That coffee, although far more expensive than it used to be, is going still higher, is the opinion of E. H. Haagensen of the Tooker-O'Brien company, merchandise brokers, one of whose specialties is to buy green coffee and roast it for the Duluth market.

"I think it is higher already than there is any legitimate reason for its being," said Mr. Haagensen today, "but I do not think it is as high as it is going to be in the near future. It is true that the Brazilian coffee harvest, gathered last May, June and July, was a short crop. This was due to bad weather conditions, mainly to too much rain. But that shortage should not have put coffee up where it is now. The rise really began two years ago, but there has been quite an increase in the price of coffee during the last two or three months. Santos No. 4, which is a Brazilian coffee, of which there is an enormous consumption in this country, sold Monday in New York at 14⅞c to 15c a pound. That is about 8 cents higher than that coffee was two years ago. It is unreasonably high. The fact is that the price has been boosted by New York speculators. The excuse, of course, is the shortage of the Brazilian crop. The price is controlled by powerful interests at New York. One of the leaders is John Arbuckle. A further excuse for boosting the price of coffee, will be found, I think, in the report that the flowering Brazilian coffee crop is in poor condition. This report was issued about Sept. 15.

"Santos No. 4 now costs the housewife at Duluth about 25 cents. It costs 17 or 18 cents two years ago. You might think such an increase in the cost of the beverage would have the effect of diminishing its consumption, but somehow it has had no such effect. The great American public has gone right on drinking its coffee as before. This fact has given the New York speculators a splendid chance to work up the price. It is hard to boost the price of anything, when the demand is falling off."

Why! He's Baldheaded

Yes! Hundreds of Thousands of Men are Baldheaded. Many at 35 and 40.

A baldhead doesn't mean an abundance of brains as most baldheads would pretend to believe. It does mean that if dandruff germs had been destroyed when dandruff first made its appearance the owner of the baldhead would still have his hair—also his brains.

But most baldheads are not to blame; they never heard until too late of PARISIAN SAGE, the delightful hair preparation that kills dandruff germs, eradicates dandruff, stops hair from falling and prevents baldness.

Save your hair now while you have hair to save. Boyce Drug Co. guarantees PARISIAN SAGE for dandruff, falling hair, itching scalp and to put life and luster into faded hair. Fifty cents at Boyce Drug Co., and druggists everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

DAKOTA CORN ON EXHIBITION

Fargo Bank Trying to Encourage Diversified Farming There.

Prize specimens of corn, grown in North Dakota, are on exhibition at the First National bank. These specimens were raised by the winners of $5,000 of prize money, offered by the First National bank of Fargo, N. D., for those who could produce the best crops from a quantity of seed, which was distributed to the farmers by E. J. Weiser, vice-president of the bank.

The main purpose of the bank in distributing the seed and offering the prize money was to promote diversified farming in the state, and thus prevent, as far as possible, the disastrous consequences of a bad season, when it strikes the leading farming staple of the community. The specimens on exhibition are of the "Yellow Dent" and "Bloody Butcher" varieties. The cultivation of corn has made great strides in North Dakota during the last three years. The names o fthe winners and the acreage they sowed with the seed distributed are as follows:

Wheelock & Wheelock, Fargo, 1,000 acres; J. H. Gale, Hunter, N. D., 800 acres; J. W. Smith, Fargo, 300 acres; John Wyan, Fargo, 300 acres, Andrews Bros., Mapleton, N. D., 160 acres; C. E. Metcalf, Harvard, N. D., 75 acres, and Ole Nelson, Harvard, N. D., 50 acres.

A score of years ago Avery went out of his home at Crary, Ramsey county, to secure a pail of water, and until his reappearance in Lakota, he had never returned. The last heard of him was in Washington, D. C., when he registered as a member of the famous Coxey army.

Secrets from Miss Beauty's Dressing Table.

(From the New York Fashion News)

"Don't think our mothers neglected the niceties of the toilet—even if they knew not the mysteries of present-day aids to the complexion.

"Fond recollections linger in the memories of the old beaus of the '70's—pictures of fair maids and matrons with cheeks like strawberries hiding in milk—cheeks that never suffered the maltreatment endured by the twentieth century woman of fashion.

"In those halcyon days—when women were so beautiful—on milady's dresser you would find a lotion prepared by herself that was harmless and soothing—giving to the skin a soft, velvety appearance. It was made from simple ingredients—by dissolving two ounces of thelrose—the rose of youth—in one pint of warm water.

"Applied night and morning to face, neck and hands, it kept the skin fresh and fair—without spot or blemish—soft, smooth and lovely. Why can't our girls take a leaf from the experience of their grandmothers and return to the simple and satisfactory?"

CHILDREN TO TAKE APPEAL

Devils Lake, N. D., Man's Unusual Testament to Be Contested.

Devils Lake, N. D., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The probabilities are that there will be an appeal to the district court from the decision of the county probate court in the case instituted by legal heirs of Henry Barensheer in an effort to set aside his will in which he made his widow the sole heir to about $30,000 worth of property. The probate court held the will was good.

Six children were absolutely cut out by the provisions of the instrument, and they contend that the fact resulted from an oversight and not from intent upon the part of the deceased. The question raised was that the will could not stand in view of the fact that the names of the children had not been mentioned in any manner unless it could be shown positively that such oversight was intentional.

Language of Will.

"I give, bequeath and devise to my beloved wife, Dorie B. Barensheer," the will reads, "all my property, both real and personal, to her own use and benefit, hereby authorizing and empowering her to use, dispose and control said property as she may deem just and proper."

In the testimony that was offered in the probate court by the defense in support of admitting the will to probate it was indicated by witnesses that on several occasions during his life he had signified his desire to give all of his property to his wife to the exclusion of his children."

In the inside of the shaft is a rectangular opening 11 feet 2 inches, containing four compartments, namely two skip ways, one cage way and a pipe and ladder way. The entire concrete cylinder is 27 feet in diameter with a massive thickness of solid reinforced concrete for the lining. The reinforcements are composed of 1-inch steel bars, fifty tons of which were used in its construction. The lining of the rectangular opening of the shaft and the outer edge of the cylinder is 7 feet 11 inches in its widest part and 2 feet 6 inches in its narrowest part. Some 2,600 cubic yards of concrete were used in its construction and 4,000 cubic yards of dirt had to be excavated and hauled to the surface to allow room for the work.

I Am Willing to Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine.

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

DR. LYNOTT
Who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 4801 Occidental building, Chicago, Ill.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that. I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for to the Government as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

GUST NYE HELD TO GRAND JURY

Owner of Property Identifies It in Court and Holds Accused.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gust Nye today was held to the grand jury by Judge Brady on the charge of grand larceny. It is alleged he stole some articles from the farm of Anton Newberg, living four miles south of Hibbing. A farm hand by the name of Fred Belinda employed by Newberg identified a hatchet and his own suit of clothes as property stolen from the Newberg place, one from the woodshed and the other from the house. It was established the accused got into the house through a rear door during the absence of Newberg and the farmhand who was in the field swore he saw Nye prowling about the place. Nye will be taken to the county jail at Duluth as the offense is not bailable by a municipal judge.

This afternoon he will be arraigned in municipal court on the charge preferred by George Wood, deputy game warden of Alice on the charge of peddling venison and it is reported he will plead guilty.

Young Nye, who is only 22, is the son of Abraham Nye of Alice, recently sent to the asylum after being charged with burning George Wood's house and barn at Alice. His mother is in indigent circumstances and recently was aided by the public.

RESTAURANT MAN IS TURNED LOOSE

Judge Brady Declines to Convict Negro on Colored Woman's Evidence.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—"I consider it establishing a bad precedent for any court to convict a person on a charge of this character on the unsupported evidence of one who by her own testimony is as guilty as the defendant, granting that the charge against the defendant was known, which the evidence in this case failed to show."

With these words Judge Thomas F. Brady of the municipal court, dismissed the charge of maintaining a lewd house against William Brown, colored restaurant proprietor, yesterday afternoon.

The charge had been lodged against him by his former waitress, Lizzie Hopkins, also colored, Saturday evening, after Brown had had the Hopkins woman arrested, charged with the larceny of three rings and $20 in cash.

Judge Brady said after the hearing of the case that he had been told by the Hopkins woman that had Brown paid her, her back wages as waitress she would not have preferred the charge against him. The judge was indignant that the criminal law should have been prostituted for such a purpose.

The grand larceny case against the Hopkins woman, preferred by Brown, who charges that she stole three rings from him and $20 in cash last Saturday, was also dismissed, as the court failed to secure sufficient evidence to convict. The Hopkins woman has been in jail since her arrest.

George David Released.

David, since his arrest, had been out on bail. County Attorney John H. Norton of Duluth, prosecuted all three cases.

IS ARRESTED FOR FORGERY

C. E. Hamilton, Wanted in Duluth, Is Caught in Bowbells.

Word was received in Duluth today of the arrest of C. E. Hamilton at Bowbells, N. D., for forgery. He is also wanted in this city for a similar crime, having passed a worthless check on R. R. Forward & Co., for $67.50 last spring, it is claimed. When arrested at Bowbells he had blank checks of banks of Minnesota and North and South Dakota in his pocket. He represented himself as an agent conducting sales for general merchants. He is said to have come to Duluth from Carlton and then gone to the Dakotas. When arrested one of the checks which he had started to fill out, was dated May 27 and numbered 816. It is a coincidence that the check which he passed on Forward's had the same number and was dated a day later.

SECRET OF CHARMING YOUTHFUL COMPLEXIONS

Most sensible advice comes from the pen of Mae Martyn, in the New York World, as follows:

"The greatest mistake which thousands of women make daily, is the practice of smearing their faces with powder in a vain attempt to improve their looks. Powder only covers up complexion ills temporarily, clogs the skin pores, and eventually causes blotchy, wrinkled faces.

"Those who wish to whiten and beautify their complexions and make their faces more charming and youthful looking, should try an inexpensive lotion made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in either ½-pint hot water or ½-pint witch hazel, adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Where witch hazel is used, the skin dries more quickly.

"This lotion prevents blackheads, enlarged pores, skin roughness and makes the skin soft, smooth and velvety. It takes off that shiny, sallow look and adds beauty that no other known beautifier will."

$35,000 CASH AND $10,000 YEARLY, NOT SUFFICIENT

Dr. Owsley Wants Full One-Third Interest in Wife's Property.

Brings Action in Probate Court to Secure an Accounting.

Dr. Frederick H. Owsley of Detroit, Mich., wants the estate of his late wife, Mrs. Marie M. Owsley who died some tome ago closed, the final accounting made, and the rights of all the parties mentioned in the will settled.

The hearing is being held in probate court today before Judge S. W. Gilpin. Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul of the law firm of Davis, Kellogg and Severence, is representing Dr. Owsley and Washburn, Bailey and Mitchell appear for the executors, who claim that at the present time the estate is in such shape that it is next to impossible to make a final accounting.

The estate is valued at over $1,000,000 and consists of mining properties on the range on which royalties are continually coming in. The inheritance tax has not been decided upon as yet.

Before she married Dr. Owsley, Mrs. Owsley was Mrs. Marie Boeing. Mr. Boeing was interested in range mining property and made a fortune.

There are two children, Wilhelm and Marie Boeing. By the terms of the will, Dr. Owsley was left $35,000, and the sum of $10,000 to be paid to him yearly during his life time. She stated in her will that as her former husband had accumulated the fortune, Dr. Owsley should be content to take what she left him, although she well knew under the state law that he could get one-third. She also stated in her will that if he should fight the terms of the will, she would prefer that he would get nothing. The remainder of the property she left to her children.

After her death and the terms of the will had been made known, Dr. Owsley retained counsel to help him fight for one-third of the property, which it is claimed is due him under the law.

The hearing this morning was brought by him to hasten matters. He wants the estate closed, the final accounting made, and the property turned over to him, such part of it as is decided is rightfully his.

The executors claim that the estate is so large, that there are so many branches of it, and that the value is so constantly changing that at this time they cannot close it up. Royalties on the mining properties are coming in each month, and while the litigation is going on the property is constantly increasing in value.

Dr. Owsley wants the matter closed, that the court may decide the rights of the several parties interested, and he may have the enjoyment of his share.

It is thought that a fight will be made against Dr. Owsley getting any part of the estate, as he did not live up to the restrictions of the will.

After Mrs. Boeing married Dr. Owsley they lived in the state of Virginia.

SOME of us have read the pathetic story of the old guard. It is the story of the soldier serving under the first Napoleon, broken in body and spirit, and yet as old memories recall to mind the glories of those fighting days the old soldier imagines himself back in the ranks of the legions that served under the Little Corporal.

In the world of fighting the spirit of man rules triumphant over the other occasions. Fighting is to the strong, for even down through an age of somewhat effete civilization the Spartan spirit breaks out when the stern necessity of time calls forth the grim business of arms.

In the modern mode of fighting, the game of fisticuffs, sometimes we have called to our minds the spirit of the real fighters: men who would in other ages have been proclaimed mighty fighting heroes in those fierce conflicts where the strength of man and his undying courage ruled the day, rather than the strategy of modern warfare plus the execution of high power guns.

Such a spirit was that of the late Stanley Ketchel. Bleeding and battered in his second fight with Billy Papke, his eyes closed and groping helplessly around the ring in a futile effort to "feel" his opponent, Ketchel told his seconds, when asked to quit, that he would die in the ring, rather than be accused of being a quitter.

Just the other night in New York something occurred that illustrates strongly the fighting spirit that lurks in the Spartan breasts of some of those old grizzled fighters, types of ringmen that seem to be slowly passing from our midsts.

It was just after Kid McCoy, a man sober in years if not sane of action, had beaten some young tyro in his effort to show the skeptical public that he could perform that almost miraculous feat of coming back, and was climbing out of the ring, that ancient Bob Fitzsimmons clambered into the squared circle, and seizing the gloves from the inexperienced hands of the beaten man, offered to go on with Kid McCoy for a short bout.

Mister McCoy readily accepted and the two fighters of almost a past decade, started. Though freckled Bob Fitzsimmons is over 50 years of age, there still lurks in his breast that indomitable spirit that must have driven on the old Vikings in their ceaseless days of fighting. He started to annihilate his opponent, and only the interference of some of the officials of the club prevented the spectators from seeing a fight in which the spirit of a member of the modern old guard leaped boldly to the call of strife.

Old Man Fitzsimmons hates mightily to lay aside those once powerful fists of his and resume the role of a citizen where the law explicitly and amply provides for his protection in any matter of argument. There are some men who find it hard to understand that we are living in an age where physical force really has but little call for strenuous play. There are a few avenues left and the reformers are striving to close these thoroughfares of physical effort, where for the time being, the spirit of old leaps to the fore.

AN interesting story in an Eastern paper the other day called attention to the fact that Johnny McGraw exercises apparently but little discipline over his men. The story went on to tell that in the cafes late at night, you might find some of the players smoking cigarettes and eating lobster salad.

Little Mister McGraw is a man wise and far seeing, or how else would he be the manager of a great baseball team, one that seems surely destined to win the pennant of the National league? He knows men, and in knowing men any leader has won half of his success in the difficult role of leading his fellow beings in any venture.

After a hard game it was the practice of Phil King to assemble his Wisconsin football warriors and buy champagne for them. They broke training riotously, almost, sometimes in the middle of the season, and yet in the big games King always had his men in grand condition.

Like McGraw, King knows men and understands the secrets of their physical and mental, and one might almost say, spiritual make-ups. That is, if a football player can be spiritual. McGraw knows that his players stay up late sometimes because the mood so inclines. He knows that in the long run of the season's grind that particular man will be better for that small dissipation. If he didn't think so, if he thought the player was injuring his chances and the chances of the team, he would call him.

The old spirit of training has passed forever. A great trainer today is a man who knows men, can read their minds, and knows how to minister to their minds as well as their bodies. Men of such rare and discriminating intelligence of Mike Murphy and Keane Fitzpatrick can command salaries larger than those earned—or rather made—by our United States senators.

History is full of the didos of men who have carved their names deep in the old sands of time. Their nervous temperaments demanded something that they received not in the grind of their intense toil. In this age of more tolerance we have learned to look upon the pranks of some of our great men as part and parcel of their genius.

Perhaps men like McGraw and King have studied the temperaments of their athletes closely and have learned that the diversion of the occasional late hour and the lobster salad is in the end repaid by a greater attention to work and renewed interest.

IT WAS the dear old Battling Nelson who put Hedgewish, Ill., on the map. He afterward had some of the sand wastes platted, but that is not a part of the story. Gus Ruhlin gave fame and many press notices to Akron, Ohio, Kid Lavigne caused many inquiring persons to ask with renewed geographical interest the exact location of Saginaw, Mich. In the earlier days, before fame and the census reports combined to make Minneapolis a port of wide interest, John S. Johnson contrived to keep the fair name of that city in the headlines of the papers the country over. Cadilac, Mich., has often flushed with pride over the doings of Ad Wolgast, while the Cherry Sisters caused fleeting fame to one of those numerous small towns in Ioway.

Now it remains to be seen what Pal Brown is going to do for the town he "growed" up in. Hibbing has already broken into the sporting page several times since the departure of Pal, and should he continue his climb unaided by the friendly interests of numerous well wishers at home, the fame of Hibbing will continue to spread.

As publicity agents for the small towns that innocently and unsuspectingly watched untutored genius thrive on its sand lots, these athletes have some of the more scientific and harder worked men behind the busy typewriter beaten by several New Duluth blocks.

And, by the by, we wonder what Hibbing thinks of the affair down New Orleans way. Communications will be welcomed.

FOR the first time in the history of sports in Duluth this city may witness one of the big mat contests that is to pave the way for the settlement of a world's championship.

This morning J. H. Herman of Buffalo, manager of Stanislaus Zbyszko, wired the sporting editor of The Herald that should Frederick Pilakoff defeat Yankee Rogers, the New England champion, that a finish match, taking with it the European championship, a title now held by the Pole, will be wrestled in Duluth.

Last season Zbyszko met Pilakoff at the Greco-Roman style and failed to throw the wonderfully muscled Finn, one of the strongest men in the world. A finish match between Zbyszko and Pilakoff will be one of the distinctly big mat contests decided in the United States this season.

Since Pilakoff has been in this country he has made a great showing on the mat. His speed combined with his wonderful strength makes him one of the most formidable men in the field. He wants to work his way up to the place where he will figure in the real big matches of the present season, and in order to accomplish that is most anxious to defeat Rogers.

The offer of Herman for a match with Zbyszko means much to the Finnish champion. It means the opportunity to work in some of the big contests decided the present season, and a chance to figure in the finals for the championship.

ATHLETICS CINCH LEAGUE PENNANT

Mack's Men Will Again Be Contenders in World's Series.

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—The American league race for 1911 was decided here yesterday when Philadelphia defeated Detroit, 11 to 5. It was the fourth time that a local team piloted by Connie Mack has won the pennant in this organization, but it was the first time Philadelphia has won the title in successive seasons.

By repeating this year, Philadelphia earned the right to defend the title of world's champions which it won last year in a series with the Chicago National league club.

Only two teams fought it out for leading honors in the American league this season, Philadelphia and Detroit. The latter got a flying start last spring and on May 19 the Tigers had a lead of twelve games over Mack's men. From that date the locals gained ground and took the lead from Detroit for the first time on July 4. The next day New York defeated Philadelphia and the latter dropped to second place. Detroit kept in front until Aug. 4, when the Athletics for the second time jumped into first place. Since then Philadelphia has never been headed.

Yesterday's game was won by hard hitting. Philadelphia drove Willett off the rubber in three innings and also hit Works' delivery hard. Baker led the slugging with two home runs and a pair of two-baggers in five times at bat. Hits total of twelve bases is probably a season's record for the major leagues. Both of Baker's home runs cleared the right field wall, it being the first time a batsman ever performed this feat in the same game twice. Crawford led Detroit at bat with a home run and a single, while Bush and Cobb made two singles each. Score: R. H. E.

WASHINGTON SCORES VICTORY OVER NAPS.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Washington batted Mitchell out of the box in the third inning yesterday and easily defeated Cleveland, 8 to 2. Swindell, who relieved him, pitched good ball for the remaining innings. The fielding of McBride and Eberfeld was a feature. Score: R. H. E.

CHICAGO WINS FROM NEW YORK IN NINTH.

New York, Sept. 27.—After tieing the score in the eighth yesterday, New York lost to Chicago in the ninth by a score of 5 to 4. The winning run was scored on Lord's double and McIntyre's single. Errors were responsible for most of the runs on both sides. Score: R. H. E.

Chicago ........1 1 0 0 2 0 0 0 1—5 9 3

CHICAGO AND BOSTON DIVIDE DOUBLE-HEADER.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Chicago and Boston broke even in a double-header yesterday, the final games of the year's series, Chicago winning the first, 10 to 2, and losing the second, 5 to 2.

In the second game Reulbach held the visitors to five scattered hits, two of which, with a fielder's choice, netted two runs for the Bostonians. On the other hand Burke and Brown proved easy prey for the locals, each being hit freely, while the former was generous with his passes and the latter's support ragged.

In the second game, Donnelly of Boston was master of the situation, allowing the locals to hit safely only six times. His poor support assisted the locals greatly in scoring. The Chicagoans used Slapnicka, one of their latest pitching acquisitions. The support behind him was loose and the visitors had little difficulty with his curves.

The second game was featured by the batting of Kirke, who made four hits, including two triples in five times at bat, and of Donlin, who got three hits.

The New York Nationals headed by Manager McGraw arrived yesterday to open their series here today and they attended the games in a body. Scores:

First game— R. H. E.

BROOKLYN WINS LAST GAME AT PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 27.—Brooklyn yesterday made its last appearance of the season in Pittsburg, winning by a score of 5 to 2 and making a clean sweep of the series from Pittsburg. Lack of hits at the proper time lost for the locals. Score: R. H. E.

Hearne, formerly of the St. Louis Nationals twirled the first game for Louisville and was hit freely, being relieved by Curry in the sixth inning. In the second game, Schroeder, a new pitcher added to the Louisville team on Monday, was also batted hard.

Bell, newly acquired infielder, was tried by Manager Howard and made a good impression. Scores:

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 27.—A double-header was scheduled for the final day of the season here yesterday. Toledo won the first contest, 4 to 3, but rain stopped the second game, while the locals were at bat in the first inning.

Chech was hit hard in the opening session and was relieved by Karger who held the visitors runless. James had one bad inning and three runs was the result, Mike McCormick's home run scoring two of them. Score: R. H. E.

BLUES TAKE FIRM HOLD ON SECOND PLACE.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 27.—Kansas City practically secured second place in the American association race yesterday by handing a double defeat to Columbus. The first game was won by mixing hits with the visitors' errors. Pitcher Cook, who recently won ten straight victories for Columbus, was knocked off the rubber in the seventh inning.

Errors by Columbus also were responsible for the loss of the second game. Several plays were recorded against the visitors. The second game was called at the end of the sixth inning on account of darkness. Scores:

First game— R. H. E.

TWO SPILLS AT COLUMBUS

Mainleaf and Baroness Helen Go Down in Same Race.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 27.—Following the accident which resulted in the death of the mare Pansy Silver on the track here Monday, there was another sensational spill yesterday at the fall trotting meeting of the Columbus Driving association. It came in the first heat of the 5-year-old trotting division of the Horse Review futurity and caused a thrill of horror, as it occurred almost directly in front of the crowded grandstand.

The horses were finishing their mile with Margaret Parish in front, when Mainleaf, which was second, stumbled and fell within fifty yards of the wire, throwing Curtis to the track. At almost the same time, Baroness Helen, just back of the distance flag, also stumbled and went down, throwing Tommy Murphy over the rail. The other drivers by good work, managed to get around the fallen horses. Neither of the horses was hurt and Curtis escaped uninjured, but Murphy was badly shaken up. With assistance he walked from the track, but was placed in bed at once. Among other injuries he sustained a broken rib. The judges placed Mainleaf fourth, as it fell inside the flag, but Helen was distanced. Margaret Parish won that heat, but Mainleaf took the next in slow time and was cheered by the crowd.

Then Atlantic Express, an equal favorite with Mainleaf, won the third heat and the race went over until today on account of darkness.

Princess Todd Wins.

In the 2-year-old trotting division of the same race, Princess Todd was made a strong favorite over the field of six others and won handily in straight heats and good time.

The first race on the card was the unfinished 2:09 pace, in which three heats had been raced. Heir-At-Law, the first, was a big favorite, but My Shady Belle, the Snow entry, took three straight heats and the race. In the sixth heat all the horses except My Shady Belle and Heir-At-Law, the first, were ruled off under the rules.

The 2:07 pacing stake proved easy for the favorite, Peter the Second, driven by Valentine. He was never headed and won in straight heats and fats time.

The 2:10 trot found Chatty Direct, Binvolo and Maude Light equal favorities in the pools. The race was unfinished after four heats, in which Creighton landed first, twice, and Binvolo and Chatty Direct, once each.

CUBS MAKE LAST STAND FOR FLAG

Chicago, Sept. 27. — With the New York baseball team far in the lead for the National league pennant, a series of four games which may virtually determine, if it does not definitely decide, the league championship, was scheduled to begin this afternoon between the Eastern team and Chicago.

As a result of yesterday's double header, which Chicago divided with Boston, the Western contender for the title was 58 points behind the leaders, who did not play yesterday. The standing at the beginning of the present series was:

If New York wins all four games of the series with Chicago, Manager McGraw and his men will have the pennant won. The Eastern players, who arrived yesterday from Cincinnati and rested for the crucial contest, do not say they will accomplish this, but they believe that if they can win at least half of the games, they will virtually grasp victory.

New York at the beginning of the Chicago series had sixteen games to play to finish the season, while Chicago had only eleven. The Chicago players are not exceedingly hopeful, for, to defeat New York they will have to win all eleven games unless New York should lose more than nine of its sixteen.

FLYNN IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Wearing a slightly discolored eye and with a bruised thumb, Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman who snuffed out the pugilistic aspirations of Carl Morris in New York a short time ago, arrived in Chicago yesterday and will spend a few days in town prior to a visit to his home in Colorado.

Although acknowledging he was Morris' master in all points of the fistic game, Flynn gave Morris credit for being the gamest man he had ever met. Flynn was accompanied by his brother, and the fighter lost no time in visiting the haunts of other boxers to tell his friends how he won what he styled the easiest fight of his life.

Flynn thinks Packey McFarland should have little difficulty in defeating Matt Wells over the short route. Jim said that although Wells had an advantage of at least fifteen pounds in weight, he merely shaded Abe Attell, and not once had the little Hebrew boxer in distress.

ROLLER HOCKEY TEAMS WILL MEET THURSDAY.

Tomorrow evening at the Auditorium the Big Duluths and Northern Hardware team will clash in the second roller hockey game of the season. The first game ever played here was held at the Auditorium last Monday evening, and made a great hit with a large and enthusiastic crowd. The two teams have been practicing hard the present week and a fast and well played game is expected. Representatives of the other teams are desired at the game tomorrow evening, as steps will be taken for the forming of a roller hockey league after the game.

Bronson-Howell Bout.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 27.—Ray Bronson of Indianapolis and Tommy Howell of Philadelphia, will meet in a ten-round bout in this city tonight. Howell defeated Bronson at Boston, Aug. 29. They will weigh in at 138 pounds.

KING FOOTBALL WILL START HIS RULE AGAIN

Football will get under way this afternoon. The season will be formally opened in the East with several games on the schedule. Old King Football is to be ushered in with the smaller and more obscure college teams facing the larger schools, with the result that the opening contests will do nothing more than furnish a line on some of the newer recruits and will not furnish any conclusive test as to the strength of any of the larger teams.

Cornell is scheduled to meet Allegheny and Dartmouth will take on Norwich university. Neither of these games will give a line on what may be expected from either Cornell or Dartmouth the present season.

Saturday will see Yale lined up against Holy Cross and the sons of old John Harvard meeting Bates. Princeton plays Stevens institute and Pennsylvania has Gettysburg on its hands.

In the East it is generally believed that the present season is going to be one of the best in the history of the new game. Therefore not only will the games this afternoon carry with them a great amount of interest, but the coming contests of Saturday will start the football enthusiasm off with a rush.

So far critics have been slow in giving very many opinions as to the probable strength of the various big college teams. Yale is going to make a desperate effort to win the highest football honors in the college world the present season, and advance reports state that there is a wealth of great material at Harvard, which in all departments of athletics has come to the front with amazing rapidity the past few years.

Western football fanatics will watch with special interest the progress of Cornell and Pennsylvania, and Syracuse as well, as these teams have Western games and the intersectional interest is always of the keenest.

Beginning with the games this afternoon the development will proceed with machine regularity, its progress being registered by the weekly and mid-week smaller games of the early season's preparatory stage.

Adams and Fairmonts.

The Adams football team will meet the Fairmont Tigers in the second game of the season, next Sunday. The game is expected to be a hard one, as the Adams officials say their team will show more skill than that displayed against the Jeffersons. With improved team work the triple A aggregation should be a dangerous contender for the city championship.

BOWLERS JOIN CENTRAL LEAGUE

Last night's meeting of the bowlers of Duluth resulted in a resolution to have but one central league the coming season, instead of two as last year. Enthusiasm over the coming season was apparent. With one league and the united effort of the bowlers of the city behind it, the prediction was freely made the coming season would be by all odds the best in the history of the game here.

M. B. Nobis was elected president of the new league, known as the Duluth Bowling association, with Al. K. Compton as vice-president, Sam Olsen as secretary, and Fred Steigler as treasurer.

The Adams, Jeffersons, Stanley Shoe company, Centrals, Big Duluths and Massey's Maroons will be the teams to compose the new organization. It is expected that the season will open about the middle of next month and run for six months. The games will be played on the Grand and Central alleys.

G. U. Ferguson George Massey, Fred Steigler, M. B. Nobis and Sam Olsen were appointed a committee on bylaws. G. U. Ferguson, George Massey and A. Otterson were appointed on the auditing committee.

The making up of the schedule will be taken up at the coming meeting of the officers of the league.

TYRUS COBB FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 27.—Champ Clark of Missouri for president; Tyrus R. Cobb of Georgia for vice president! The above is the ticket which Judge W. C. Adamson, who represents the Fourth Georgia district in congress hopes the Democrats will nominate next year. Judge Adamson, who is in Atlanta, gave voice to his preference. In an interview today he said: "I don't care to press my preferences for the nomination, but I am satisfied that Champ Clark, the speaker of the house, and Ty Cobb, the baseball hero, would outrun any ticket in the world. Ty Cobb is a better baseball man than Jim Sherman, the present vice president, and Champ Clark excels all other men in the matter of presidential qualifications. A fusion between the Democrats and the baseball people would certainly win."

CENTRALS WILL BE OUTWEIGHED

From the present indications Mat Brown will star at fullback for Central Saturday in the game against the Northland college, with Kerrs and Crassweller at the half back positions and McClaran in at quarter. There will probably be a number of changes during the game, but it is believed these players will start the contest.

"Bunk" Harris may go in at "Dutch" Jeronimus' end, as the Cambridge kid has a bum stilt at the present time. Capt. Bob Mars will be at the other end, with "Swede" O'Brien at one of the tackles and Curry at the other one. Osman will start at center, with St. Clair in one of the guard positions.

Central will have a very fast team in the field, but it is believed that the hill top kiddos will be decidedly outweighed by the visitors.

ELECTION IS DEFERRED.

Wisconsin-Illinois Officials Transact Little Business in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 27.—Wisconsin-Illinois league magnates, in session at the Hotel Pfister, deferred the annual election of officers until their next meeting to be held in Milwaukee, some time between the first and tenth of January. The entire afternoon was taken up by routine matters, necessitating another session.

Three important amendments in the constitution were made, but were not made public by President Moll.

After a closely contested vote, Moll was chosen to attend to the state league's affairs as a delegate to the National association meeting on Nov. 15 in San Antonio, Tex.

The question as to what towns will comprise the circuit during the season of 1911-'12 is still a much mooted one. L. E. McKinnon, who represented Fond du Lac, is still undecided whether or not the up state town will fall in line and keep their present franchise. The matter is under consideration and it is expected an answer will be forthcoming in a few weeks.

Those present at the meeting were Murphy of Green Bay, Frank Ryan of Appleton, George Kluwin and J. Larle of Oshkosh, L. E. McKinnon of Fond du Lac, J. Gemoll of Racine, William C. Flanagan of Aurora, George Bubser of Rockford, B. M. Parsons and R. L. Richardson of Madison.

DOG CAUGHT AFTER CHASE

W. H. Richter Recovers Valuable Hound for Express Company.

Undertaker William H. Richter starred this morning in the role of a dog catcher and the Northern Pacific Express company will not have to recompense a consignee for the disappearance of one $50 beagle hound.

When the St. Paul passenger train arrived in West Duluth yesterday afternoon, a dog was taken from it consigned to Thomas Ramfry of West Duluth. Not noticing that the canine had not been carefully crated, he was set down on the platform by Agent Sweet.

The hound broke out of the crate and made away before the agent missed him. Undertaker Richter sighted the animal this morning, recognized him from the description given by the agent and after a half-hour's pursuit managed to catch him at Fifty-ninth avenue west and Green street.

He was returned at once to the express company.

NO WARNING LIGHTS.

Carelessness of Sidewalk Contractors Cause of Woman's Injuries.

Mrs. B. A. Briggs, who lives at 2821 West Third street, stepped from an uncompleted wooden sidewalk on Thirty-ninth avenue west last night and, although she only fell three feet, she was so bruised that she had to be assisted to her home.

The accident, the police say, was due to the negligence of the contractors, Raymond Bros., in not leaving warning lanterns there. The police have been notified of several instances in which contractors have not properly protected people against accidents.

WANT WORK ON NEW ROAD BEGUN

New Duluth people are anxious that the city commence work on the proposed change to be made in the road between New Duluth and Smithville. A year ago, the council ordered vacated the old county road which lies across the Minnesota Steel company's holdings. It was stated at that time that the steel company and the real estate men interested in adjoining property would build another highway which would go around the steel company's property.

Since the vacation of the old thoroughfare nothing has been done towards the building of the new, which will make the distance from New Duluth to Smithville, a quarter of a mile longer.

The delay in settling that matter about this highway is also believed to delay the proposed extension of the street railway to the suburb. It is probable that the matter will be given consideration at the next meeting of the New Duluth Commercial club.

May Locate in Duluth.

Dr. C. S. Kanosky, recently of Kossuth, Mich., has arrived in Duluth with the view of locating either in West Duluth or New Duluth. Dr. Kanosky says that he has heard much favorable comment about the new steel plant now under construction at New Duluth and has concluded to locate there permanently, providing he can find suitable office room.

Foresters' Meeting.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Catholic Order of Foresters was held last evening at West Duluth, when committees from St. James court and the five other lodges of the city met to plan a "visiting circle" for the coming winter. The meeting was adjourned until this evening, when the committee will complete their work. The meeting tonight will be held in the West end.

West Duluth Briefs.

The Young People's Society of Immanuel Norwegian Lutheran church will be entertained tomorrow evening at the home of Peter Docken, 16 South Fifty-ninth avenue west.

Miss Pearl McKinney of Toronto, Can., is in West Duluth on a two weeks' visit with friends and relatives.

Miss Sadie Shinlaub of 406 North Fifty-fourth avenue west and Miss B. Bergren have returned from a trip down the lakes. They visited a number of the lower lake ports including Buffalo, Detroit and Cleveland.

The Fairmont-Tiger football team will entertain this evening at Wade's hall at one of their weekly dancing parties. There will be special decorations and music for the occasion.

It is not expected that the pulpit of the West Duluth Baptist church will be filled until after the state Baptist convention, which will be held in Duluth, Oct. 9 to 12. The resignation of H. J. P. Sellinger has left the congregation without a pastor since Sept. 1.

BELIEVES YOUNG IS OFF MENTALLY

Alleged Northern Pacific Robber Is Discredited By Former Employer.

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—That John Young, who confessed at Neenah, Wis., that he was one of the Buffalo, N. D., train robbers could not have been one of them is the belief of W. F. Redmon, a farmer living near Mapleton, N. D.

Redmon come to Fargo today and positively identified Young as a man who worked at the Redmon farm from July 4 until July 19, the latter date being the night of the robbery.

Although Young quit Redmon's employ on the night of the robbery, and the latter had not seen him since until he talked with him in Cass county jail today, it is highly improbable that he is one of the robbers.

The Redmon farm is three miles from Mapleton and Mapleton is forty-five miles from Valley City, where the robbers first boarded the Northern Pacific train at 12 o'clock the night of July 19.

Young left the Redmon farm at 9 o'clock on the evening of July 19. He had to walk to Mapleton and there were no more trains either way between Mapleton and Valley City until No. 2 came through.

Moreover Young's story told today to Mr. Redmon does not jibe with the facts. He said that on that night he came to Fargo, went from Fargo to Sabin, Minn., and stayed at the latter town a week before returning to North Dakota. Mr. Redmon thinks the man is mentally unbalanced.

600 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE

B. F. Howard Offers to "Show" All Scoffers, "B'Gosh."

Last year B. F. Howard proclaimed to an agricuturally enthusiastic populace that he produced 600 bushels of potatoes to the acre.

He was greeted by raucous cries of "Ha! Ha!" and other sounds indicating merriment on the part of the makers. Whereupon Mr. Howard declared with considerable feeling that a prophet cannot expect honor in his own country, much less implicit belief in his unsupported statements.

Mr. Howard is digging potatoes this afternoon. He will also be digging them tomorrow and, although he can only estimate his yield before the tubers have been brought to the surface, he says that any man, woman or child who doesn't believe he can raise 600 bushels of potatoes to the acre is "welcome to see him dig and measure them, b-gosh."

MILWAUKEE MOTHER GIVES CHILDREN POISON.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 27.—Mrs. Anna Labs gave carbolic acid to her two sons, Walter age 7, and Herbert aged 5 yesterday, and then tried to take her own life by drinking some of the acid.

The three were rushed to the emergency hospital where it is said one of the boys will probably die, but that the mother and the other son, while in a serious condition, will recover.

Domestic trouble is believed to have prompted the act.

A MODERN ENOCH ARDEN

First Wedding Took Place at Eveleth in June 1906.

A dispatch from Portland, Or., states that Mrs. Mary Clemens, formerly of Duluth, has found that she has two husbands and that she has appealed to the circuit court of that place to have her marriage with Gilbert W. Burgan, annuled.

According to the dispatch from the Western city, Mrs. Clemens married William E. Clemens in St. Louis county, June 11, 1906.

They moved to Portland where he deserted her, she claims, and believing him dead after he had been gone some time, she married Gilbert W. Burgan at Vancouver, Wash.

A few days ago she learned that her former husband is alive and she at once petitioned the circuit court of Portland for an annulment of the second marriage. The petition was filed only a few days ago.

The name of neither William E. or Mary Clemens has appeared in the Duluth city directory for some years past.

A search through the county marriages at the local clerk of court's office results in showing that in June, 1906, there was a marriage license issued to Mary Wise and William Clemens. The license was issued at Eveleth, Minn.

Alderman Roise told the council that practically every restaurant in the city was openly violating the liquor license law. He made the statement in connection with a resolution which was introduced to drive immoral women from rooms over the downtown saloons. The matter was laid over.

The city let the contract for the ornamental lighting system or "white way" maintenance to the Superior Water, Light & Power company.

The city authorized P. McDonnell to lay Gilsonite asphalt paving on Belknap street in front of the high school property.

THIEF ANSWERS QUERY.

He "Picks Money Out of Coal Bin" in Window Display.

The police have been unable to apprehend the thief, who, too literally construed the meaning of a query placed in the big front window of the Turnbull-Cameron-Degler company store, which reads, "Would you stop to pick money out of the coal bin?"

Early yesterday, an unknown person stopped and after breaking into the store picked nine crisp $1 bills out of the front window, somewhat spoiling the neatly arranged display. The burglar left no clue.

EMPTY CANS AS A WINDBREAK

Park Pointers Want to Protect Property From Drifting Sand.

J. P. Byrne of Park Point has suggested that the city employ discarded calcium chloride cans to a better advantage than dumping them into the lake.

A number of Park Pointers and among them Mr. Byrne, say that the empty cans could be filled with sand and used as a wind break on the lake side of the point to keep the drifting sand from covering some of the lots.

Hundreds of the empty cans are hauled either to some dumping ground or are put into the lake. If they were taken to Park Point, it is believed that they would be generally used for the purpose stated by Mr. Byrne.

Of late years the Park Pointers have complained about the drifting of the sand from the beach on to their property and it is thought that if a suitable windbreak was provided that this could be prevented.

STATE TO HOLD BIG TIMBER SALE

Will Dispose of 35,000,000 Feet in St. Louis and Other Counties.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Approximately 35,000,000 feet of timber in St. Louis, Lake, Itasca, Koochiching and Beltrami counties will be offered at public sale at the state capitol Oct. 31, according to a decision reached by the state timber board this morning.

Of this about 20,000,000 feet is pine and the balance spruce, tamarack, cedar and other varieties. The pine is worth between $6 and $8 a thousand and the mixed timber from $2 to $5. Twenty-five per cent of the appraised valuation must be paid down at the time of purchase.

Much of this timber is threatened by destruction because of land around it being cleared.

GRAIN MOVEMENT CONTINUES LIGHT.

So far the movement has been very light, little grain having arrived at the Head of the Lakes. However, with the prospects of fairer weather the receipts here are expected to be bigger, and according to many grain men, the receipts here will be heavier than they have been for several years.

PASSENGER BOATS ON THEIR LAST TRIPS.

Two passenger vessels left Duluth last evening on their last trips of the season. The Juniata of the Anchor line closes the season for that company, being the last of the three big steamers which have been plying all summer between Buffalo and Duluth, to go out of commission. The Huronic of the Northwestern Navigation company left last evening for Sarnia, Ont., where she will winter. The Hamonic, the sister ship of the Huronic, will close the passenger season on Saturday when she leaves on the last trip.

BULLS ARE ON THE RUN

Wheat Makes Steady Decline Almost Throughout the Session.

Flax Takes Upward Turn—Arrivals Growing Heavy; Little Trade.

Duluth Board of Trade, Sept. 27.—This was decidedly a day for the bears in the wheat pit. Things went their way in the leading staple from the very beginning of the session. Duluth September closed at a loss of 1⅝c. Wheat lost in all the leading American markets. Winnipeg, too, showed a decline. Durum lost 1⅜c and oats ⅛c. Rye closed the same as yesterday. Flax closed at considerable gains, owing to scarcity of offerings.

The bears made a successful raid on wheat during the morning. Circumstances seemed to favor them on all sides. There were lower cables from Europe. Wheat was reported weak at Liverpool, Paris and Budapest. This was due in the main to a decidedly bearish official report on the Argentine crop, to cheaper offers from Manitoba and Australia, and to favorable news regarding the crop in India. The weather reports from Western Canada and the American Northwest were on the whole favorable to wheat. An active demand on the part of millers at Chicago, Minneapolis and elsewhere was all that encouraged the bulls and this proved inadequate to check the decline up to noon. Duluth December, which closed yesterday at $1.09⅜, opened today at $1.09¼ asked. That was the highest point it touched during the morning. The decline was almost steady. By noon it was selling at $1.07¾, having lost 1⅝c.

In regard to flax, the morning market told a different tale. Flax opened strong and the movement was almost altogether upward. While the demand was not great, the offerings were still lighter. Eastern crushers do not like to stock up on flax at present prices. Their attitude is decidedly bearish. The attitude of those who hold the flax is, however, bullish and between the two opposing interests the movement of the grain goes on very slowly. It is true that the volume of the flax that is arriving at the Duluth market for sale is steadily growing greater. Shipments are not keeping up with receipts. The Duluth elevators now have on hand between 40,000 and 50,000 bu of flax, and this stock is continually growing. Today the number of cars of inspected flax on the track was 41. At the same time, the Duluth elevators will hold many times the amount of flax they now have, and flax is not coming in as fast as it should for this time of the year. Many of the brokers declare this is the very latest flax harvest they have ever seen, though some have been on the Duluth market for many years. Canadian flax is not yet cheap enough to come into the American market. The crop of that country has been considerably damaged of late by snow and frost, and much of its is lying prostrate in the fields, the farmers looking anxiously for dry and warmer weather to get it into condition to cut. Winnipeg October, about non today, was quoted at $2.12 bid, while Duluth October stood at $2.28. That difference is not enough to cause the Canadian crop to move this way. The Canadian flax must be at least 20 cents cheaper to climb over the American tariff wall. Duluth September flax, which closed yesterday at $2.27½, opened today at $2.28 and gradually rose until about noon the price was $2.33.

Broomhall wired from Liverpool—"At the immediate opening the wheat market was influenced by the firmer American cables and values were unchanged to ⅛d higher. Following the opening there was realizing and prices declined ⅝d with the undertone weak. Selling was attributed to the Argentine official acreage, United Kingdom preliminary official and favorable weather reports from India. Pressure was also due to cheaper Manitoba, La Plata and Australian offers, which caused outside realizing. At 1:30 p. m. the market was weak and ½d to ⅝d lower than yesterday. Corn—Opened unchanged and continued dull during the entire morning session. The undertone was steady on the firmer American offers."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Is Depressed on News From Foreign Growing Centers.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Wheat was depressed today by an official estimate that the acreage in the Argentine would be heavily increased compared with last year. It was figured that the enlargement of planting would amount to more than 1,500,000 acres. There were also reports that the crop in the United Kingdom had reached a total of 4,000,000 bu in excess of the yield for the previous twelve months. Further weakness resulted from news of cheaper offerings by Canada and Australia at Liverpool. The opening here was ¼c to ½c down. December started at 98¼c to 98½c, the same change from last night as the market taken altogether. Later the price touched 98½@98⅝c, but reacted to 98⅜c.

Unloading on a large scale by local speculators who bought yesterday led to a rather sharp decline. The close was steady with December 1@1⅛c net lower at 97⅝@97¾c.

Corn held steady because not much of the old crop was being sold to arrive. December opened a shade to ⅛@¼c off, at 63¾c to 63⅞c and rallied to 64c.

Forecasts of colder weather brought about a more easy feeling. The close was ⅜@½c down at 63½c for December.

In the absence of any big offerings, oats showed strength. Many commission houses had orders to buy. December started unchanged to a sixteenth down, at 47⅜c to 47⅜@47½c, then rose to 47¾c.

Sagging prices for hogs left provisions without much support. Initial sales were 2½c to 15c lower, with January delivery $14.88½ to $14.90 for pork, $8.75 to $8.77½ for lard, and $7.80 to $7.82½ for ribs.

Wild Rush to Buy Sends Up Prices Swiftly at the Opening.

Rapid Decline Follows, With Transactions on an Enormous Scale.

New York, Sept. 27.—Official announcement that the United States Steel corporation does not intend to dissolve, imparted an air of positive buoyancy to the stock market at today's opening. Initial transactions in Steel common consisted of a block of 38,000 shares at from 59½ to 62 as against 56⅞ at yesterday's close. United States Steel preferred opened with a gain of 2¾ which was soon extended to 5¾. Union Pacific opened at a gain of 2¾ which soon extended to 3½. American Smelting advanced three points. Amalgamated Copper advanced 2⅝, Northern Pacific and Lehigh Valley 2½. Opening transactions in American Tobacco six per cent bonds were on a huge scale at an advance of ⅞ of a point and the United States Steel sinking fund five per cent bonds were up 1⅞. Prices shaded a point or more from the opening but the undertone continued strong.

Prices vibrated frequently a point or two before the market settled down to a normal condition. Following the bulge at the opening immense blocks of stocks were thrown on the market.

Buyers at the lower level who had a large profit in sight sold extensively as did speculators who considered that a reaction was due owing to the rapidity of the advance. There was an irregular reaction which reached 3¾ points in Lehigh Valley and from 1 to 1½ elsewhere. United States Steel sagged to 59½. The preferred stock, which had touched 113, fell to 109. Transactions in Steel common amounted to 275,000 shares in the first half hour, which was considerably more than sold in a like period during any of the recent violent declines.

By 11 o'clock the market was moving along in a more even way with prices sagging. Ruling quotations ranged from 1 to 2½ points above yesterday's close.

Trading in stocks assumed the largest proportions of any time within several years during the first part of today's session. The volume of transactions during the recent outbursts of selling in no case approached the movements of the first hour today in which the total number of shares dealt in was 605,000, nearly twice the amount handled in last Friday's slump. Fluctuations were on an unusually wide range and the market soon showed the effects of profit-taking sales. Before noon a part of the early gains were eliminated.

The violent movement was largely the result of speculative operations. Althought the advance reflected the relief which Wall street felt at learning definitely that the United States Steel corporation would not dissolve voluntarily, the readiness with which stocks were sold after the first abrupt rise, showed that the nervousness had not been entirely relieved. It was said that a brokerage house, whose purchases had been instrumental in raising the price of steel from below 52, sold the stock heavily this morning.

Profit-taking and new short selling reduced the early gains steadily until nothing was left but small fractions in some important issues, such as Union Pacific, Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Reading and Southern Pacific. Persistent selling of St. Paul forced it from 111 to 108, or 1⅜ below yesterday's closing. United States Steel reacted to below 59 and the steady drop in this stock encouraged fresh demonstrations by the bears. Some large advances were made in speculative bonds, but they weakened later in sympathy with stocks.

The market closed unsettled. Fluctuations were very wide in the last hour of trading. Bear operators began a covering movement and rallies of 2 points or more were seen in Steel, Union Pacific, Reading and St. Paul.

Transactions on the upward movement were in moderate amounts. Another wave of selling broke in the last few minutes, eliminating the greater part of the amounts recovered. Prices of some fell under previous low points of the day, including United States Steel, Reading, Southern Pacific, Lehigh Valley, American Smelting and Amalgamated Copper. The movement threw the money market into confusion. Just before the close there were some feverish rallies.

ENCOUNTER WITH LIONS.

We set out on the morning of Sept. 28, my brother following the course of the river Tiba, a tributary of the Tana river, and I making for the plains where the grass had all been burned off (with the exception of the river bank) and looked a very likely spot for lions, writes S. E. Milsam in the Field describing an encounter with lions in British East Africa. Having sighted some Impalla antelope and finding on closer inspection that there was a fair head among them, I proceeded to stalk them.

At 300 yards I fired at the finest buck and the bullet told, but too far back. Separating from the herd he went in a direction for the river. On walking to the brow of the hill over which he had disappeared I heard a growl, and looking in the direction saw a lioness; she was lying, or rather crouching, at the edge of a small patch of grass that lined the river bank. At 150 yards, taking my .450 I fired, but the shot carried too high; on my second shot she sprang right up in the air and then turned into the grass. There, to my surprise, she was joined by another lioness, which I had not seen.

On my right was the river and about twelve yeards in front of me was a patch of grass which had been flattened down by a hippoptamus; the river was not more than eight yards from me. The beaters entered the grass with my brother and kept their sticks moving well. Suddenly there was a shout: "Look out; she is coming."

As she came nearer I perceived the grass moving, but I could not see her; I therefore waited till she reached the patch of trampled grass and then fired. The first bullet took her well in the shoulder and checked her; on receiving the second she gave a dying spring which landed her in the river where she sank like a stone.

It was at our next camp where my brother killed five lions in three hours and got his horse and syce mauled, though he himself got off without a scratch. The following is his account of the adventure:

On the morning of Oct. 7 I set out to try for an eland, and after a short march came on a fine herd, but they got wind and stampeded. A fine bull eland I was anxious to get, but he would keep right in the center of the herd, so I sent my second gun bearer with my light rifle and cartridge bag containing ammunition for both to get round the other side of the herd.

This he did and the herd split up. I took four long shots at the big eland with my .450 but failed to hit, as they were 400 yards off and going strong. The bull disappeared over a slight rise in some thorn scrub and so had my second gun bearer.

On topping this rise the Somali and I saw twelve lions about 100 yeards off moving at a quick walk through this thorn scrub. One lioness stopped and looked around; she only showed her shoulder, at which I fired and hit her hard. We then followed her up quickly and found her under a bush, when on my second shot she rolled over dead.

By this time the other lions had moved off, so I blew my whistle for my second gun bearer, as I wished to replenish my cartridges. We heard a shot quite near and knew that he had seen the lions. On following him in the direction of the shot we came on eight of them immediately across our front and about 150 yards off.

Having shortened the range by fifty yards I fired at the biggest one leading the pack. My first two shots carried high but the third took him high in the front shoulder, putting him immediately out of action. Feeling in my pocket for more cartridges I found that I had run out of them and had also exhausted the small number that my Somali carried for my .450. At this moment two lionesses seeing their mate rolling over ran up to him and then faced right round and charged.

The Somali started to run and called to me to do the same, but knowing there was no tree large enough within 2,000 yards I called out, "It is no use running," and stood my ground, keeping my eyes riveted on the big lioness which was charging straight at me, the smaller one keeping out on the left.

They came at full speed until within ten yards, and then crouched. In the meanwhile my gun bearer had returned to my side and was standing there with his hunting knife drawn. I said, "Abubuker, I am going to charge."

He said, "No, No!" but knowing that it was the last resort and that they were crouching to spring, I jumped forward, yelling as loudly as possible, when to our surprise and relief they both turned and fled. In the meantime my other gun bearer had been up a tree and came up cringing with the tale that eight lions had attacked him and pulled his boots off.

AN EAGLE'S FATE.

George S. Reid in Country Side Monthly: It was 11:30 o'clock on a hot, breathless morning. Not a breeze moved to cool the perspiring Kaffirs who labored in the mine high up on the hillside; only the tap of the hammers or the rumble of loaded trucks broke the silence. High above, a mere speck against the blue sky, soared a huge "lamfanger" or lamb catcher (a species of eagle which is most destructive to the young flocks of sheep and goats, measuring in some cases six feet from tip to tip of the extended wings). Suddenly it dropped like a stone and seemed about to fall right into the open face of the workings, but ere it had quite reached the topmost level it swerved to one side and shot upward again and remained hovering about 100 feet in the air.

The overseer in charge of the Kaffirs brought his rifle out of his room and fired at the great bird, but with no effect, save a slight swerve and a rush upward till it seemed to vanish into space. The overseer was disappointed as he much wanted to obtain a set of claws or talons of the bird in question, but had so far failed to do so. As he was preparing to blast some dozen holes charged with dynamite the bird again swooped dawn and passed so close above his head that he felt the rush of air it caused.

Looking around the overseer could see the eagle far off over the next hill, and so swift is the flight or swoop of these birds that the eye can hardly follow them. Lighting the fuses one by one with a practised hand, the overseer made a run for shelter from the flying stones and pieces of rock that must follow the explosion.

As he did so the sky was darkened for an instant, and the eagle once again came gliding down the air at a pace that seemed to the waching man quicker than lightning. Just at the second when the great bird was over the explosive in its rapid glide the first charge of dynamite went off. For a space of half a minute nothing could be seen but dense fumes of smoke and dust and flying particles of rock, but when it cleared the overseer was both pleased and astonished to see the body of the eagle lying a few yards off on a ledge of rock.

Surely a miracle had happened, for, as the overseer himself said when displaying his prize to his mates later in the day, "I reckon, mates, it was about a million to one chance of that bird being 1,000 yards away when the charge exploded, but these long odds don't always come off."

PORCUPINE A CITY OF TENTS.

Toronto Globe: "A huge white city with tents stretching as far as eye can reach" was the way in which J. H. Jewell, who returned from Porcupine yesterday, described the new city. Work was being pushed forward night and day and buildings were running up with marvelous rapidity. Merchants have got fresh supplies and business all round is very brisk.

The fire, he said, has made a clean sweep of the underbrush, but the heavy timber is still standing, though badly scorched. An example of the awful fierceness of the fire has been brought back by Mr. Jewell. It is a nugget of gold weighing exactly an ounce which was found beside the incinerated skull of a prospector, evidently the first fruit of some new find. The gold was actually melted by the heat and presents an appearance similar to metal poured from a smelter.

You cannot sell goods if people do not know you have the goods, and people will not know you have goods unless you tell them.

LUMBER TRUST IS ACCUSED

Sensational Charges Made in Suit at Denver.

Spy System, Blacklists and Other Methods Are Alleged.

Government Says Trade of Twenty States Is Controlled.

Denver, Col., Sept. 27.—Sensational charges that the so-called "Lumber Trust" completely dominates the lumber trade of at least twenty states by maintaining a spy system, blacklists, divisions of territory and other alleged illegal methods conducted through a central agency in Chicago, called the Lumber Secretary's Bureau of Information, are made in an anti-trust suit filed in the United States court here today by the department of justice.

REGUIN DENIES STRIKE IS NEAR

Says He Is Sure That the Rumor Has No Foundation.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 27.—E. L. Reguin, president of the San Francisco local of the Federation of Shop Employes of the Harriman lines, denied the truth of stock exchange rumors, current today, that a strike has been declared or is immediately imminent, on the Harriman lines.

"I know I should have been informed of this," said Mr. Reguin, "and I am absolutely sure that the rumor is unfounded."

BROOK PARK IS AFTER THINGS

Tells Its Wants to State Railway and Warehouse Men.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.) — Brook Park, a small station in Pine county, where 160 persons live, wants the Gopher Limited, the Great Northern's fast train, to stop there. It wants the railroad to move its depot from the edge of the town up to a point near its center. Also it wants the railroad to build stock yards there, as four cars of stock were shipped out last year, and five the year before.

No order has yet been issued by the state railway commission.

STATE COLLECTING INHERITANCE TAXES.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—From the estate of Max Ericsson of Crookston, aggregating $50,742.98, the state received an inheritance tax this morning of $559.48. From the estate of Thomas White, also of Crookston, valued at $35,680.95, it received $382.65 and from the estate of Andrew Olson of Washington county, valued at $30,742.56, it got $233.17.

THE SOUR MILK DIET.

"The most striking example of the utility of sour milk is afforded by Dr. Robert Gray of Mexico," says a writer in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette. "On a diet of buttermilk and clabber this remarkable man, over 80 years old and practising in a climate not conducive to physical or mental activity, is doing a practice that would be burdensome to a man in his prime in Minnesota. A daily walk of twenty-five miles is usual to Dr. Gray, and he travels many more miles over the Mexican excuses for roads on mule-back.

"The secret lies in the fact that Dr. Gray has always craved these foods. This craving is not a matter of appetite, but its roots go deeper, into the physiologic needs of the body. I do not believe that these articles would prove as useful to one who disliked them and could not taste them without a shudder, even after faithfully partaking of them daily for weeks to get the palate and digestion accustomed to them.

"But if such a one felt the same craving for sweet milk or cream, a craving existing from infancy and never sated, I fully believe that these should prove better fitted to his needs than the articles that were distasteful. The fact that the administration of arsenic favors the formation of lactic acid and maintains the acidity of the blood may be one reason why it has proved useful in the treatment of the aged."

MINARETS THAT YOU CAN SHAKE.

Wide World: The famous Shaking Minaret was next inspected, and two men shook it, with the result that a brick set on edge fell down. It is about forty feet high, composed of brickwork, and is decorated with geometrical patterns and two belts of Kufic inscription. I have often been asked whether this minaret actually shakes, and have replied that, to the best of my belief, it does. Near Ispahan, too, there is a similar building. It is difficult to account for this curious fact, unless it be accepted that the pillar has been built of bricks which are somewhat elastic.

There is something more than coincidence back of the fact that it is the advertised businesses that succeed, and the unadvertised businesses that fail.

NOT FORMING ANY MERGER

Story About Copper Combine Is Without Slightest Foundation.

Market Is Erratic, Fluctuations Being Violent and Irregular.

There is no truth in the stories that are being published about plans being considered at the present time for a large copper combine. The Herald has the highest authority for stating that the subject of a merger or combine is not being given the slightest consideration.

There is hardly any doubt that the large producers would gladly enter into a combination such as was proposed a year or two ago, but financial and market conditions are not favorable now for taking up the matter. The story of a combination being formed at this time is apparently based upon a visit of W. E. Corey, former president of the United States Steel corporation, to mining properties in the Southwest. There was a rumor some time ago that Mr. Corey would be chosen president of the projected copper combine. Mr. Corey's visit to Arizona and Mexico is solely with the object of inspecting properties in which he has a large financial interest and which he had never seen. The prominent mining men who have accompanied him on the trip are merely making one of their regular tours of inspection.

A Chicago dispatch today says: "A conference of representatives of the large copper interests of the United States, at which it is reported, a merger under an English holding corporation may be considered, will be held here tomorrow. Thomas F. Cole, John McLean and John Sebenius of Duluth, Minn., arrived here today, John D. Ryan, president of the Amalgamated Copper corporation is expected tonight and W. E. Corey and R. L. Agassiz, representatives of the Guggenheim interests and the Rothschilds of England, will reach here tomorrow. Ryan, with Corey and Agassiz, have been in the Southwest for the last two weeks."

Notwithstanding the above statement, there is no effort being made to form a copper combine at the meeting in Chicago.

Today's copper market was very hard to characterize except by saying that it was without definite character. It cannot be called bullish or bearish. It was an eccentric mixture of the two.

Seldom have the coppers seen a more erratic day than the present was up to noon. Coppers opened strong and seemed on the eve of recovering from the tremendous and persistent hammering they have been receiving for about three weeks. The London copper market opened with an advance of five shillings on both spot and futures. The rise was undoubtedly helped by the strength of the general list at New York. Amalgamated, which closed yesterday at $47.62½, opened today at $50.12½. Then it declined to $49.75 then bulged again to $50.12½ and later took another slump to $48. Coppers seemed to follow the general trend of the New York stock list, which took a turn for the worse, shortly before noon and had quite a break, led by St. Paul. The rumor that President Taft was about to deliver an anti-corporation speech, worse than anything he had yet said, tended strongly to pull the values of all the stocks down.

Among the copper movements were the following: Amalgamated, yesterday's close, $47.62½; today, $50.12½, $49.75, $50.12½, $49.25, $48, $46.62½, $47.37½; Butte Ballaklava, yesterday, $3.50 bid, $3.75 asked; today, $3.75; Butte Coalition, yesterday, $14.25 bid, $14.50 asked; today, $14.50, $14.87½, $15; Calumet & Arizona, yesterday, $47.25 bid, $47.50 asked; today, $49.25, $49.50, $49, $48, $48.50; Giroux, yesterday, $3.56¼ bid, $3.62½ asked; today, $3.62½, $3.75; Greene-Cananea, yesterday, $6.87½ bid, $6 asked; today, $6; North Butte, yesterday, $21.75 bid, $22 asked; today, $22.25, $22.75, $22.62½, $23, $22.25, $22; Shattuck, yesterday, $15 asked, today, $14.62½, $15.50; Butte & Superior, yesterday and today, $8.50 bid; Keating, yesterday and today, $2.50 asked.

SPANISH 5 AND 10-CENT STORES.

Consular and Trade Reports: Spanish newspapers are commenting on the new system of merchandising just introduced into Spain through the opening in Madrid of two bazars along lines corresponding to the American 5 and 10-cent store. The Madrid bazars have been started with a stock of toys, cheap jewelry, notions, perfumery, underwear, collars and cuffs, neckties, caps, chinaware, fans, handkerchiefs, belts, brushes, purses, small hardware and other articles priced to sell at 65 centimos, an equivalent of about 12 cents American money.

The American 5 and 10-cent store idea has not been developed in Spain to any extent, although the two bazars recently established approach the system, at least in the range of articles carried, more closely than anything heretofore attempted.

Bazars carrying articles offered within a certain price range have been operated in the larger Spanish cities for some time—Malaga has had such a store for over twenty years, prices varying from 2 to 9 cents—but the limited variety of goods obtained and sold at these prices did not strongly attract the public.

An auto car has been designed in France, the top and sides of which are constructed of heavy plate glass. It is meant to follow and observe balloons and aeroplanes in their flights.

"HE SOLD ME TO STRAUSS"

Mrs. Patterson Accuses Husband, Whom She Killed in Denver.

Says Jury Will Not Blame Her for the Shooting.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 27.—"He spat in my face and called me the vilest name a man can call a woman," is the reason Mrs. Gertrude Gibson Patterson gives for killing her husband, Charles A. Patterson, formerly a Chicago broker. Her attorneys, it is learned, will offer "temporary insanity" as the result of long abuse and final insult, as the defense.

A Chicago firm has instructed a prominent Denver lawyer to defend Mrs. Patterson, which fact is taken to suggest that some of her Chicago friends may have come to her assistance.

Mrs. Patterson has told her counsel that three months after her marriage Patterson sold her to Emil Strauss, the millionaire Chicago manufacturer, for a trip to Europe. The consideration, she said, was $1,500 and was paid to Patterson. She charged that Patterson urged her to resume these relations when they became short of money; that she supported him by keeping boarders in Chicago, and that Patterson repeatedly abused and beat her when she failed to give him money.

Expects to Go Free.

These declarations are refuted by statements made by Patterson to his attorneys while preparing to contest the divorce action begun by his wife, who alleged cruelty on his part.

Mrs. Patterson declines to state whether her husband fired the first shot, but added:

"I have evidence in my husband's own handwriting that will undoubtedly clear me before a jury."

She said she went to see Patterson to get him to withdraw his suit against Emil Strauss.

"This he agreed to do if I would sign over to him my Denver home and certain Chicago property," she said, "but I refused. That's how the quarrel started."

Mother Accuses Patterson.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 27.—Mrs. John Gibson, mother of Mrs. Gertrude C. Patterson, who shot and killed her husband at Denver, said at Sandoval, Ill., the family home, that Patterson was not the kind of a man he had been pictured and that her daughter had suffered many wrongs at his hands. The Gibson family has lived at Sandoval for years. Mrs. Patterson was one of the oldest of ten children. A brother, Charles, is now with Mrs. Patterson in Denver.

"All that I know of the Denver occurrence," said Mrs. Gibson, "is what I have read. I regret the tragedy. My daughter lived with Patterson as long as possible and then began suit for divorce. Following this Patterson began an alienation suit against Strauss.

"I am sufficiently versed in the affairs of Patterson to know there was no cause for the alienation suit. I feel that Patterson extolled his own family while he was dragging down the name of my daughter."

EFFORTS TO STOP FIGHT IN LONDON

Injunction Issued and Principals Are Taken Into Court.

London, Sept. 27.—The court today granted the application of the District Railway company, the ground landlord of the Earls' Courts for an injunction against the lessees of the building to stop the proposed Johnson-Wells fight, subject to damages if the decision is reversed on trial.

A crowd of sporting men filled the Bow Street police court this afternoon for the hearing of Jack Johnson, Bombardier Wells, their managers and James White, the promoter of the prize fight scheduled for Oct. 2, who had been summoned on the complaint that they were planning to commit a breach of the peace.

The action was instigated by the public prosecutor following a decision of Home Secretary Churchill that the proposed contest would be illegal.

Regarded as a test case which might have a wide bearing on the future of pugilism in England, great interest was aroused in the outcome. Richard D. Muir and Traverse Humphreys, who prosecuted Dr. Crippen, the wife murderer, appeared for the solicitor-general; Curtis Bennett represented Wells, while Sir Forrest Fulton and Eustace Fulton looked after the interests of White.

Johnson disdained counsel and announced: "I appear for myself."

The defense tried to obtain an adjournment, contending that insufficient time had been given them in which to prepare a case upon which the whole future of boxing depended.

BILLY PAPKE TRAINING HARD

Kewanee Fighter Anxious to Redeem Himself With the Public.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 27.—Billy Papke has spoken for the first time since his mediocre showing with Sailor Burke a little over a month ago in New York.

The Kewanee fighter is coming back to the ring to redeem himself and wishes it announced that when he starts again he will be the Papke of old.

Bill today declared he would be ready in October to take on aspiring middleweights as fast as they could be set up in front of him. The blonde scrapper's tone indicates that he means business, that he has been stung by the criticism heaped upon him since the Burke fiasco, and that when he next shies his thunderbolt into the arena somebody is in for the kind of a licking Billy used to dole out in his championship days.

Papke has again placed his affairs in the hands of his brother, Ed Papke, who was Bill's manager until the fighter left on his eventful trip to Australia. Ed will make all of his brother's matches from now on with the idea of landing Bill at the top of the middleweight class as undisputed champion.

He has sent for Jack Herrick to act as his sparring partner, and if he fails to land Herrick will hire some other 158-pounder with class enough to make boxing bouts interesting for him.

Papke's first fight in his redemption campaign probably will be with Bob Moha, the Milwaukee, lad, at Boston next month. Arrangements to stage the match before Miah Murray's Armory A. K. practically have been concluded. The men are to box at catchweights.

"None of these fellows will catch me out of shape again," said Papke today. "I have made several indifferent fights, I admit, but that one with Burke was the last. In condition I can beat any middleweight in the game, and I guess it is up to me to go out and prove this to the public."

Mohawks Organize.

AMERICAN CAPITAL IN CUBA.

About two years ago a few Americans bought over 400 acres of land adjacent to the city of Cienfuegos in Cuba at what was considered at that time a high price. Local real estate men, merchants and financiers shook their heads and predicted dismal failure, stating that in their opinion it would take twenty years to sell 200 lots in Cienfuegos.

However, the purchasers proceeded to divide the tract in city blocks and more than 1,800 lots and offered them for sale at reasonable prices as compared with other city property. Over 1,000 lots were sold at the end of last March, says Consular and Trade Reports, and a city stands now where on their first visit the purchasers bought what looked to them like a "slightly rolling prairie farm." For each dollar invested they have earned fifteen, and the indications are that this rate will increase before the whole tract is sold.

Notwithstanding this highly beneficial result of their investment these Americans are looked upon here as benefactors of the poor, for they enabled them to buy building lots at uniform and reasonable prices and gave them liberal terms, something new here, thus assisting them to escape paying high rent for the uncomfortable houses or rooms in which they were compelled to live.

There is over $100,000,000 of American capital in Cuba, about 35 per cent of the total foreign capital invested. Some has been imprudently invested, but an investigation will show that the country is not responsible and that at least the same caution is required as in investments in the United States. Last year the Cuban government established a bureau of information under the guidance of an American who has resided in Cuba many years and has a wide acquaintance with the island. The number of vessels entering the port of Cienfuegos during 1910 was 305, 260 steam and 45 sailing vessels. Of the total only 8 steamships and 14 sailing vessels were American.

SIZE OF AMERICAN FAMILIES.

The immigration commission has been investigating the size of families of various nationalities as to parentage but born in this country. The investigation covered the entire state of Rhode Island, Cleveland, Minneapolis, rural Ohio and rural Minnesota.

Only those married women were included in the study who were under 45 years of age and had been married from ten to nineteen years. According to the Independent the results show that for the total area tabulated there were 2.7 children born to the native white mothers of native parentage and 4.4 children to the white mothers of foreign parentage.

In Minneapolis the number of children born to native mothers was 2.4 and in rural Minesota 3.4. The number of children to mothers of specified foreign parentage was as follows: English, 3.4; English Canadian, 3.5; Scotch, 3.6; German, 4.3; French, 4.3; Irish, 4.4; Norwegian, 4.7; Italian, 4.9; Bohemian, 5; Russian, 5.4; French Canadian, 5.6; and Polish, 6.2.

ITALY ANNOUNCES INTENTION TO TAKE TRIPOLI AND CYRENE

Warships Are Anchored Eight Miles Off the Coast.

General Strike of Protest Is Failure Up to Date.

London, Sept. 28.—A private cablegram from Tripoli, timed in that city at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon, indicates that the place had not been occupied by the Italians up to that hour. A dispatch from Rome says that the period of grace allowed Turkey will expire at noon Sept. 29.

Rome, Sept. 28.—A note addressed by the foreign office to the Italian charge d'affaires at Constantinople very recently peremptorily fixed twenty-four hours as the period within which the Turkish government must reply to the demands therein set forth. In this note Italy announced her intention to occupy Tripoli and Cyrene.

The Italian minister of foreign affairs, Marquis Di San Giuliano, has addressed to the Italian charge d'affaires at Constantinople, Signor Di Martino, a note which says:

"During a long series of years the government of Italy never ceased to make representations to the Porte upon the absolute necessity of correcting the state of disorder to which the government of Turkey has abandoned Tripoli and Cyrene. These regions should be admitted to the benefits of the progress realized by other parts of Mediterranean and Africa.

Of Vital Interest.

"This transformation, which was imposed by the general exigencies of civilization, constitutes for Italy a vital interest of the first order by reason of the slight distance separating these countries from the coasts of Italy.

"Notwithstanding the attitude taken by the government of Italy, which has always accorded its loyal support to the imperial government in the different political questions of recent times, and notwithstanding the moderation and patience shown by the government of Italy, its views concerning Tripoli have been badly received by the imperial government; but more than that, all enterprise on the part of Italians in the regions mentioned has been systematically opposed and unjustifiably crushed."

Saw Turkish Vessel Dock.

Constantinople, Sept. 28.—It is officially stated that several small Italian warships are cruising eight miles off Tripoli. They are scrutinized by means of electric searchlights the Turkish transport Derna, which arrived at Tripoli from the Bosphorus on Tuesday having on board heavy artillery and munitions of war.

The Italian cruisers did not interfere with the passage of the Derna, which is now discharging her cargo at Tripoli.

The cabinet this morning renewed its consideration of the situation. Secrecy was observed as to the deliberations. It was evident, however, that the replies of the powers to Turkey's appeal for intervention had produced the bitterest disappointment.

Is Ready to Yield.

There were no developments reported in the situation this morning. Italy not having communicated her final demands to the Porte as yet; but in official circles the belief was expressed that a conflict would be avoided, inasmuch as Turkey was prepared to make concessions to Italy provided her dignity was preserved and her territorial integrity unimpaired.

The leading papers of the capital, while guarding their utterances, make it plain that they favor resistance to

ENDS WALK IN NINETY-TWO DAYS

New Yorker Has Hiked All the Way to San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 28.—For the purpose of presenting a letter from Mayor Gaynor of New York to Mayor McCarthy of this city, Bert Mayor, aged 18, walked into the city hall today, ending a stroll that began at Coney Island on May 2. Mayor's actual traveling time was ninety-two days, giving him an average of thirty-three miles a day.

MISSOURI IRON RATES HELD UP

Reduced Freight Charges Will Not Take Effect Oct. 1.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 28.—An order restraining the state board of railway commissioners from putting into effect, on Oct. 1, the new and reduced schedule of rates on iron and steel, was granted to the Missouri railway by Judge Hook in the federal court here today. The matter of issuing an injunction asked by the railroads will be heard at a later day.

THREATEN LOCKOUT IN NEW YORK CITY

Action Would Tie Up All Building Operations There.

New York, Sept. 28.—A general suspension of all building operations in the city was threatened today, resulting from the strike of marble workers. The board of governors of the Building Trades Employers' association, at a meeting this afternoon, expects to serve notice on the unions that unless they call off a sympathetic strike on some sixty buildings in support of the marble workers, the employers will declare a general lockout.

Seven hundred members of the employers' association, representing thirty-two trade associations, met yesterday and empowered the board to take action. About 40,000 members of sixteen building trades unions are affected.

STEAL HORSES FOR HONEYMOON DRIVE

Pennsylvania Couple Finally Arrested at Paoli, Ind.

Paoli, Ind., Sept. 28.—That they spent their honeymoon traveling from Pennsylvania to Indiana in a buggy, stealing a fresh horse each time when the one which they were driving was exhausted, is the statement of Clarence Emerson Homer and his wife, arrested here charged with having stolen a farmer's horse. They were remanded to jail.

Homer and his wife, who are 18 years old, were married without their parents' consent, the young man said. Their families gave them the horse and buggy and a small sum of money, and they started West, with no definite destination, relaying horses without paying for them. They would not give the names of their home town or parents.

MAY NOT BE ABLE TO CONVICT DAVIS

Evidence Against Alleged Abductor Appears to Be Weak.

Morden, Man., Sept. 28.—A glance at the evidence to be given by crown witneses against Ed Davis, alleged abductor of Gladys Price, the Snowflake, school teacher, shows that it is extremely weak, and lawyers say it will be impossible to obtain a conviction on the evidence now in hand. No one saw him shoot William Adams, the hotel-keeper at Snowflake, and not even Adams himself can identify the man. The gun and revolver he is supposed to have stolen from Kalleda have not been found, and when arrested he was unarmed. The girl has told different stories about her abduction, and it is said she now admits she is not sure that she identified him.

To Advertise Polk County.

East Grand Forks, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.) — Polk county will be well represented in the New York land show this winter as a result of the activities of the local Commercial club and public schools, which are working on a county exhibit that will be thoroughly representative of the county's producing proclivities.

ADMITS SHE GAVE POISON

Girl Says She Thought Morphine Was Calomel and Soda.

Annie Crawford May Be Accused of Murdering Parents and Two Sisters.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 28.—Following the announcement late last night that Miss Annie Crawford had admitted giving morphine by mistake to her sister, Elsie, causing the latter's death Saturday, interest today centers in what action the police will take concerning the mysterious deaths of Miss Crawford's parents and sister, Mary, in June and July of 1910. She has been formally charged with murdering her sister, Elsie.

Detectives say they have discovered that all the insurance policies on the lives of the parents and Mary Crawford were collected by Annie.

Members of the family declared Annie had insisted that she alone attended her parents and two sisters when they fell ill, and that she alone administered all the medicine.

Said Food Was Bitter.

It was said that when Elsie wanted her aunt to nurse her, Annie protested. Elsie complained, it was stated, that the food given her by Annie was bitter. Mrs. Robert Crawford, an aunt, stated that whatever food others gave to Elsie was given without Annie's knowledge.

In her confession Annie said she gave Elsie three half-grain morphine tablets in capsules, mistaking them for calomel and soda.

In explaining her dislike for her sister, Annie said:

"After my mother died and we broke

MOELLER SINGS PONTIFICAL MASS

Fifth National Eucharist Congress Opens—Sermon By Ireland.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 28. — The fifth annual national Eucharist congress opened here today with hundreds of priests and many of the great dignitaries of the Roman Catholic church in America present. The congress will last through Sunday.

The congress began this morning with a procession of acolytes, priests and prelates which marched from the pastoral residence to St. Peter's cathedral to the strains of Elgar's "Behold, the High Priest Cometh."

A solemn pontifical high mass was sung by Archbishop Henry Moeller of the Cincinnati diocese, assisted by prominent local priests. Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul delivered the sermon.

After the mass various sessions were to be held, at the first one of which Rev. Dr. Joseph Selinger of St. Louis was scheduled to speak, to be followed by a discussion led by Rev. A. P. Ternes of Detroit.

Very Rev. John Cavanaugh was also to speak in the afternoon session, and Rev. Fathers J. H. Rhodes of Rockford, Ill., and J. H. Guendling of Fort Wayne, Ind., were to lead the ensuing discussion.

TAFT AMONG THE IOWANS

President Will Spend Two Days in the Hawkeye State.

Cummins Is Only Leader Not With Him on Train.

Denfson, Iowa., Sept. 28.—Fresh from the progressive state of Kansas, where he received a most flattering reception, President Taft swept into Iowa early today, and will remain in the state of the famous "Iowa idea" until tomorrow night.

Mr. Taft's most important speech of the day will be delivered at Waterloo, where he will discuss the "Relation of Government to the Business of the Country."

Recent events in Wall street have caused this speech to be looked forward to as one of the most interesting and perhaps far-reaching in effect of any the president will make on his present tour.

Mr. Taft originally was scheduled to reach Waterloo at 2 p. m., but various additions to the itinerary in response to the demands for brief stops along the route have changed the hour of arrival to 3:15 p. m., and it probably will be 4 o'clock before the speech is begun.

Make Many Stops.

In addition to his stop in this city, the president was scheduled today to visit Fort Dodge, Webster City, Iowa, Iowa Falls, with other minor stops between here and Waterloo. Tomorrow Mr. Taft will speak at Des Moines, Knoxville, Ibia, Ottumwa and a number of smaller places.

Just before his train pulled out of

PICK OSBORN TO NOMINATE TAFT?

Report Is Sent Out By Publicity Man With the President.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a special sent out from Kansas to his newspapers by Gus J. Karger, publicity man of the Taft administration who is accompanying the president on his swing round the circle, the announcement is made that Governor Chase S. Osborn is being talked of as the Republican leader above all others to nominate Taft at the national convention.

Governor Osborn is not in the city, but when this statement was shown to Chairman Frank Knox of the state central committee he admitted that some of the members of the presidential party had discussed with him Governor Osborn's placing the president in nomination at the national convention.

"I do not know," continued Mr. Knox, whether the matter has been put up to the governor or not, as I have not discussed it with him. I do know, however, that such a selecion would be a most admirable one; would insure the running of Taft in a fashion most acceptable to the president's friends, and would give renewed emphasis to the progressive quality of the president's administration. I have no doubt that the governor, acting in such capacity, would voice a strong keynote which would exist throughout the campaign to follow."

FIGHT HIGH FOOD COST

Ten Thousand New York Families Unite in Movement.

Five Hundred Retail Men and Hundreds of Farmers Join in.

New York, Sept. 28. — Ten thousand heads of New York families, 500 retail dealers in fifty lines, and several hundred farmers of the Pennsylvania State grange have combined in an association here to eliminate the middleman and lower the high cost of living.

While the Pennsylvania State grange is completing negotiations with the association this week to handle their output, a small army of canvassers is enrolling hundreds of other families in the movement, and officers of the association are negotiating with the farmers of New York state to handle their products also.

Eliminate Six Profits.

The association plans to act as a clearing house between producer and consumer, dividing between them the profit of the various middlemen through whose hands food commodities have hitherto passed. In the case of some farm products, the association finds that six middlemen or brokers have been reaping profits before the products reach the consumer.

The five hundred dealers in almost every line of retail trade are members of the association, and receive their supplies, because of such membership,

GREAT FUTURE FOR CANADIANS

Earl Grey Says Dominion Will Surpass Britain in Importance.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 28.—"The great resources of Canada and the character of the Canadian people make it certain that the Dominion will one day be the greatest factor in the British empire, even exceeding in importance and influence the United Kingdom itself," declared Earl Grey last night at a farewell banquet tendered him by the Canadian club.

"Some people profess to place reliance on the Monroe doctrine," Earl Grey continued, "but where would that doctrine stand if the British fleet were swept from the seas? The only security for Canada's defense is the supremacy of the British fleet."

Laurier and Borden Talk.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and R. L. Borden spoke briefly.

"The people of Canada have just declared that the party led by Mr. Borden is to govern Canada," said Sir Wilfrid, "and while I regret the decision, I have no quarrel with it and will take my place at the left of the speaker as opposition leader."

Mr. Borden said that Canadians had viewed with wondering admiration the splendid campaign Sir Wilfrid Laurier had made, and expressed the hope that he might be able to close his own career with a display of as remarkable vigor.

OFFICIALS OF UNIONS DECIDE TO CALL OUT HARRIMAN LINE MEN

Saturday or Monday May Be Chosen for the Action.

Federation's Demands Are Flatly Rejected By Railroads.

Kline Says Strike Is Inevitable—Will Affect 35,000 Men.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—A strike on all the Harriman lines, including the Illinois Central, will be called as soon as the presidents of the International Shopmen's unions involved can fix upon the day and hour, according to J. W. Kline, president of the International Blacksmiths' and Helpers' unions, today.

"A strike is inevitable now," said Kline. "Kruttschnitt replied unfavorably to our final request for a conference, and after a talking this morning with other union presidents, we have decided that the strike must be called.

Monday or Saturday.

"Some favor next Monday as the proper time to begin the actual struggle; others want to begin Saturday. As soon as we decide that question, the word to strike will be sent to all unions."

The strike order is said to be already in the hands of the local union heads, and all that will be needed is the flash, making it effective. Thirty-five thousand men, including machinists, boilermakers, car repairers and manufacturers, sheet metal workers and blacksmiths, will be affected.

Statement by Kline.

Mr. Kline said:

This man claims to be her son and the insurance company is trying to substantiate his claim.

He planned to follow the route of the Erie railroad today, and said before starting that he hoped to be in the state of Ohio before night.

Crossed Jamestown.

HOLDUP MEN TAKE PITCHER OF WATER

Toothpicks and Potted Fern Also Go—Get Only $13 Cash.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Two armed robbers, wearing black handkerchiefs as masks, entered a small hotel in Michigan avenue today, held up Charles G. Gletz, the clerk, and departed with $13, a large box of tooth picks, a pitcher filled with ice water and a potted fern.

"You ought to have more money than this in the cash drawer so we will just take the rest of this stuff for spite," remarked one of the robbers as he went out of the door carrying the odd assortment of loot.

OIL IN STOVE; FIVE DIE IN FIRE

Woman Saves One Child But Perishes With Four Others.

Mitchell, Ill., Sept. 28.—Mrs. Virgil Vandever and four of her children were burned to death at their home here at 6 o'clock this morning. Her husband and Arthur Langford, 13 years old, Mrs. Vandever's son by a former marriage, saved themselves by jumping from a second story window.

Another child was dropped from a window by the mother and its life was saved.

The fire was caused by an explosion of kerosene which the husband had poured into the kitchen stove. Together with his stepson, Arthur Langford, Vandever made a frantic effort to save the lives of the other members of the family, but the flames spread so rapidly he and Langford were forced to jump out of a second story window to escape with their lives. Both were painfully burned.

Mrs. Vandever's last act was a supreme expression of maternal love. She snatched up from the bed on which he lay asleep, her 7-year-old boy, Theirl, the favorite of her children, hugged him to her breast, and with a final effort shoved him out through the screen of a window and dropped him to safety. Then onlookers saw her throw up her hands and sink backward into the flames.

OLD PICTURES OF ZENITH CITY

Huntington W. Merchant of New York, a former resident of Duluth and a son of S. L. Merchant, a Duluth pioneer, has sent to the Commercial club a number of photographs of Duluth scenes. The pictures were taken by the elder Mr. Merchant in 1888, 1889 and 1890 and show well the crudity of the growing town at that time.

Among the pictures are some of the burning of the Fargusson block, which stood on the corner of Fourth avenue west and Superior street; the Union depot in course of construction; the Fifth avenue and Lake avenue wholesale districts in embryonic stages, the Endion division when it was a wilderness, and other views which, viewed in the light of present conditions, show the great growth of the city in the last twenty years.

WEATHER: Rain this afternoon, and probably Friday; continued cool.

Senator Kenyon So Characterizes Taft as to Trust Cases.

Says Later Administration Has Accomplished More.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Sept. 28.—Introducing President Taft to an audience here today, United States Senator Kenyon entered into a comparison of the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law during the Roosevelt administration and that of President Taft, and declared that when the history of that act is written, the highest place cannot be given to Col. Roosevelt, but to President Taft.

Mr. Taft later refused to accept special credit for enforcement of the anti-trust act, and said that if more cases were brought to a successful conclusion in the last two years than in the administration of his predecessor it was because the machinery of prosecution had been perfected and the meaning of the law had been better understood.

High Praise for Taft.

The administration of President Taft, said Senator Kenyon, has stood above everything else, for the enforcement of law against all individuals regardless of wealth, position or influence.

"I have known of his work in that respect and while we delight to speak of his predecessor, whom we all honor, whether he be fighting graft in New York or lions in Africa still when you compare the record of these two administrations in the enforcement of the law, the impartial historian, who writes that record must give the highest place to the administration of William Howard Taft.

Compared Administrations.

"In the administration of his predecessor there were forty-four cases brought to enforce the provisions of the Sherman act during a period of less than seven years. During his administration there have been twenty-seven cases to enforce the provisions of that act in a little less than three years. There have been over 150 individuals indicted criminally and the first jail sentences in the whole history of the Sherman act have been secured. And behind it all has been our president."

Taft Is Diffident.

President Taft declined to take credit for unusual activity in enforcing the Sherman law.

"Senator Kenyon has been good enough to give a friendly comparison between the last administration and this one in respect to the trust prosecutions, but it is only fair to say that they were begun earnestly in the last administration; the law has been twenty years on the statute books and we finally learned to interpret it, and that is the reason we are doing better now than before. That is all."

The president paid a tribute to the late Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver, whose home was in Fort Dodge.

Referring again to the tariff and his vetoes, the president said that when the tariff board reports in December he expects to recommend revision of several schedules, if their report warrants revision.

"It is said the tariff board is a pretext for delaying the tariff reduction and revision," said the president. "We will see whether it is. If the report comes from the board and I make the recommendation, that is pretty good proof that it is not a pretext and that we mean business. If you are doubting Thomases now, and if the rain minimizes your enthusiasm a little bit, wait until the sun comes out in December."

MAKES NEW CITIZENS

This was naturalization day in the United States court, and Judge Page Morris added nineteen new citizens to the list of voters of this country. Of these, fourteen were taken in by the United States circuit court and five by the United States district court.

In all there were twenty-five candidates for citizenship before the court, of whom five had their cases continued and one dismissed on account of his lack of knowledge of the government of the country.

Most of the new citizens are Finns, living in the neighborhood of Floodwood, where they have farms of their own, well under development. Nearly all of these had made their declarations of intention prior to the passage of the new naturalization law, and were therefore not subject to the severe examinations that are given to those who applied after it became effective.

The following were admitted in the circuit court: Kalle Sulonen, Hjalmar Livula, Otto Sukanen, Frank W. Rantala, Ernest Spink, Edward Sukonen, Henry Huttenen, August Kaskela, Erik Edward Pulva, all of Finland; Wilhelm Kause, Germany; August Johnson, Sweden; Peter Alexander Hansen, Alex Bergman, Norway; Charles Rivers, who at this session had his name changed from Slonia Rerizm of Russia. Those admitted in the district court were; Lelek Cohn, Jacob Schunder, Russia; Oskar Edl Dahl, Svanette Kaletin, Finland and Eugene Balliste Charron, Canada.

Why We Cure Men

It takes a builder three or four years to learn his trade thoroughly. How long would it take him to learn all trades?

The doctor who spends four years at a Medical College is incapable of treating with success all the countless diseases of men, women and children. He knows a little of everything, but nothing thoroughly. We cure diseases and weaknesses peculiar to men. This is our sole field. The true specialist never attempts to do more than he can do WELL. His persistent study, diligent research, and scientific investigations are all on the line of a few diseases. A SINGLE CLASS OF THEM, on which all his efforts are concentrated, and to which his entire practice is strictly limited. Hence, he becomes supreme in his chosen field.

We do not pretend to know all about diseases, in fact, our knowledge is very limited and extends to only this one class—DISEASES OF MEN. If you are afflicted with any disease that is peculiar to men, STOMACH TROUBLE, SKIN DISEASE, BLOOD POISON, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RHEUMATISM, OR ANY OTHER DISEASE OF A CHRONIC OR NEWLY CONTRACTED NATURE we invite you to consult us and promise you a cure. Twenty-six years' of hard and constant effort here have given us the means, methods and remedies to effect PERMANENT CURES. We assist every afflicted man to clear up and out of his body all poisons, we free him from his bad habits, we cure his maladies and return him to perfect health.

We publish no names though we have the tistimony of hundreds of men, many of whom had been given up as hopeless. Our principles are HONESTY AND INTEGRITY. We have no schemes to offer you, no "Trial treatments," no cheap bargain-cures, but we DO offer you the advantage of our strict professional honesty our superior ability and our successful experience.

A personal examination of your case is most desirable, but if it is impossible for you to call, send us an account of your trouble, ask for a symptom blank and we will give you the benefit of our knowledge by mail, confidentially.

Lighting Talks

NUMBER 69 DULUTH, SEPTEMBER 28, 1911

The Interests of the Taxpayers

Under the mistaken notion that they are "furthering the interests of the taxpayers," a few people in this City are still talking in favor of a municipal electric plant.

Do YOU think it is "furthering the interests of the taxpayers" to make TAXES CLIMB HIGHER ALL THE TIME FOR THIRTY YEARS—or more?

A municipal plant cannot be built without a new bond issue of many hundreds of thousands of dollars. It would take three or four years, possibly longer, to build the plant; but meanwhile, during these years before the plant could be put in operation, the City would have to pay the interest on those bonds. That interest would amount to thousands of dollars more than the City pays for all its electric light today. Besides the interest on the bonds, a sinking fund must be started for the retirement of the bonds when they fall due.

It is plain to any man that a municipal plant (or any other establishment) cannot earn anything before it can start to operate. Then how can the City raise all those thousands of dollars for bond interest and sinking fund, except by making taxes higher? There is no other way.

When your municipal plant does turn on its electric current, the Duluth-Edson Electric company will still be doing business right here in Duluth; and a municipal plant cannot meet our rates for electric light without losing money on all business taken at those rates. How can a municipal plant make up its losses, except by mulcting the taxpayers? There is no other way.

Every bond issue for the Water and Light Department of Duluth runs for thirty years. Thirty years would be the most advantageous period for municipal electric plant bonds also.

But the average life of electrical machinery is only about ten years. Electrical equipment depreciates faster than any other kind. Long before those thirty-year bonds expire the whole plant will be worn out and its obsolete and useless equipment will have to be replaced with new.

How can a municipal plant be rebuilt, and new equipment be acquired, except by issuing more bonds, plunging the City deeper into debt, and making taxes higher and higher all the time? There is no other way. For, THE CITY MUST LOOK TO ITS TAXPAYERS TO PAY ITS DEBTS.

On the other hand: If a new lighting contract is awarded to the Duluth-Edison Electric Company taxes will not be affected at all, and for the same amount now paid the City will get 93 MORE ARC LIGHS, and the private consumers of electricity will SAVE $30,000 A YEAR ON THEIR LIGHTING BILLS.

Let your alderman know which of these propositions YOU think best furthers the interests of the taxpayers.

Read the next Lighting Talk in next Saturday's Herald.

ELOPERS ARE BEING TRIED

Wife and Alleged Affinity Brought to Justice By Husband.

Filip Platucich and Dora Oratinovich are on trail today before Judge William A. Cant of the district court for adultery, the September grand jury having brought indictments against them both.

Dora Oratinovich is the wife of Matt Oratinovich, who followed the couple all over the United States before he finally located them living at New Duluth and had them arrested.

The affair dates back several years when Oratinovich and his wife were living in New York. Platucich was a friend of family and spent a good share of his time at their residence.

Finally Platucich told Oratinovich that he was going West and borrowed $25 with which to buy his ticket. A few days after his departure, Mrs. Oratinovich is said to have joined him at some point in Michigan.

Then began a hunt on the part of the husband for his wife and her affinity. He was seriously hampered by lack of funds, and on arriving in one town he had to work there long enough to obtain money with which to pay his fare to the next.

He first traced them to Bay City, Mich., but found that they had departed just previous to the time of his arrival. He followed them to Hibbing, Minn., and there tried to shoot Platucich, it is said. The gun was working badly and Platucich was saved. Oratinovich was arrested and placed in jail for assault, while his wife and her affinity made their way to Milwaukee, Wis.

Oratinovich arrived in Milwaukee just after the couple had left for Kalamazoo and at Kalamazoo he had the same luck. Finally he located them living at New Duluth and had them arrested.

He was bound to find the man who had broken up his home and punish him. Oratinovich says that he would have followed them as long as he lived if he had not found them.

Assistant County Attorney Warren E. Greene appears in the case for the state and Attorney William Marx is defending.

PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

Plans at Jamestown for Entertaining Visiting Churchmen.

Jamestown, N. D., Sept. 28.(Special to The Herald.)—The residents of this city are working to insure the success of the Presbyterian synod to be held here next month beginning Oct. 12, and will entertain all visitors, announces Rev. B. A. Fahl of Devils Lake. William E. Spear will be present and will preside over the Synodical Sunday School institute, a department that is to receive special consideration. Glestin of the Presbyterian Sunday school board also will be in attendance and they will take part in the institute work.

Previous to the meeting of the state synod there will be sessions of the several presbyteries, the Pembina presbytery being scheduled to meet at Grand Forks Oct. 10.

D., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fourteenth annual of the North Dakota conference of Free Methodists will be opened in the Glenfield church next Wednesday and will continue three days. Bishop Wilson T. Hogue of Chicago will be in attendance and will preside over the various sessions. It is expected that this conference will be the largest the denomination has held in North Dakota.

One of the principal matters to be taken up will be the assignment of pastors for the coming year. In this particular it is expected that only a few changes will be made this year, most of the pastors to be returned to their old fields.

CHILDREN HOLD FAIRS

Every Rural School House Will Have Exhibit of Garden Produce.

Winners Will Enter Competition in Duluth Oct. 20 and 21.

Miniature fairs will be held at every rural schoolhouse in St. Louis county about the middle of next month.

Last spring the children were given free seeds and told to raise their own garden stuff. For the best of the different classes of vegetables, prizes are to be given. The children throughout the country districts are much interested and some of the exhibitions will rival those of older farmers at the regular fairs, it is said by those who have been through the county districts and have observed the work of the children.

After the different exhibitions have been held at the schoolhouses in the county and the winners named, those who were successful in winning prizes may enter exhibits in the general contest, which will be held at the local courthouse Oct. 20 and 21. Only those who have won prizes in the country are eligible to enter this general contest.

Prizes are given for the best country exhibits and additional prizes will be given the prize winners in the Duluth exhibition. In the country districts trifles dear to the hearts of boys and girls will be given and at the general contest cash prizes will be given.

Last spring the Duluth Commercial club supplied the seeds free to all the school children of the county who asked for them. The seeds were given County Supt. N. A. Young for distribution. Hundreds of children made application for the seeds and their enthusiasm is as great now as it was then, it is said.

Nearly the entire enrollment of the rural schools has been interested during the last few months in raising vegetables and they are all anxious to be awarded prizes for their efforts.

Those who have been through the rural districts state that some of the results of the work of the youthful farmers have been truly wonderful.

The exhibitions at the more important points in the county will take place as follows: Embarrass, Oct. 14; Pala, Oct. 13; Cook, Oct. 12; Kelsey, Oct. 12; Alborn, Oct. 11; Meadowlands, Oct. 11; Arnold, Oct. 10; Adolph, Oct. 10, and Floodwood, Oct. 9.

The entries at all the schools must consist of five ears of corn, one peck of early potatoes, one peck late potatoes, six table beets, six rutabagas, one head of cabbage and one pumpkin.

On the occasion of the Duluth show at the courthouse on Oct. 20 and 21, the prize winners at the different schoolhouses will compete. The winners will have the satisfaction of knowing that they raised the best produce of the kind for which the prize was given, in the entire county.

This is not a doubtful honor either, for St. Louis county is large and the best of garden produce is grown.

On Oct. 26, 27 and 28 there will be held at St. Paul a state show of garden produced raised by the pupils of rural schools throughout the state. The winners of the local contest will probably ship their exhibits to St. Paul, where they will be judged with the products from other counties throughout the state.

MURDER HEARING ON OCT. 9

State Fails to Get All Its Witnesses Against Tom Fisher.

The preliminary examination of Tom Fisher, the Indian who is charged with the murder of William Brown last August, was continued in police court this morning until Oct. 9, at 10 o'clock.

The state found it impossible to procure all the witnesses. It is claimed that Fisher and Brown had had trouble previously and the theory is that Fisher killed him with the butt of his rifle. Fisher denies his guilt and told the local police that it is a case of spite work. Those who know Fisher state that he has always borne an excellent reputation. Among the witnesses in the court room this morning were Chief Mah-gi-sking and Nah-hena-gi-shig, the father of the defendant. Several others living on the Nett Lake reservation, on which the killing took place, were present.

MACKENZIE IN ST. PAUL

Head of Canadian Northern Has Conference With Hill.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 28.—Sir William Mackenzie, chairman of the board of directors, and F. H. Phipbin, general counsel of the Canadian Northern, with headquarters at Toronto, Can., arrived in St. Paul yesterday from Winnipeg, and spent the morning conferring with Great Northern officials. The visiting officials left for the East in the evening.

Sir Mackenzie and Mr. Phipbin were too busy to be interviewed. They were poring over maps and a number of documents. After they had conferred with L. C. Gilman, assistant to President Hill, for some time, A. H. Hogeland, chief engineer of the Great Northern, arrived on the scene with blue prints and profiles under his arm.

Information was not obtainable as to the discussion, but it is supposed it had to do with the terminals in Winnipeg, where the Canadian Northern, Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Grand Trunk Pacific recently opened a union passenger station.

Hill Leaves to Operate Emerson Line.

The Hill lines have likewise entered into an agreement whereby they shall operate the Canadian Northrn line between Emerson and Winnipeg. This line belongs to the Northern Pacific, which leased it to the Canadian Northern about ten years ago. The Hill lines are to use the line for through business, but the Canadian Northern will continue to handl local business. The placing of the property in the hands of the Hill lines depends on the Canadian parliament giving its sanction to the agreement next month.

In the event that the Canadian reciprocity agreement had gone through, it was reported that the Great Northern planned on building its own line into Winnipeg. Official information is lacking on the subject, but the opinion in railroad circles is that the Hill lines, under the circumstances, will be satisfied with operating the Emerson line.

The Canadian Northern apparently has not been paying much attention to reciprocity. It is building a line into Duluth from Winnipeg, and this fall will operate it, with the Northwestern for Chicago connection. Its coming to the Twin City depends, according to reports, on an arrangement with the Minneapolis & St. Louis.

LAYING RAILS FROM TUNNEL

Work on laying the rails for the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific, the subsidiary of the Canadian Northern from the tunnel at Short Line park to West Duluth was started this morning by a large crew. Owing to the inclemency of the weather not much was accomplished, but as soon as the rain ceases the job will be rushed to completion. H. T. Hazen, chief engineer for the road, estimates that it will be done in about two weeks. The work will require a longer time than was expected earlier in the week.

The work must be done entirely by hand as the big machine used to lay rails north of the tunnel cannot be taken through the tunnel, and therefore has been turned over to the owners by the contractors.

All along the line progress is reported by Mr. Hazen, who returned this morning from Virginia, after a tour of inspection. The many sink holes which the company has encountered between Duluth and Virginia, and which have been serious obstacles to overcome, have practically been done away with, and the roadbed is almost up to the standard. When this work is fully completed, the bed will be one of the best in the northern part of the state.

Several little towns have already sprung up along the road, according to Mr. Hazen, the most progressive of which is Denham Lake, which is said to be in an excellent dairy and agricultural section, with particular attention being paid to the former industry by the settlers of that community.

At West Duluth the roundhouse, machine shop and store building which the company is putting up at Sixty-ninth avenue west and Polk street, are rapidly nearing completion. Good work is also being done on the branch spur from the main line at Forty-fifth avenue west to the bay at Forty-ninth, where the docks are to be built.

RAISE CLASS FREIGHT RATES

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Managers of transcontinental railroads here announced a general increase in all classes of freight rates from Eastern points to the Pacific coast, in line with plans formulated at the time of the hearing by the interstate commerce commission of the inter-mountain rate cases. The new rates will become effective Nov. 1.

The increase will not effect commodity rates, under which the greater part of the freight business is handled. Class rate shipments amount to about 5 per cent of the total traffic. At present the first class rate from all points between New York and the Missouri river to the Pacific coast is $3 per 100 pounds. Under the new schedule the rate from New York will be $3.70; from Pittsburg, $3.60; from Cincinnati, $3.50; from Chicago, $3.40; from the Missouri river, $3; from Colorado, $2.60.

ATTACK FREIGHT RATES FROM ESCANABA, MICH.

Washington, Sept. 28.—All class and commodity freight rates from the Atlantic seaboard and other Eastern territory from Escanaba, Mich., on all Eastern railroads, are attacked as excessive and discriminatory and a 12 to 20 per cent reduction is asked in a petition filed with the Interstate commerce commission. The petition is filed by the business men's association and individual concerns of Escanaba, who ask considerable reparation.

Receivership Dismissed.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 28.—The receivership of the Knoxville, Sevierville & Eastern railroad has been dismissed and W. I. Oliver has acquired the property as practically the sole owner.

VICE HUNTERS IN TROUBLE.

Could Be Sent to Prison for Mailing Report.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Members of the Chicago vice commission, confronted by a possibility of prosecution for technical violation of federal statutes, will appeal to President Taft to assist them out of their predicament. This became known, following a ruling by the postoffice department, which held that the commission's report was unmailable.

The ruling was precipitated by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who had purchased 1,000 copies of the Chicago vice report and ordered them mailed from here. The copies belonging to Mr. Rockefeller were held up in the postoffice as improper matter.

Previous to the Rockefeller incident however, members of the vice commission had mailed hundreds of copies of the report. Hence, under the ruling of the postoffice department, they are guilty of sending improper matter through the mails.

The penalty for this action is imprisonment not exceeding five years or a maximum fine of $3,000, or both.

Among the members of the commission are Former United States District Attorney Edwin W. Sims and Dean Walter T. Sumner of Peter and Paul Episcopal cathedral. The commission contends that because of its aim and use, the report is not improper matter.

RIGG DISAPPOINTED BY CANADIAN ELECTION.

William Rigg of Minneapolis is in the city today. Mr. Rigg stated that the failure of the Canadian government to endorse reciprocity was a decided disappointment to many of the large business firms of the Northwest, as the tariff reduction would have meant an increase of the field of many of the firms that now confine their business to the North only as far as the Canadian line.

"Reciprocity would have opened up a field for many of the firms in Duluth and Minneapolis, and would have almost doubled the field of activities," said Mr. Riggs. "It would have meant a big thing for our people, and I know of many other business men who were planning on taking immediate advantage of the letting down of the tariff barrier."

Suspect Arrested.

Bismarck, N. D., Sept. 28.—An Italian believed to be Ginadi, who killed his countryman, Ferrari at Mandan, Sunday, is held here for Mandan officers. His arrest followed a "tip" given by Lou Gallagher, a railroad conductor, who found him among his passengers. The suspect carried a revolver and his face bears the marks of a fistic battle. Ferrari was rich and respected. He was preparing for a trip to Italy when killed.

CHARITIES PLAN WORK

Representatives of Twenty-Two Organizations Talk Over Winter Relief.

Twenty-two local charitable societies were represented at the general meeting for representatives of charitable societies held yesterday afternoon at Memorial hall, the courthouse.

At least a half dozen churches were represented, the charitable departments and the different women's clubs sending delegates.

While the meeting was most informal and was called mostly for the purpose of getting the charity workers together that plans for the coming winter's work might be discussed, those who attended feel that the meeting will result in an immense amount of good.

It was in the nature of a get-together meeing that each society might known what the other societies are planning to do. Last year the work was not evenly divided among the societies. This year the work to be done and the districts are better known. The districts will be divided up so as to equalize the work to a greater extent.

Representatives of the different societies told of what the societies are prepared to do this winter. Many of them, encouraged by the start of last year, are preparing to devote more time than ever to the work this year.

The meeting was called by Courtenay Dinwiddie, secretary of the Associted Charities, some time ago. Every society was invited to send representatives and all others not affiliated with any particular society, but interesfed in the work, were also invited to attend.

But few plans were made. The workers simply got together informally and talked over the mistakes made during the past year and planned for the next season. At the meeting's close, those in attendance were enthusiastic over the work for the coming winter and were well pleased with what had been done under the supervision of the Associated Charities during the first year of its existence.

Many of those who talked informally of charitable work in Duluth had nothing but words of praise for the Associated Charities and its officers.

Work Systematized.

Since its organization the work of the city has been systematized. There is no confusion and the making of paupers by extending too much help, has been eliminated. The policy of the Associated Charities in the proper handling of the different kinds of cases was enthusiastically indorsed.

Rabbi Lefkovits introduced a resolution which called for the different socities to help the Associated Charities financially in its charitable work Mr. Lefkovits stated that as the Associated Charities is a central body or clearing houes for charitable work in Duluth, and labors for and with the other socleties, doing much of the investigating work, he thought that it would be no more than right to help that body with money. The other members thought this a good plan and adopted it. No set amount has been fixed. This matter has been left to the societies themselves. They will give in such amounts as they can.

Some of the members thought that the Associated Charities should attend all the details of helping those outside the districts covered by the different societies. Others thought that with the work of investigation carried on so extensively by the society in the city, this added work would mean too much.

A feature of the meeting was the examination by those present of a map which had been prepared by Mr. Dinwiddie and which by the sticking of black pins on the streets and avenues showed where the charitable cases of the last year were located.

There were exactly thirteen cases east of Tenth avenue east while from Tenth avenue to West Duluth there were several hundred.

It was an unusual way of showing the work of the charitable societies of the city and was very interesting to those who inspected it.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH

A Harmless Remedy, Made from Garden Sage, Restores Color to Gray Hair

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which, unfortunately, are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hairs, however, are not always an indication of advancing age, for many people have gray hairs quite early in life. Of course, it is unnatural, and indicates that there is something wrong with the individual, and that Nature needs assistance in correcting the trouble. The same is true of hair that is constantly falling out and becoming thinner every day. If everything is right with Nature, the hair, even in comparatively elderly people, should be long, thick and glossy, without even a streak of gray.

The ideal assistant to Nature in restoring and preserving the hair is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a clean and wholesome dressing for daily use. It not only removes dandruff, but strengthens weak, thin and falling hair and promotes its growth. A few applications will restore faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Get a bottle to-day, and let it do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Man Believed to Have Secreted Himself in Store Before Closing.

One of the cleverest and most daring thefts which has been committed in Duluth for months, took place late Monday night or early Tuesday morning, when a small box of assorted jewelry valued at $500 was stolen from the Glass Block Store at Second avenue west and Superior street.

The police believe that the man who did the job hid somewhere inside the store when it was closed Monday evening and awaited his opportunity to extract the jewelry from the show case and make his escape. The door on Michigan street was found swinging open by Patrolman Jesse about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, but the theft was not discovered until after the firm had resumed business after 8 o'clock in the forenoon. As the door was barred from the inside and could not been opened from the street, the authorities state that the thief must either have hidden inside or gained entrance through one of the upper story windows. Not much weight is given to the latter theory, as it is believed that the burglar would have been discovered getting inside, as he would have had to use a ladder.

Four Men in Store.

One of the remarkable features of the theft is that four men were working inside the store during the night. They are employed steadily to do janitor work, sweeping and straightening up after the day's business. Not one of them heard the faintest sound to indicate that a fifth person was in the store that night. When the policeman looked them up after having found the door open they stated that they had been working in that vicinity about an hour earlier, or in the neighborhood of 2 o'clock, and that the door was closed and barred when they left for another part of the building.

It appears that the jewelry in the show case had not been placed in a safe at night but that the case has been locked by means of a small key, which was secreted in a hiding place nearby. When the clerks appeared in the morning the case was locked and the key in its place as usual. But the small case of jewelry, probably the most expensive in the show case, had been removed. The thief must have known of its hiding place or been informed of it by some one familiar with the premises.

Man Arrested on Suspicion.

The police were notified and an investigation started at once. Tuesday night Walter Lyell, colored, was arrested in Superior on suspicion. He was brought to this city yesterday and arraigned in police court in the afternoon on a charge of vagrancy, nothing definitely connecting him with the robbery having been discovered. He entered a plea of guilty to the charge and got $100 or thirty days in the county jail. He went over the hill. Lyell admitted that he had been around for some time doing no work. He said that he had been making enough money to live by participating in gambling games on the lake shore.

Monday afternoon Lyell was in the Glass Block twice and each time he visited the jewelry department. He told the clerk that he wanted a bloodstone ring for his brother and had her show him some of the stock, but he seemed to desire something which the store did not carry. His description was given to the police and he was arrested in Superior.

While he is serving his sentence for vagrancy the police will continue their investigation of his movements the night of the robbery, and it is also probable that other arrests will be made in connection with the case.

BOATS BRAVE STIFF GALE

Vessels Leave Harbor in Face of Heavy Northeaster.

Despite the unfavorable conditions of the weather, many of the vessels loading at the Head of the Lakes left the port this morning and afternoon. The outlook this morning was not very bad, but about noon with the wind blowing from the northeast and a little rain, it had every indication of the old-time severe northeasters, for which Lake Superior is noted.

Yet in the face of these conditions many masters prepared to sail and as a result the Union Towing & Wrecking company was short on tugs, for orders were coming in fast for assistance to clear the harbor. All the boats that went out up to a late hour this afternoon, were loaded with ore.

IMPROVEMENT IS NOT WARRANTED.

Lack of prospective commerce sufficient to justify the expenses for improvement to Cornucopia Harbor, Wis., is assigned as the reason for an unfavorable report on the proposed improvement submitted by Lieut. Col. Francis R. Shunk to the war department. An investigation was made by the local branch of the United States Army corps which brought out the true conditions, showing that the commerce is small and that there is little chance of any increase.

Ore Shipments for 1911.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 28.—That ore shipments from Minnesota, Wisconsin and Northern Michigan in 1911 will aggregate approximately 31,000,000 tons, 6,000,000 tons more than expected two months ago, was the opinion expressed today by J. P. Funk, clerk of mineral lands in the state auditor's office. Increased shipments in September and prospects for their continuance next month are the basis of the estimate.

This rate, however, will fall behind the records of 1910 when 43,442,397 tons were shipped and 1909, when 42,386,869 tons were sent out. Last year 60 per cent of the output came from the Minnesota mines, 30,404,937 tons, but it is thought that this year's shipments will not be much in excess of 22,500,000 tons, or 75 per cent as much as last year.

LUMBER BARGE SPRINGS A LEAK AND SINKS.

Calumet, Mich., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The lumber laden barge Exile became water logged and sank just inside the breakwater at Lake Superior and Portage ship canal late last night while in tow of the Steamer Homer Warren. The boat was bound from Duluth to Saginaw. She sprang a leak fifty miles out and reached the canal only after desperate efforts on the part of the Warren. The crew was saved without difficulty as the lake was calm.

AMERICAN SHIPS CARRY THIRD OF TOTAL.

American ships carried a little less than one-third of the grain shipped from Fort William and Port Arthur during the year ending Aug. 31, 1911. They moved 26,117,073 bushels of grain against 59,984,520 bushels in Canadian boats. It is predicted the American tonnage will handle 30,000,000 bushels out of these ports during the present year.

Seventy-eight American boats, with an average capacity of 215,000 bushels each, found cargoes at the two ports while eighty-five Canadian bottoms, with an average capacity of 98,000 bushels each, were employed to move the grain carried by native tonnage.

ARE WOMEN GROWING BALD?

"The rapidly growing demand for hair goods indicates decidedly that full heads of natural hair are becoming scarcer every day," says Mae Martyn, noted beauty specialist.

"Only about one woman in a hundred seems to understand that alkali, as found in soaps and most shampoos is the deadliest enemy to the hair. It practically eats the life out of the hair, causing it to become brittle, split at the ends and fall out.

"To keep the scalp clean, healthy and free of dandruff and the hair soft, bright and growing, shampoo once in two weeks with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. The hair will dry quickly without streaking, and there is no shampoo like this one for promoting hair-health and preventing baldness."—New York News.

Two Boats Take Grain.

Two more vessels left the port yesterday carrying cargoes of grain for the lower ports. These were the Thomas Adams and the H. W. Smith. One other boat is now loading and expects to leave tomorrow morning.

Thin People Heed This.

If you are too thin; if you are pale and sallow; if what you eat seems not to strengthen you; if your lips and cheeks are colorless, it is because your blood is deficient in red corpuscles and disease can easily overcome you as you have no reserve strength or nourishment to uphold you.

A pharmaceutical product, called 3 grain hypo-nuclane tablets, is much prescribed for these conditions, and if taken for several months, rapidly increases weight and improves the color. Buy in sealed package of any well stocked apothecary shop.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

Next Saturday night will end the regular dance season of the Duluth Boat club. With the regular dancing party at the hall of the main house the summer series of dances arranged for the members of the club will come to an end. More dancers than ever have attended these informal weekly parties this year and the dancing room has been crowded at each dance. La Brosse's orchestra has furnished most enjoyable programs of dance music during the season and the music has been one of the particular charms of the series.

Several of the members, however, feel that they have not had enough of the parties and dancing for this year, and they have arranged to give a subscription dance for the members of the club next week at the Oatka branch house on Wednesday evening. The house at the Oatka branch has been chosen because it can be heated and the main house cannot be, so those planning the party thought the dancers would be more comfortable at the branch house. Music will be furnished by the pianist, who played there all summer for the regular nightly dances and a fee will be charged each member just sufficient to cover the expenses of heating, lighting and music for the evening as the fund provided by the club for the summer dances has been spent. If this party is a success a regular series of these post-season parties will be arranged for.

The Spirit Lake branch is receiving many visitors both for picnic suppers and lunches and hunting parties. An unusually large number of the members have visited the house at this pretty branch since the regular season there ended, and the reports of real game bagged there this year have attracted the hunters. Usually it is all hunting and no game near the club house, but this year good success has been reported and the woman too have had a hand in getting the game. At least so they say.

It is the intention of the club to continue the good work of holding open meetings with special programs for the purpose of raising money with which to buy books for the library, and the "City Beautiful" campaign which was started last year, and which resulted so successfully at the close of last season, will be repeated again this year.

BIG ADVANCE SALE.

Duluth Contributes Nearly $4,000 for Musical Events.

That the enjoyment of music in Duluth this season is to be more widespread and general than ever before in the history of the city is assured from the tremendous advance sale for the series of musical events planned by the Duluth committee, Horace W. Keyner, T. W. Hugo and Stephen H. Jones. The advance subscriptions to date is approaching the $4,000 mark and it is expected that this sum will be reached before the list is closed next Monday.

The advantages for the advance subscribers are many. Tickets for the entire course are reserved at a material discount from the total price for the individual concerts; the tickets are mailed to the subscribers doing away with the weary waiting in line; and good seats are assured for every one of the splendid attractions.

This year more advance subscriptions for the lower priced seats have been received than ever before, and this is one of the most delightful and encouraging of the features of the season's work.

The first concert in the series will be given Oct. 13 by the Alice Neilsen-Riccardo Martin Opera company. This concert company is headed by two of the most interesting artists before the public, and they have surrounded themselves with a group of artists that makes certain some very beautiful ensemble singing. Alice Neilsen's interesting career is known to the American public for she was secure in popular favor in light opera and at the height of her career in that form of art before she deserted to study for the grand opera stage. She has won a permanent place for herself there. Riccardo Martin has just returned from London where he won new triumphs singing the Sheriff in Puenni's opera "The Girl of the Golden West." Critics are commenting upon the fact that a foreign country had the honor of hearing this virile and splendid young artist in this American role, for the first time.

Advance subscriptions for the course of six concerts which include beside the one named a song recital by the great Bonci, three concerts in November by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and a song recital by Mme. Frances Alda, may be sent for the entire course or for any single concert. The subscription list will be closed Monday. Subscriptions may be mailed to Horace W. Reyner or sent by either telephone.

MRS. EDGAR LOYHED TO HEAD STATE WOMEN'S FEDERATION

Miss Margaret Evans to Be General Secretary—Address By President—Representative Spooner Talks on State Training School.

Sauk Center, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the Women's Federation meeting this morning, Mrs. J. L. Washburn of Duluth helped to quiet a terrific storm sustaining Mrs. C. G. Higbee, president, in ruling out new nominations from the Sixth district, which includes Minneapolis, where a quarrel is on for president of the district. Yesterday, even the ballot box was under guard and carried from place to place by officials.

For the Eighth district, which includes Duluth, the officers will be reelected, Mrs. C. C. McCarthy of Grand Rapids remaining president.

The following delegates are here from Duluth: Miss Harriet Carrick, Lester Park Literary club; Mrs. J. M. Burns and Mrs. W. C. Whipple, Saturday club; Mrs. O. A. Oredson and Mrs. P. L. Devoist, Twentieth Century club; Mrs. J. L. Washburn is the guest of Mrs. Fannie French Morse at the home school for girls. Mrs. R. W. Hitchcock of Hibbing is here. They are enthusiastic over the meetings and Mrs. Washburn said yesterday that the home school for girls was one of the great institutions in America. The Duluth delegates were taken over the site for the new buildings by Mr. Nichols, landscape architect.

There are 226 clubs in the state in 100 towns, with 14,896 members. Twenty-one clubs joined this year with 1,400 members. In the informal ballot, Mrs. Edgar H. Loyhed got 145 for president and Mrs. Robert Lee of Fairbault, 130 for corresponding secretary. For the geenral federation secretary, Miss Margaret J. Evans of Northfield, got 120 and Mrs. Kenney of Minneapolis 5. For historian, Mrs. M. H. McKusick of Stillwater got 139. Dodge Center has asked to rthe next convention.

President's Annual Address.

In her annual address as president, delivered this morning, Mrs. Chester G. Higbee of St. Paul said:

"It has been said that women do their work three times—beforehand, at the time and afterwards. We do ours first in conference, second in fact, but we violate the traditions by omitting the third. We acknowledge the temptation to review our mutual interests during four years of intense activity. It would be a pleasure indeed to trace the development step by step; the natural and lovely growth in plan and purpose which has accompanied the growth in membership; the merging of certain committees and the creation of new ones; the various changes in fiber and tissue which have been necessary to render a great organization elastic and a fit instrument for the working out of great plans. But this federation has not reached the age of reminiscence, it pulsates with the hopes of youth; it is robust, vigorous and presses forward toward the door of opportunity. It may not linger to survey yesterday while clamorous labor knocks with its thousand hands at the golden gate of the morning.'

"It is again a temptation to pause and tell you what you have meant to a life like mine; what magic you have brought sometimes by your quick sympathy, your unvarying loyalty and our ready co-operation. But again I forbear for in the ethics of a great organization there is no place for personalities.

"Your success is owing in large degree to the fact that you have held the individual in abeyance, and have given to your attention to the general good. Believe, however, that in the difficult adjustment to the average life and interest, which must follow retirement from an office like this, I shall, like Mary, keep and ponder these things in my heart. May all your presidents be as blest as I have been in the relations and the associations of this office."

Value of Committees.

After urging the importance of district meetings, which are the power of the Federation, Mrs. Higbee said:

"A club is only half a club before it has committees, reaching out like tentacles—feeling, feeling for the needs of the community and co-operating with other forces. If you have not tried it, connect now with the real life of the community through appointed committees and see how it will equalize the circulation and keep the head cool for your literary work.

"To one member of a club, the very broadest and clearest, should be referred the legislative letters. Do not think if you have sent one letter to one legislator you have reached the limit, and that further effort is intrusion. He does not think so; if he is so benighted he must be taught the truth. If your legislator is right he wants your letters to flie away until the bill is reached and then he reads and gets the sentiments of his community. Don't leave him to the interests of the selfish interests; they are busy, you may be certain.

"The first duty of organized womanhood must be toward the children—especially the unfortunate and the neglected. About this there can be no conflict, no difference of opinion. Right laws and proper schools are a necessity. The greatest danger to a commonwealth lies in the neglects of these requisities; the greatest danger to the individual herself lies in disregarding the mother instinct. 'A woman who is a mother only to her own children is not a mother,' says George McDonald, 'she is only a woman who has borne children.' And is it supposed that the mother-heart of this Federation beats only for girls? There is as tender and abiding interest for the boys of the state as for the girls. Women cannot look at their own boys and feel indifferent; nor can we fail to remember that boys are to be the future citizens of the state. The splendid privilege that the girls of the Home school now enjoy are just good enough for the brothers of the same families.

Suffrage and Liquor Traffic.

"While this federation has not yet definitely taken up equal suffrage there is some so reluctant as to doubt that the ballot waits only the psychological moment to appear in Minnesota for the use of womankind. Not only is the club movement fitting members for the use of life, but, as Jane Addams believes, it is necessary to the intelligent care of the children of the state. Personally I have long believed that every organization of women should wage unceasing war against that father of all evil, the liquor traffic. It destroys homes, health and happiness. It peoples our institutions, and we spend our lives undoing or striving impotently to undo the evil it wreaks upon the weak and the defenceless.

"Surely we are too intelligent to go on forever dealing with results. Hasten the day when we shall deal directly with causes, looking evil in the eye with a fearless and searching gaze, whatever revolting form it may assume. We are acquiring strength which will render it unnecessary for us to sit hopelessly by and view the waste and wreckage of humanity thrown upon the shores by this or any other base or wicked system.

"In Wisconsin, just over the line, there are, I am told, two women upon the board of control and two upon the board of regents of the university. That the affairs of these corresponding boards are in Minnesota so perfectly well managed, with such exceptional business ability, has nothing to do with the principle of placing women upon the boards. The same may be said of the Minnesota state board of visitors of institutions. Prominent men in the state will soon recognize the justice of it and see to it that women are placed upon boards to supervise the female inmates, who constitute about half of the population of the institutions."

"Now then to prove women's ability and devotion to this extended housekeeping and our interest in the welfare of our kind."

Deplore Hygienic Talks.

Much dissatisfaction is being expressed by club women and the Sauk Center population in general over the public meeting arranged by the federation convention for a discussion of social hygiene and installation in public schools of a systematic course of instruction as part of the curriculum. The meeting was held in the Sauk Center opera house and was attended by more than 100 boys and girls, besides several hundred men and women. Complaints have been made that the talks given by those on the program were too frank, and the sentiment of the club women in general is against the continuance of this method of giving publicity to the moral needs of the country, and also against the education of their children along the lines proposed.

Yesterday the session was held at the home school for girls. Mrs. Fannie French Morse, superintendent, acted as hostess, escorted the delegates through the school and explained the various departments. The club women are much interested in the work of the school and in its furnishing and equipment. Last Christmas they furnished a phonograph which is still used a great deal, and they hope to be able to provide an adequate organ for the chapel as soon as it is built. Many of the individual clubs are planning on gifts of furniture and decorations for the school, which is already tastefully and artistically fitted up.

Luncheon was served at noon at the school for more than 300 delegates, and there followed a symposium by those who have helped in establishing the school. Addresses were delivered by Mrs. Higbee, Miss Adams and Mrs. J. L. Washburn of Duluth. Supt. Randall of the state reformatory at St. Paul, asked the federation to begin work for an institution like this for women as for girls. He asked for mottoes for the reformatory from delegates.

Address By L. C. Spooner.

Representative L. C. Spooner of Morris was the principal speaker at last night's session of the federation. The greater portion of his remarks dealt with the state training school. He recited the history of that institution and, referring to the establishment of the home school for girls at Sauk Center, as a result of the work of the women of the Federated Clubs Minnesota, he said:

"Like brands from the burning, so to say, referring to the most regretable, even deplorable, conditions clearly proved to exist in the administration of—or rather, in the maladministration of—the school at Red Wing, the noble, intelligent, high-minded, patriotic, cultured and courageous women of the Federated Clubs of Minnesota, successfully using the legislature of 1907 as their effective and legitimate instrument for the purpose, snatched the girls from the Red Wing institution, and its behind-the-times methods and views for dealing with its unfortunate infant inmates, and safely placed them in their magnificent home school for girls at Sauk Center with its beautiful surroundings, in its pure and healthy atmosphere, in a community suited to the encouragement and development of the highest aims and purposes of those who have shown themselves possessed of the purest and greatest interest in the welfare of the girls who are the inhabitants thereof.

"Nothing new, that is to say, nothing really new to the women of the Federated Clubs of Minnesota, in the matter of unfortunate conditions existing in the administration of the school at Red Wing, was developed during the late quite too long drawn out and over-tiresome trial before our state board of control intended to get at the real fitness or unfitness of the present immediate administrator of the affairs of that school and it may be said, in the strictest confidence but upon the most reliable authority, that the evidence to establish the condition, worst of all known to exist there, relating not immediately to Mr. Whittier but to those who are his subordinates, was either not called out during the hearing or, if called out, and given, was not published.

"It is of little or no consequence, as related to the real future of the Red Wing school, what decision is rendered by our state board of control as to the fitness or unfitness of Mr. Whittier to be continued as the immediate administrator of the affairs of that school for what may be termed, for want of more accurate characterization, Whittierism at that school, and all that that term may imply, as related to that school, is to be deemed relegated to the past, has already been, in the court of public opinion, tried and adjudged condemned.

As to Mr. Whittier.

"Mr. Whittier, by all who know him, personally, I understand, is greatly loved and admired—as a man. That he is high-minded, big-hearted, true-hearted, intelligent, honest, in every way upright, may be taken to be admitted; but that he is to be regarded as an administrator of quasi-penal institutions whose services in the present day and age are to be sought after or continued in present employment, is not to be admitted—chiefly arising out of the fact that he is utterly without qualification to select suitable subordinates or effectively oversee and suitably direct their services and gauge their conduct towards the inmates.

"Out in the Rocky mountains where the fir trees grow thick and tall and clean of limb, so thick you can hardly pass between them, so tall that you can scarcely see the tops of them, so clean of limb that from many of them timber a foot square and over a hundred feet long may be sawed containtaining no defect, there is occasionally to be found a still standing fir—absolutely dead to further growth. That is Mr. Whittier—a dead fir standing in the forest of living, progressive, humane administrators of quasi-penal institutions.

"Equally as much as the best citizens of Minnesota—including the women of the Federated Clubs of Minnesota—are interested in an administration of all the other affairs of this state known to be fearless, businesslike, progressive, efficient, economical, and aggressively honest, in short, in the interest of all the people, and that sort of an administration of the affairs of this state, the people are about determined to have at the earliest feasible date, are the same citizens deeply interested in the attainment, at the earliest possible date, of a humane administration of the state training school for boys at Red Wing, of high quality and efficiency, and those who are standing behind and defending the present administration of that institution or who are either defenders thereof or apologists therefor, including the attorney for Mr. Whittier, will do well to quickly learn, and sense the fact, that a future legislature of this state, quite likely to be in harmony with the present day thought as to what are humane and uplifting methods of administration of quasi-penal institutions, may surely be expected to deal justly, fairly and even liberally with the future of the Red Wing school, and its already overcrowded capacity, provided the citizens of Red Wing afford such legislature evidence of the fact that they are not hopelessly committed to the continuation of an administration of the school entirely out-of-date and obviously behind the times.

Not One Reclaimed.

"About all the evidence offered in defense of Mr. Whittier, and about all claims made in argument in his behalf—otherwise than assaulting persons in no way responsible for conditions existing at the Red Wing school—necessarily tended to establish the fact that there is about the completest development of criminal tendencies and criminally vicious conduct under the administration of Mr. Whittier and nothing whatever in the way of development of good conduct or good conditions—not an infant reclaimed from his vicious ways—not a good home secured for any inmate of the institution—nothing of reformation, nothing of reclamation, or if there was, evidence to that effect was not published, or claims made to that effect, if there were, were not published; and yet, it must be admitted, that a real good showing of children reclaimed from evil ways, placed in homes secured for them likely to result in their permanent reclamation, would have much diluted the effect of the awful evidence given establishing the brutality inherent in the Whittier administration — chiefly chargeable, it must be admitted, to the unfortunate selection of his subordinates or to his unwise selection of most unsuitable helpers for his subordinates.

"Little need be said of the assault made upon the women of the Federated Clubs of Minnesota by the attorney for Mr. Whittier, and nothing of the assault made on certain other persons able to defend themselves, for the women of the Federated Clubs of Minnesota have an established record of intelligent and patriotic usefulness and for high-minded consideration of all that is involved in the unfortunate Red Wing situation which, in the judgment of the general public, will put them quite beyond the violent, and causeless, and indefensible assault. Equally without reason, equally without cause, equally without truth and equally baseless and tactless was the assault made upon the same occasion—on the superintendent of the Minnesota home school for girls.

"It is quite likely that it will be advisable for the women, for at any rate a considerable time yet, to limit their activities to the aggressive advocacy of certain propositions—certain legislative needs if you please to put it that way—and should you undertake general advocacy of and general intervention in all public or political propositions or questions, it is likely that you would or might fail to accomplish the results desired.

Reciprocity In Legislation.

"You should, however, not overlook the fact that reciprocity in matters of legislation, that is to say, the practice of it is very potent to secure legislation not otherwise obtainable.

"For example, let us say that the Federated Clubs of Minnesota have decided to undertake to secure the enactment of a law which shall invest the women of Minnesota with the right to vote and to hold office.

"Starting out then to secure that result, they first consider, or should first consider, who are members of the Minnesota legislature and who of them are known to be influential and effective working members of the next legislature — and whether they are members whose influence and whose effectiveness is of the healthy and commendable sort—or otherwise.

"Having determined these points, you can to at least some extent determine somethin~ of the important legislative measures likely to be introduced by them in he next legislative session—and if you believe them good measures, why should you not, then, interest yourselves therein and thereby interest the members introducing them in what you want in the way of legislation or, on the other hand, if you come to believe a measure not meritorious, why not interest yourself in opposition thereto?

"One illustration will do as well as forty. In the next legislative session, reapportionment, income tax, railroad regulation, increase of railroad taxes, internal development of waterways, and several other legislative propositions that might be easily mentioned, are reasonably certain to be up for consideration. You can easily figure out about who or the members of the present who are likely to be members of the next legislature, will be either for or against legislation relative to the subjects mentioned.

"Take then for illustration—increase of railroad taxes—taxes levied on railroad properties. Study that subject enough to enable you to know whether or not you want to commit the influence of the Federated Clubs of Minnesota to the enactment of legislation of that nature and if you find that that will be right, then why not join your strength to the strength of the advocates thereof on condition that they will join their strength with your strength to secure for you the legislation which you determine you want?"

The Nursery

Food for Three-Month Baby.

When the child reaches the age of three months, it is time to add a cereal of some kind to the food, either barley or oatmeal are best to use.

When making these gruels it is much easier to use the flour than the grain. Barley gruel is made from the flour by rubbing up one teaspoonful of it with a little cold water, then stirring this into a pint of boiling water, adding a pinch of salt and allowing it to boil for fifteen minutes; it should be strained if at all lumpy.

Oatmeal gruel is made in the same way, only using two teaspoonfuls of the flour instead of one. If it is impossible to obtain the flour the grain may be used, taking two tablespoonfuls of the barley or three of the oatmeal, and allowing it to soak in cold water over night.

The next morning add one quart of cold water and boil steadily for four hours, down to one pint, then strain through muslin. Gruel should be made fresh each day and kept on ice.

Use barley gruel unless the child is inclined to be constipated, then use oatmeal.

To make up the food skim from off the top of a quart bottle of milk six ounces of cream, then pour off six ounces of milk; now add twelve ounces of water in which is dissolved three teaspoonfuls of granulated sugar, or six of milk sugar; then add twelve ounces of barley or oatmeal gruel, a pinch of salt and a pinch of bicarbonate of soda.

The child should have eight meals in twenty-four hours, of three ounces and a half to four ounces and a half at each meal. He should be fed regularly every three hours up to 10 p. m., then have one meal at 2 or 3 a. m., and nothing more until 7 a. m.

A Child's Bed.

A child should never face the window when in bed, if possible, for the morning light on the eyes is bad for him. Venetian blinds are the best for the night nursery, as the air can be admitted when they are down and the light be excluded at the same time.

It is a good plan when the window is an ordinary sash one to push it down from the top and merely hang a dark blind or curtain over, letting one end hang down outside.

The Kitchen

Chocolate Caramels.

Dissolve a pound of loaf sugar in half a pint of milk, add half a pint of cream, pour into a clean saucepan, place over a gentle heat, and bring slowly to the boil.

In the meantime, dissolve three ounces of vanilla chocolate, previously ground, in as little hot water as possible, and as soon as the milk syrup boils stir it in and boil until a little tested on a cold plate hardens rapidly. Pour onto an oiled tin; when cold cut into squares and wrap in wax caramel paper.

Dainty Way of Cooking Eggs.

Take two or three small onions, chop fine, and add about a teaspoonful each of thyme, sage and parsley. Pepper and salt to taste. Mix.

Place in a shallow dish, and add a piece of butter about the size of a walnut and place in hot oven until fairly cooked.

Next, break two or three eggs over the mixture, being careful not to break the yolks. Allow to remain in oven for three or four minutes, when it will be ready to serve.

WORKMAN FALLS FROM BRIDGE

Drop of Thirty Feet Likely to Be Fatal to Charles Peterson.

Charles Peterson, 46 years old, a bridge carpenter, fell about thirty feet this morning, shortly before noon, while at work on the new Oneota street bridge. He was seriously injured about the back and his condition is critical. He was taken to the Duluth hospital, Central avenue and Bristol street.

Peterson was working on a cross beam on top of the bridge and while attempting to change his position, he slipped and fell. The rainy weather is thought to have been partly responsible for the accident, for the water made the beams slippery.

Peterson alighted on his back across a timber and was picked up by fellow workers who called an ambulance and had him taken to the hospital. Besides the injuries to his back, Peterson also sustained a scalp wound and other injuries about his chest.

Peterson is employed by the railroad contractors who are building the new bridge at Oneota street and Fiftieth avenue west. The new structure is being constructed for the city by the Canadian Northern road.

Peterson has a family residing at 121 North Thirty-second avenue west.

POLICE CALLED TO EJECT DRUNKEN MAN.

When Stanislaus Androwsky, who lives with his parents at 205 South Sixty-third avenue west, came home last evening, he was so intoxicated, it is claimed, that he forgot all about the old saying that "blood is thicker than water," and started to abuse the family.

He is alleged to have called his mother several unsavory names and attached to his father a few rather impolite appellations. This angered the father and in the fracas which ensued, Stan kicked a hole through the kitchen door and broke a few dishes, the father asserts.

John Androwsky, the parent, finally called for the police, but before the bluecoats arrived, Stan decamped. The father has threatened the son with arrest should he show up.

CHICKENS ARE TARGETS FOR BOYS' SLINGSHOTS.

Gust Warren, living at 105 South Fifty-eighth avenue west, yesterday, declared to the police that he absolutely refused to have his chickens made targets of for the sling shots of neighborhood school boys.

Warren asked police surveillance for his hen yard. He said occasions had been numerous when school boys had shot at his fowls and in many cases some of the hens had been crippled. He claimed that he had remonstrated with the youngsters, but to no avail.

Most of the trouble, he asserted, came from youngsters attending the Irving school. The alleged shooting generally takes place on Saturdays and after school hours, he said.

PEEPING TOMS CARRY LADDER

Flee Leaving Ladder Behind Them When Seen By Woman.

A small thing like the difference in height between the first and second stories of a modern house did not in the least bother two West Duluth young men of the Peeping Tom variety last evening.

They were equipped with a 20-foot ladder. Owing to their untimely discovery and the fear of detection, they were, in their haste, obliged to leave the ladder on the premises of W. E. Kern, 4309 West Sixth street.

Mrs. Kern, about 11 o'clock last evening, telephoned to the West Duluth police station that she had been frightened by seeing two men peering in a second-story window. Sergt. Barber and Patrolman Peterson went to the scene, but the intruders had fled before they arrived.

Mrs. Kern declared that she had heard their footsteps as they were running way from the house. Mr. Kern had retired and there was no one about at the time to give chase to them. The Kerns are ahead one ladder by the experience.

SEPTEMBER STRAWBERRIES NEAR NEW DULUTH.

Further evidence that the country about Duluth is one of the best in the state in an agricultural way was furnished yesterday when P. Cusick, Frank Tinkan and Gus Virgutz stated that they had picked ripe strawberries near New Duluth. Although not as large as some which were found during the strawberry season, they asserted that they were red and juicy.

The Fairmont Tigers entertained last evening at another of the series of weekly dancing parties at Wade's hall. Blewitt's orchestra furnished the music.

Fire of unknown origin last evening partially destroyed the residence of H. Bevier, Oneota street. The loss was about $250. Fire Company No. 8 responded to the alarm.

Watch repairing. Hurst, West Duluth.

Mrs. Adolph Kittelson of North Fifty-ninth avenue has as her guest, her sister, Mrs. John Swanson and daughter, Selma, of Red Wing, Minn.

The fourth and last quarterly conference of the year for Merritt Memorial M. E. church will be held this evening at the church study, Forty-sixth avenue west and Halifax street. It is expected that at this time, the congregation will pass a resolution asking the district conference to return Rev. F. E. Stidd to the local charge for another year. Rev. E. K. Copper will preside.

SUPERIOR COUNTY FAIR IS WELL ATTENDED

Although Handicapped, Association Has Good Exhibit —Baby Show.

The Douglas county fair opened yesterday afternoon in the old Blaine school gymnasium building and was attended by several hundred people.

The vegetable display was especially good. Pumpkins weighing 75 pounds, cabbages averaging 45 pounds and corn stalks 12 feet high, all Douglas county products, were exhibited, as well as other vegetables of remarkable size.

The arts and crafts display on the second floor also attracted attention. The exhibit includes work entered by former Superior school children in the way of mechanical drawing and painting and is in charge of F. H. Irons and Miss Jennie Rhenstrand.

The fair association is handicapped by the lack of room and the loss of the cattle and stock exhibits. This afternoon the feature is the baby show. Many entries have been made and the competition is keen.

CITY'S VALUATION HAS INCREASE OF $1,000,000.

NOT IN FAVOR OF A PARDON

County Attorney Will Not Advocate Release of Algot Johnson.

County Attorney Norton's recommendations to the state pardon board in the matter of Algot Johnson, now serving a 30-year term in the state penitentiary for the murder of a Duluth policeman, will not help the 16-year-old boy's chances to be pardoned.

A communication was received today at the county attorney's office from the pardon board stating that Young Johnson's case would come up before that body for a hearing on Oct. 9.

County Attorney Norton believes that the boy should serve the sentence out, and if any recommendations are made to the pardon board, they will be to that effect.

The boy is said to be afflicted with tuberculosis.

OWSLEY WILL CASE NOV. 1

On Nov. 1 the matter of the Owsley estate will come up for hearing before Judge S. W. Gilpin of the probate court.

Dr. Frederick H. Owsley wants the estate closed up that he may have his share of the property. The executors claim that the estate is in such shape that it cannot be closed up at once. The property, which is valued at about $1,000,000, consists of range mining properties and was the estate of the late Mrs. Marie Owsley, who was formerly Mrs. Marie Boeing.

As Dr. Owsley did not accumulate the fortune Mrs. Owsley thought that $35,000 and $10,000 yearly was all he was entitled to. He is not satisfied and wants a full one-third. In her will she said that she would prefer that he get nothing if he fought the terms of the will.

As he has violated the terms of the will by protesting it, the next hearing will be for the purpose of determining what his rightful share of the estate is, if he is entitled to any at all.

JOHNSON-WELLS FIGHT IS OFF

VETERAN MAIL CARRIERS.

Two in Ishpeming Twenty Years in the Service.

Ishpeming, Mich., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Henry Williams, and Joseph Gunville, who entered the employ of the United States postal department when the free mail delivery service was inaugurated in Ishpeming, have been on the job for twenty years, lacking a few days. They began work on Oct. 1, 1891, and they are the only two of the original six carriers now delivering mail in the city. Thomas Sullivan, who was the first substitute, and who began service as a regular carrier a few months after the free delivery work started, will celebrate his twentieth anniversary on the first of February.

The carriers are planning some sort of function in honor of the twentieth anniversary, though it has not yet been decided what the nature of the affair will be.

LACK THREE JURORS TO TRY THE DUMAS CASE.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 28. — With three more jurors yet to be secured, the trial of Dr. D. F. Dumas of Cass Lake was postponed yesterday afternoon until Friday morning. Out of the special venire of twenty men only two were found suitable for jury duty and another call must be made. The two jurors secured yesterday are John Wagner and August Weber, both farmers.

FRENCH PROPOSALS WERE NOT ACCEPTED.

Paris, Sept. 28. — The announcement from here yesterday of acceptance of the French proposals regarding Morocco was an error. The German minister of foreign affairs, Herr von Kidderlen-Waechter, received the French ambassador, M. Cambon, at the foreign office, but only communicated to him Germany's reply commenting on France's latest proposals concerning Morocco.

Fowler Goes Up and Comes Down.

Immigrant Gap, Cal., Sept. 28.—Aviator Fowler left the ground at 11:28 a. m. for a flight over the Sierras. Fowler circled five times for altitude, reaching a height of 1,500 feet, but after twenty minutes he returned to the meadow.

STRONG CLOSE IN COPPER STOCKS

An Unexpected Rally Follows the Long Period of Liquidation.

For the first time in many days the copper stocks closed at decided gains. The general market at New York had a powerful rally almost simultaneous with the upward movement of coppers and without doubt help to encourage those who were looking for an end of the long period of hammering that all kinds of stocks have been receiving.

The nervous fluctuations that characterized the copper and other stocks yesterday were continued today. Both coppers and the general stock list tendly strongly upwards during most of the morning, though many of the openings were rather weak. What caused the bulge nobody seemed to know. It was predicted by nobody. The news regarding the influences upon stocks was rather bearish. The reports of difficulties between Italy and Turkey and labor disturbances in this country, to say nothing of the fear of attacks by the government on many of the best-established corporations certainly were not encouraging, and yet the market advanced. It seemed that the long-continued liquidation had about run it course, and the time was ripe for an up-turn in stocks just as a natural reaction. The opening of the London copper market was bearish, spot and futures being 7s 6d off.

Among today's copper quotations were the following: Amalgamated, yesterday's close, $47.37½; today, $47, $48.25, $48, $48.75, $49.37½, $50, $49.62½ Butte Coalition, yesterday, $14.50 bid, $15 asked; today, $15, $14.87½. Calumet & Arizona, yesterday, $48 bid, $48.50 asked; today, $48, $49, $48. Giroux, yesterday, $3.62½ bid, $3.81¼ asked; today, $3.81¼. Greene Cananea, yesterday, $5.37½ bid, $6 asked; today, $5.37½, $6. North Butte, yesterday, $21.50 bid, $22 asked; today, $22, $22.50, $23.25, $22.50. Butte & Superior, yesterday, $8.50 bid; today, $9 asked. Keating, yesterday, $2.50 asked; today, $2.50 asked. Butte Ballaklava, yesterday, $3.62½ bid, $3.87½ asked; today, $4. Ojibway, yesterday, $4.25 bid, $5 asked; today, $4.87½.

New York—Copper, $11.80 to $11.90. Copper exports Wednesday, 335 tons; since Sept. 1, 20,866 tons.

In Volume X of "The Copper Handbook," by Horace J. Stevens of Houghton, Mich., just published, a history is given of various attempts that have been made to corner the production of copper since it became a metal of prime importance.

The first attempt along these lines was made by a group of British capitalists, known as the Associated Smelters of Swansea. This was perhaps the original copper trust. It flourished from 1840 to 1860. It was arbitrary in its exactions, squeezing the price of ore to the lowest possible level and boosting the price of the finished metal. This eventually led to the establishment of independent smelters in the Swansea district, which is in Wales, and ended in the downfall of the trust.

The next attempt was made in 1887 by a number of French financiers, who they organized the Secretan Syndicate at Paris, with a nominal capitalization of $13,587,000. The Anaconda, Calumet & Hecla, Rio Tinto and other large mines were secured, until the trust had control of about 85 per cent of the copper output of the globe. The price of copper was advanced speedily, being boosted in one month from 11 to 17¾ cents a pound. Consumers reduced their demands to the lowest possible figure. Old copper was bought up and remelted. Very early in 1889 the credit of the syndicate was exhausted. The Comptoir d' Escompte, second largest bank in France, which had loaned enormous sums to the syndicate, became so badly involved that the manager committed suicide. The syndicate failed and the bank was saved with difficulty. The price of copper in one day dropped 100 pounds to 35 pounds per long ton. So vast was the collection of copper which the syndicate had stored away, in its efforts to keep up the price, that copper was remarkably cheap for the next six years.

In February 1899 a third attempt was made to corner copper. This was in the organization of the Amalgamated Copper company, whose program was avowedly to corner first the American output and then the output of the world. The Amalgamated secured a controlling interest in the Anaconda, several smaller mines of Butte and the Boston & Montana. The price of copper was maintained at 17 cents a pound until October 1901. By this time the Amalgamated had accumulated over 200,000,000 pounds. Cuts had to be made from time to time to dispose of the surplus, the bulk of which at length went at 12 to 13 cents a pound, at which it was bought mainly by several large independent producers.

An effort was made in 1907 to form a combination of the leading American producers, with a view to maintaining prices through regulation of marketing and by restricting production if necessary. This effort was frustrated by the stand taken by several leading independent producers of the United States.

Famous Statue Reappears on the Barney Lawn at Washington.

Mother of Sculptress Returning to Resume Social Leadership.

Washington, Sept. 28.—"Natalie," the famous Barney statue, has reappeared. Emerging from the seclusion into which it made an enforced retirement last fall the lovely bit of marble, which may or may not be a representation of the loveliness of Miss Natalie Clifford Barney by her sister, Miss Laura, again stands on the lawn of Studio house, the palatial residence of Mrs. Alice Clifford Barney-Hemmick.

No vandal eye, however, will be permitted to gaze upon the undraped loveliness of the statue which set all Washington talking last fall. The caretaker of the Barney-Hemmick home has not forgotten the stir the statue caused and the order of the chief of police, Maj. Richard Sylvester, which caused it to be boxed and taken indoors. The improvised fence of barrel staves which the caretaker erected last year between the lawn and the street, where thousands gathered to gaze on the statue, has been replaced by a high concrete wall, penetrated only by a gateway. Hence only those who have field glasses and residences which command a view of the Barney-Hemmick backyards will be able to see the statue.

Married to Young Man.

Talented and vivacious Mrs. Barney-Hemmick (it was only last spring she was married in Paris to Christian Hemmick, 35 years her junior) is now on her way from Europe with her husband, and Studio house is being made ready for their occupancy.

Mrs. Barney, the mother, was much put out by the stir made by the statue. The Barney family pooh pooh the idea that the statue was inspired by or represents Miss Natalie Barney. They say a professional model was used by Miss Laura Barney, as she then was, who maintains a studio in Paris. Some acquaintances insist, however, that Miss Natalie did pose for her sister.

The Barney family were so much annoyed by the fuss made about the work of art that it was said they proposed to wipe Washington off the map as far as they were concerned. If so they apparently have thought better of it. The former Mrs. Barney is expected to arrive in New York with Mr. Hemmick Oct. 1 and to reach Washington Oct 4. Friends say they intend to spend the season here.

With the idea of preparing a fitting surrounding for the statute an elaborate garden will be laid out about the Barney home. Unique plans, reflecting the originality and artistic taste of the mistress of the mansion, have been drawn. The statue will occupy the place of honor in the center. Massive white marble columns will rise about the garden, forming a pergola of rare beauty. Climbing vines will twine about the columns and the Old World beauty of the garden will be enhanced by a sun dial. Here the marble form will find an abiding place.

Proud of Daughter's Talent.

The statue is one of the most cherished of Mrs. Barney-Hemmick's possessions, as she takes great pride in the talent of her daughter.

Washington will in future see little or nothing of the former Laura Barney, who has been wedded in Paris during the past year. Miss Natalie, the "second Amelie Rives," who writes plays and sonnets, will accompany her mother and her youthful step-father to Washington, according to the announced plans of the family.

In thus returning with the young husband to whom she but lately acted as a social fairy godmother Mrs. Barney-Hemmick has shown a courage for which society is giving her full credit. When asked soon after her wedding if she would make her home in Washington she replied: "Yes. Why shouldn't I?"

The multi-millionaire society leader says that the fact that her husband is much her junior concerns only him and her. She sees no cause for exiling herself simply because her second marriage has been an unusual one.

In wedding Mrs. Barney young Hemmick, who is the son of Ronald Hemmick, former consul to Geneva, renounced all claim to her fortune. His proposes to enter a real estate firm and follow the business career he had planned for himself.

Unusual Romance.

The romance between fascinating Mrs. Barney and goodlooking young Mr. Hemmick was one of the most unusual which Washington society has ever witnessed. A round dozen of eligible men, all prominent socially, had been mentioned by rumor as suitors for Mrs. Barney's hand. But she continued heart-free and society had concluded that she preferred freedom from the marriage bond.

Universally popular, Mrs. Barney was especially beloved by the younger set, for whose benefit she frequently entertained, often with amateur plays from her own pen. In one of these young Hemmick played a minor part. A close friendship was formed between the two, but society thought Mrs. Barney's interest in him no deeper than that which she had shown for other young men who found her house an attractive rendezvous. The announcement of the engagement came therefore as a surprise.

It is predicted that Mrs. Barney-Hemmick will entertain frequently this winter and will maintain her social leadership. At a recent social function in Paris she created a furore with a Spanish dance.

"No one who watched it," said a Washingtonian who witnessed her performance, "could realize that the dancer was the mother of a young woman who accompanied her. She appeared in her first youth and entranced everyone with her wonderful grace."

MINNEAPOLIS MAN IS FACING LONG SENTENCE.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 28.—George B. Findling was found guilty of murder in the third degree in connection with the death of 8-year-old Leo Joseph Donahue. Since the man was convicted under the habitual criminal act, the minimum sentence is thirty years in prison, while the maximum is sixty years. Findling, who had maintained an air of confidence throughout his seven days' trial, collapsed when he heard the verdict and wailed bitterly. The testimony in the case was unprintable. The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

DISHPANS ROUT MORMONS.

Proselyting Elders Driven From Town By Kitchenware Din.

Kamrar, Iowa, Sept. 28.—Two elders of the Mormon church left this city afoot with the din of many dishpans echoing in their ears.

The elders were making proselyting speeches when a crowd of women beating vigorously on kitchen tinware created such a pandemonium that the speakers could not be heard. Mormon sympathizers sought to repel the assault by throwing water on the women, but at this point husbands and brothers took a hand and after lively fisticuffs the meeting was broken up.

A few members of the dishpan brigade were out again beating quickstep time to the departure of the missionaries.

HARD TRIP IS LAID OUT

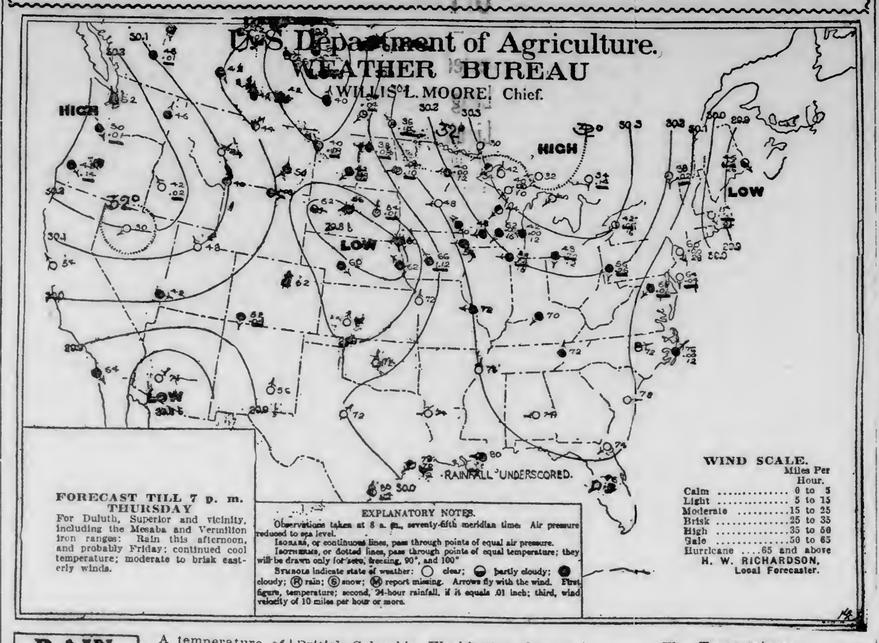
Boosters Will Expend Physical Energy on Next Excursion.

Crowd Will Be Large and Duluth Will Be Well Advertised.

The crowd for the boosters' excursion which will leave Duluth early next Thursday morning for a swing through the western part of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and Northern Wisconsin is being recruited rapidly. From returns already received by the Commercial club, it is practically certain that the crowd will be larger than that which made the excursion over the Soo Line last month and that, with the aid of the experience gained on the last trip, a lasting impression will be made on the towns visited.

No easy pleasure trip has been laid out for the excursionists. They will travel over 500 miles, call at fifty towns and make frequent stops for parades, distributing souvenirs, handshaking and advertising the city generally. They will sleep three consecutive nights in car berths, the first night while the train is in motion. They will have enthusiasm enough to carry them through and show warm geniality at every stop, but the trip will be a wearing one and the boosting cannot be done without an expense of physical energy.

The plan by which the train will leav Duluth early Tuesday morning will save a half day, for if the start were delayed until later in the morning, the first half day would have to be devoted to traveling, some towns would have to be cut out of the itinerary or the schedule would have to be arranged to allow a later return to Duluth Thursday night.



Berths will ho assigned at the Commercial club Monday and the travelers will have access to the train early Monday night, so that they may get a good start toward a night's sleep before the train pulls out at a half hour after midnight. All preliminaries will be arranged Monday so that the boosters will be ready to begin their campaign at Bayfield, the first stop.

The "song birds," who were a feature of the last excursion, are now well organized and will give the people of the towns to be visited on the next trip a line of parodies that will make anybody sit up and take notice. Harry Earnshaw, song writer, has been busy preparing ditties for the singers and they will be distributed before the excursion starts.

The Third Regiment band will be carried in full force and will entertain the people at the different stops with some real music. The band was a great hit in the towns on the Soo Line last month and it is expected to duplicate its success on the coming excursion.

Park Falls, where the stop will be made Thursday night, is a town of about 2,000 people. The second night will be spent at Eau Claire, the largest town on the route, and ample opportunity will be given the visitors to meet the business men of that community. The train is scheduled to arrive in Duluth on the return trip Thursday evening at 6:50.

RAIN

A temperature of 40 deg., with a brisk east wind, is not a pleasant dose of weather to take, but when it is topped off with rain, almost anybody can be excused for registering a mild protest. Yesterday was really beautiful, so let us close our eyes to present conditions and be joyful in retrospection. Rain tonight and tomorrow is the prediction from the castle on the hillside.

Fair, cool weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 6:03 and it will set at 5:54 this evening, giving eleven hours and fifty-one minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Much cooler weather prevails in the upper Mississippi valley and Lake region in connection with the high pressure centered over the latter district. Frosts occurred this morning over Northern Wisconsin and Upper Michigan. Somewhat warmer weather has developed over Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, Alberta and British Columbia, principally as a result of lower barometric pressure. During the last twenty-four hours showers fell over north Atlantic and Gulf states, the St. Lawrence and Ohio valleys, Iowa, the Dakotas, Montana, Alberta, British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Colorado. More or less rain may be expected at the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours in connection with the easterly movement of the disturbances overlying Saskatchewan and the Middle Missouri valley."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Friday:

Upper Michigan—Rain tonight and Friday morning, probably followed by clearing; warmer tonight.

Wisconsin—Showers and thunderstorms and warmer tonight; Friday generally fair except showers in north portion.

Minnesota—Showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight; Friday generally fair, except showers in northeast portion.

SAVED MANY A DOCTOR BILL. PE-RU-NA'S NEED IN FAMILY.

MRS. ELINORE BARRETT.

Peruna a Family Necessity.

Mrs. Elinore Barrett, 810 South Lincoln St., Robinson, Illinois, writes: "I just want to tell you what a wonderful medicine I have found Peruna to be in my family. I have used it for years, and I am sure it has saved me many and many a doctor bill.

"I first used it myself and found it cured me. Then my little girl was cured of a dreadful case of catarrh of the head.

"I always have a bottle of Peruna in my house, as I think it a real necessity where there is a family."

Colds and Catarrh.

Mrs. M. F. Jones, Burning Springs, Ky., writes: "We have been using Peruna for some time, and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the 'one thousand and one' ailments of humanity. No family should ever be without it, for it is an unfailing cure for colds, and it is an excellent remedy to prevent and relieve croup.

"And to speak from a standpoint of experience I can candidly say that it is the remedy for internal catarrh (as I am one of the many unfortunates in this respect). From a personal test and from the testimony of many others I shall not hesitate to recommend it, especially to all suffering women.

FINE TONIC FOR WOMEN

"Peruna has gained full confidence and a permanent stay in our home."

Catarrh for Years—Peruna Relieved

Mrs. Alice Bogle, 803 Clinton St., Circleville, Ohio, writes: "I want to inform you what Peruna has done for me.

"I have been afflicted with catarrh for several years. I have tried different medicines and none seemed to do me any good until I used Peruna. I have taken six bottles and can praise it very highly for the good it has done me.

"I also find it of great benefit to my children."

at lower than market rates. The heads of families are associate members.

Details of Plan.

The 500 dealers are divided into seven groups. Each group is required to pay into the coffers of the association a percentage of its gross receipts, varying from 6 per cent for grocers to 15 per cent for druggists. The fund thus created is divided into six parts, four of which are put aside for distribution among the consumers, one part being spent for advertising and one part for administration and operating expenses.

Each associate member, or head of a family, receives a coupon from the dealer whenever he makes a purchase, setting forth the amount of goods bought. At the end of the stated periods the consumer surrenders his coupons to the association, to serve as a basis for computing the rebate which he will receive from the profit fund. It is the plan to reduce the cost of living by these refunds rather than by charging the consumer lower than market prices in the first instance.

Members Come Fast.

The association has been canvassing the apartment houses and residence districts for associate members during the last seven days. Within this period they have procured nearly 5,000 of their 10,000 associate members.

Patrick Egan, former United States minister to Chile, who is the vice president of the association, predicted today that the cost of living would be reduced materially through the organization. A part of the program includes a campaign against the manipulation of market prices of farm products by storing produce in refrigerating plants.

up housekeeping, my eldest sister took Gertrude, the youngest sister, and Elise and began boarding. Gertrude finally came here, but I was unable to take care of her.

Was Always Interfering.

"Elise was always interfering because when I would tell Gertrude to do this or that. Elise would always tell me to mind my own business. She would go weeks at a time without speaking to me.

"But this is not why I gave her the morphine. It was a mistake."

Her story was written out and signed by the prisoner and followed a period of constant grilling and questioning by the police. Nothing was said in this document about the death of the mother and father and another sister.

In addition, Miss Crawford, it is said, admitted that she was addicted to the use of morphine for five years, with the exception of a brief period, and that she had not had any since last Saturday morning.

Annie is of small stature. A wealth of dark hair, arranged in an elderly fashion, causes her to look older than her 29 years.

Three Other Deaths.

The first of the Crawford household to die was Miss Mary Agnes Crawford, sister of the prisoner. Her death occurred June 25, 1910, suddenly, supposedly of acute meningitis. Three weeks later, July 15, 1910, her father died, uremic poisoning being given as the cause. After an interval of two weeks, on July 29, 1910, her mother died. In her case uremic poisoning was also given as the cause.

Annie, the prisoner, held insurance policies on the lives in the following sums: Walter Crawford, father, $800; Mrs. Crawford, mother, $400; Mary Agnes, $300; Eliza, $250.

She collected the insurance in each case except that of her sister, Eliza, payment of which was withheld pending receipt of the certificate of death. On Monday morning following her sister's death, Annie made demand for the money. On that day she also went to the railroad office where her sister had been employed as stenographer and collected $4 salary due.

Youngest Sister Afraid.

The prisoner also holds an insurance policy on the life of her youngest sister, Gertrude, who admitted to District Attorney Williams that she is afraid of Annie.

For several years Annie Crawford had charge of the drug department of the Presbyterian hospital. She lost her position there more than a year ago following the disappearance of a quantity of drugs.

"A remarkable feature of the case," said a police official, "is that practically every cent of the money which Annie Crawford collected on the several insurance policies was spent for clothes. She also spent a good deal of the money for books and her library contains many medical works."

Walter Crawford, the father, was a carpenter.

Council Bluffs, Governor Carroll, accompanied by his staff in full dress uniforms, Senator Kenyon, Congressmen Kendall, Prouty, Kennedy, Green, Towner, Pickett and other Republican Iowa leaders, including Republican National Committeeman Hart, boarded the train. They expect to make the most of the trip through the state and will have their own private cars attached to the president's train.

Cummins Not on Train.

It was learned today that Senator Cummins does not expect to board the train. He will help receive the president at Des Moines.

Before leaving Council Bluffs the president spoke briefly from the rear platform of his car. He chose prosperity for his theme, and again explained why he happened to be traveling.

Council Bluffs First Stop.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Sept. 28.—President Taft's special train arrived in Council Bluffs at 6 o'clock this morning and left at 7.52.

The schedule for the day had been changed from that originally announced, on account of a desire to make a number of additional short stops at Iowa points. The president slept until 7 o'clock.

Governor Carroll and his staff and the greater portion of the Iowa congressional delegation, including Senator Kenyon, joined the presidential party here and will accompany it across the state.

Spoke Ten Minutes.

President Taft spoke for ten minutes to the crowd of several thousand which had assembled notwithstanding the early hour of his visit. His remarks were largely devoted to the increasing importance of the agricultural states and the need of improved methods to increase production.

The president declared that in 1950 the population of the United States would in all probability be at least 200,000,000, and that it would be necessary to largely increase production if the people were to be well fed.

Special Place For Veterans.

Waterloo, Iowa, Sept. 28.—Veterans of the Civil war will have special positions in the reserve section of the audience when President Taft appears upon the platform here to address the general public this afternoon. The entire city is decorated with flags and bunting.

Overcast skies this morning, following heavy rains last night, made necessary a change in the program. It had been the intention to have the president speak from an improvised stand, but in the event of rain the entertainment committee had arranged for the use of a local theater.

Escorted by Governor.

President Taft and party, escorted by a reception committee of Iowans headed by Governor Carroll, will arrive in Waterloo at 3:15 o'clock. The president will go directly to the speakers stand, escorted by local companies of the National Guard. He is to be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Congressman Pickett tonight.

The presidential party will remain most of tonight in Waterloo, departing for Des Moines about 4 o'clock in the morning.

Made Twenty-two Speeches.

Leavenworth, Kan., Sept. 28.—President Taft ended his four-day visit to Kansas here last night. Yesterday Mr. Taft visited Topeka, Atchison and Leavonworth, stopping en route to appear on the back platform of his train in response to the cheers of platform throngs. In all Mr. Taft traveled 845 miles in Kansas and made twenty-two formal speeches. He wound up here with a discussion of the tariff, during which he again explained his veto and again asserted his willingness to sign any tariff bills based on the forthcoming report of the tariff board.

Mr. Taft expressed himself as delighted with his reception in Kansas. The crowds which turned out to greet him took rank as the largest he has met on any of his various trips through the country.

President Taft's reception in Kansas surprised some of his most intimate friends and supporters. The developments in Iowa during the next two days are awaited with the keenest interest.

Favors Skeleton Army.

In his address to the army officers, who in their full dress uniforms made a brilliant audience, Mr. Taft advocated again the idea of a skeleton army made up largely of skilled officers who would devote themselves largely to the training of the militia. The president said he believed that under this system a competent army could be collected into the field almost at a moment's notice and that on a peace footing the establishment would be a most economical one.

K. of P. Head at Brainerd.

Brainerd, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Grand Chancellor S. F. Atwood attended the meeting of the Knights of Pythias last evening and an appropriate celebration was given in keeping with the event. Chancellor Atwood is the blind orator who has a reputation as one of the best speakers of Minnesota.

AWAY GOES ALL STOMACH MISERY

No Indigestion, Heartburn, Gas or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later.

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

tory. Mr. Kruttschnitt insists that the treatment of the men is such that he wonders why they want to strike. He does not see why they insist on raising questions of new issues.

"The men stand on their former positions. They will not recede. The matter of wages is an after consideration. The men simply are demanding the right to deal with the railroads as a unit, meeting them on equal terms.

"The Missouri, Kansas & Texas linemen are out and the blacksmith's union refuses to work with non-union men at their shops at Dennison, Tex., Sedalia, Mo., Parsons, Kan., and San Antonio, Tex.

"All Roads in the West."

"I believe that the impending strike will spread to all roads in the West as fast as the roads refuse to accept the federation. There is a crisis between labor and capital and it will have to be fought out.

"The position the roads take is arbitrary. Mr. Kruttschnitt writes of good wages and the splendid pension system of the Harriman lines. He says nothing of the objectionable physical examination, the personal record system and the rank discrimination practiced where men with twenty-five years' service are transferred to new shops and begin at the bottom in their seniority at the new shops, where they are likely to be laid off and the preference given younger men."

Favor Saturday.

Three of the five international unions involved, including the machinists, were said to have agreed on Saturday morning between 10 and 12 o'clock as the hour for a general walkout.

The number of men who will be affected was roughly estimated at 35,000. According to a statement at union headquarters here, the chief centers which will be affected are:

Chicago, 5,000; Kansas City, Mo., 1,000; San Francisco, 1,000; Denver, 1,000; Sacramento, 3,500; Los Angeles, 2,000; On the Illinois Central lines, 10,000 will go out.

According to a statement, the preparations have been made for a demonstration at Los Angeles when the order is received there, the proceeds to be used for the benefits of the McNamara trial fund.

Demands Rejected.

New York, Sept. 28.—Announcement was made by officials of the Union and Southern Pacific railroads at noon today that they had rejected the demands of the federation of railway employes on their lines. An official statement giving the position of the railroads in the matter is expected.

Little Improvement Shown.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 28. — There has been little improvement in conditions restricting the local movement of freight, resulting from the strike of Illinois Central railroad clerks. Switchmen refused to handle cars without routing orders, and cars for other roads and belt lines are not delivered.

A carload of strikebreakers arrived yesterday from Chicago.

A federal restraining order granted on a petition of the railroad, stopping strikers from interfering with workmen or traffic, has been issued against the shopmen and clerks of the Illinois Central here. Local officers say freight soon will be moving as usual, and E. B. Baker, spokesman for the striking clerks, said his estimate that 98 per cent of the men south of the Ohio were out had proved correct. A few men are at work in the local freight offices.

As to the general strike, labor leaders here make no effort to conceal the fact that it is expected.

Quiet prevailed at the railroad yards and sheds last night. In the petition on which the railroad was granted the restraining order it was alleged four men employed in local offices were beaten, that a messenger boy was held captive three hours, and that even a passenger train was delayed by a crowd of strike sympathizers of the trackmen.

Further hearing on the injunction proceedings will be held Oct. 2.

General Strike Is Failure.

Chiasso, Switzerland, on the Italian Frontier, Sept. 28.—While the general strike attempted throughout Italy in protest against the mobilization of the army and navy for the possible occupation of Tripoli, continues to be a failure, the extremists among the agitators, embittered by their own powerlessness, are causing excesses in small centers where their followers predominate.

Between Anconia and Forli, Italy, telegraph poles were torn town and placed across the railway track to delay the trains which are transporting the reservists to the military station. At least one person has been killed and a score injured during recent rioting.

Wild Excitement Prevails.

London, Sept. 28.—The correspondent of the Chronicle sends a dispatch from Tripoli which says:

"All business here has stopped and great excitement prevails. The Turkish steamer Derna entered the harbor within view of the whole Italian fleet, which apparently had been watching her for many miles. She landed 100 soldiers, several boxes of ammunition and rifles. It is expected that the fleet will not take steps to occupy the place. At any moment the fleet could have stopped the Derna, but refrained, it is understood under orders from the Italian government.

"The news spread like wildfire. Turkish soldiers swarmed about the harbor yelling threats against Italy. The Italians are momentarily in fear of attack. The Italian consul is withholding all newspapers from Italy in order to avoid increasing the anxiety. Turkish families were preparing to flee, but the local committee of the Union of Progress issued an order that Turkish subjects must on no account leave the town. They should be forcibly restrained if necessary.

"The Turks are endeavoring to induce the Arabs to contribute to the defense of the town with men and goods, but have not met with much success."

May Involve England.

An interesting question arises as to whether Turkey, being debarred by weakness of her navy from sending transports to provision and reinforce her troops in Tripoli by sea, will close the night to send convoys through Egypt. Such a demand would place Great Britain in a dilemma. To accede would mean incurring enmity; to refuse would imperil the British position in Egypt, and in the most of the world generally.

American May Take Part.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Should there be hostilities between Turkey and Italy, it might fall to the lot of an American to command some of the operations of the Turkish navy.

Buckman Pasha—Capt. Ransford D. Buckman—holds the rank of vice admiral in the Turkish navy, and when in 1906 there was danger of war between Turkey and England, Buckman was decided upon to direct whatever naval maneuvers should be necessary. His friends here say he will be invested with similar authority should the present crisis result in war.

Buckman only commanded a whaleback in the coal trade between Newport News, Baltimore and Boston. His work later with an American shipbuilding company which constructed a warship for Turkey attracted the attention of the representatives of the sultan, who offered him a position in the Ottoman navy.

AN ELOQUENT INDEX TO GROWTH.

It would be hard to imagine a truer index to the growth that has come to Duluth, subtly and almost unnoticed, than the splendid shops of the city in their present gala attire of fall displays. Duluth is fortunate in having a large number of uncommonly fine stores, and never before have these stores contained such a handsome, varied and rich assortment of goods. It is worth one's while, whether on buying bent or not, to make a tour of these establishments, which are not to be outdone by the stores in any community twice or thrice as large as Duluth, and to observe the variety and richness of the fall displays and compare them with those of other cities, either as to comprehensiveness, quality or price.

Duluth is exceptionally well served by its mercantile establishments, and it may well take pride in the splendid showing they make for the solidity of its prosperity.

A DEFENSE OF THE LEGISLATURE.

In his talk to the national guard convention in Duluth Tuesday Representative Albert Pfaender of New Ulm, one of the keenest and ablest members of the lower branch of the legislature, said some things about the late lamented session of the Minnesota lawmakers that threw light upon it from a new angle.

The legislature has been much criticized for its failure to do its duty, more so than any previous session, perhaps, though it is always a habit to condemn the legislature and usually there is ample reason for doing so.

But it should be remembered that while it was in the house of representatives that the disgraceful and unseemly things occurred that chiefly exposed the legislature to criticism, the house passed practically every important measure for which there was a public demand.

The house bickered and barked and snarled and fought. The house wasted time in vast abundance. The house comported itself, at times, in a manner that would disgrace a kindergarten composed of the neighborhood's worst bad boys.

It was the house that was accused of being dominated by corporate interests, and of being organized "in the interests of the interests."

But, as Mr. Pfaender truly pointed out in his Duluth address, the house also did these things:

The house passed the Keefe bill, giving the people of Minnesota power to nominate and practically elect the United States senators from Minnesota.

The house ratified the amendment to the Federal Constitution authorizing the income tax.

The house passed a just and reasonable measure providing for a reapportionment of legislative representation.

The house passed an initiative and referendum bill which had the approval of Theodore Roosevelt.

The house passed a statewide primary bill.

The house passed a bill providing for the recall of elective officers.

The house passed a bill increasing the limit of damages recoverable for death from wrongful act from $5,000 to $7,500.

The house passed the bill, for which there was a widespread demand, compelling telephone companies to give connection to patrons of competing lines, and putting the telephone business under rigid state control.

The house passed a number of progressive temperance measures, and it went, as Mr. Pfaender says, "to greater lengths along the lines of so-called progressive legislation than any similar body that has ever sat in our state capitol."

Most of these measures died, but it was not the house that killed them, but the senate. If the senate had sat an hour longer it would have passed several of the most important ones, like the statewide primary, the recall and the income tax; and this fact alone, if there had been no others, was enough to warrant the governor in calling an extra session.

Even the state legislature is entitled to a just judgment, and these facts are beyond controversy. The house, accused of being dominated by special interests and of being organized for their benefit, passed practically every measure of importance that came before it. The senate, which was obviously organized along progressive lines as it never was before, killed most of these measures. And their defeat, in most cases, was due entirely to the abrupt coming of the constitutional hour for adjournment.

The Minnesota legislature isn't so bad after all. It is only fair that the people should consider these significant facts, and that the governor should give the legislature a chance to redeem itself by calling a special session to shift a part of the burden of taxation upon the railroads, which are shirking half their just dues to the state.

A SIMPLE ELECTION PLAN.

San Francisco tried out for the first time Tuesday its new plan of electing its city officers, and it appears to have worked well.

Its advantages are that it eliminates partisanship from city elections and that in many cases it will make one election do where two are deemed necessary in other places. Both these advantages are important; the first because partisanship has no more place in a city election than religious convictions or taste in wearing apparel, the second because the fewer elections there are the better.

Under the San Francisco plan any man legally qualified may become a candidate for mayor, for instance, by filing for the office. There is a primary election, such as was held Tuesday. If a candidate for mayor gets a majority of all the votes cast, that settles it. He is elected. If no candidate gets a majority, the two highest go on the ballot at the general election. There is no place on either ballot for party designations.

The elimination of partisanship brushes away confusing issues and concentrates the minds of the voters on the one essential question: which of the candidates is best fitted for the place he seeks, and which will best serve the common good of the community?

San Francisco's plan is attractive. All commission-governed cities have something like it. All other cities should have something like it.

A BLOSSOMING WILDERNESS.

Not long ago when the iron ranges were mentioned the picture created by the imagination of the average man was that of a bleak place of rocks and stumps and great open pits. Nobody thought to put any vegetation in the picture, except possibly a few trees. And there are still many people whose minds are yet in condition to imagine such a picture.

Yet recently Virginia had a very successful "farmers' day," a little while before that Hibbing had an amazingly brilliant county fair, and now it is reported that the region around McKinley, Biwabik and Aurora has this year produced more than fifty thousand bushels of potatoes, besides a large variety of other foodstuffs.

St. Louis county's six thousand square miles is an empire whose richness and ultimate development hardly anybody has yet imagined. It will yet support a population as great as that of the entire state now.

"FOR POLITICAL PURPOSES."

President Taft has been reasonably discreet and tactful in his speeches during the communing with the people in which he is engaged, but he has said at least one thing which is not to his credit, and which he should not have said.

At Grand Rapids, Mich., the president said: "The house at once began to make a record for political purposes by passing three tariff bills—the wool bill, the free list bill and the cotton bill."

Now it is not pretty, and it is not good argument, to impugn motives. These three bills stand before the country with every opportunity for every citizen to analyze them, and they should be analyzed on their merits. And in analyzing them it is necessary to consider recent political history and the attitude of the public on the tariff question. It is no more just to say that the Democrats passed these three bills "for political purposes" than it is to say that the president urged reciprocity for political purposes and that he vetoed the tariff reduction bills for political purposes.

What was the situation when congress met for the special session?

There was a presidential election in 1908, and a great issue was involved. What was that issue? The revision of the tariff; and the president and his party promised tariff revision and were put in power because of that promise.

The result of that election and of the Republican promise of tariff revision was the Payne-Aldrich bill, which revised the tariff, indeed, but which revised it upward instead of downward.

In 1910 there was a congressional election, and again the tariff was the issue; the tariff and the failure of President Taft and his party to obey the widespread public demand for downward revision of the tariff.

In that election the people spoke their minds and showed what they wanted by overturning, so far as lay in their power, the Republican control of the country. The Republicans, to whom the people had committed the duty of revising the tariff downward, had failed to obey the command; so the people turned to the Democrats for relief and elected a Democratic house of representatives. Unquestionably if it had been in their power at that time they would also have elected a Democratic president and a Democratic senate, for the same reason and for the same purpose.

There can be but one meaning in these events. The Democrats were put in power in the house for the express purpose of revising the tariff downward, and it was in obedience to the implied command of the people that as soon as the reciprocity measure was out of the way they took up the tariff for revision. They passed three measures, all revising the tariff downward, and President Taft vetoed them all.

If obeying the command of the people to revise the tariff downward, expressed in terms that could by no possibility be mistaken, was acting "for political purposes," then President Taft is right in thus impugning Democratic motives.

Perhaps, though, he prefers that sort of acting for political purposes which consists in refusing absolutely to heed the people's bitter need or to obey their stern command; for that is the sort of acting for political purposes that he and his party have been doing ever since his election in 1908.

FLYING ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

Three aviators are after the $50,000 award offered the first one who flies across the continent. Two have started from the Atlantic coast and one from the Pacific. So far their flying has been much like that of a duck with a broken wing.

Either these are pretty lame aviators, or aviation isn't such a smooth process as some of the short exhibition flights have made it seem.

THE CITY HALL OFFER.

Apparently there is no likelihood that the city council will consider seriously the offer of $100,000 for the city hall and the ground on which it is located.

Probably this is wise. There is no great hurry. In view of the fact that $75,000 was offered only three years ago the present offer seems fairly good, and makes it evident that the city would have no trouble in disposing of the city hall site for a fair price. But a few years hence, when the city may be in a position to plan a new city hall, the value of the property will not have diminished. The chance of selling it at a fair price will be quite as good as it is today, and a fair price then will probably be larger than a fair price now.

Yet pretty soon the city should be thinking about ways and means of buying its new site near the courthouse, and it should not be forgotten that values in the courthouse neighborhood are likely to advance much more rapidly than prices in the city hall neighborhood.

STUPID PRUDISENESS.

Some time ago Chicago selected a committee of representative men and women to probe the vice of the city, with a view to curing it so far as possible. The committee made a report, which has been published, describing conditions as it found them. The postoffice department has barred that report from the mails as obscene. This, surely, is about the limit of stupid prudery.

STRANGE BED-FELLOWS

By SAVOYARD.

Faction is to party what cancer is to the flesh, what canker is to the plant, what treason is to the state, what simony is to the church. It withers whatever it touches and paralyzes wherever it reaches. It was not so much the legions of Rome that destroyed Carthage as cabal in the Carthagenian council, and faction has been a hand-and-a-half in political affairs in our republic throughout its entire existence. Faction may be the child of envy, it may be the offspring of malice, it may be the harvest of error, it may be the fruit of fanaticism. Whencesoever it comes, it uniformly divides and incessantly desolates.

When Mr. Douglas secured the passage of the Kansas -Nebraska bill it was with the most patriotic intentions, and he fondly hoped and confidently believed that he had eliminated the slavery question from American politics, but he was greatly mistaken. He only irritated the ulcer, and made faction in his own party flagrant. The result was the split at Charleston in 1860, two Democratic tickets in the field that year, the triumph of a party altogether sectional, and the precipitation of the most tremendous civil war of all history.

The hostility the two wings of the Democratic party in 1860 harbored against each other was far more intense than either had for the common foe. And in 1872 Grant hated Charles Sumner far more bitterly than he did Jefferson Davis, and Conkling displayed far more animosity against Carl Schurz than he did against Allen G. Thurseman. The most cruel, vindictive and malign slander ever aimed against any man of our history was that Thomas Nast, a Republican, visited on Horace Greeley, who did more to make the Republican party victorious than any other member of it. And in 1896 Bryan was more malevolent in his feelings toward Grover Cleveland than he was toward William McKinley. And right now in 1911, Boies Penrose, the Republican leader of the United States senate, is as thick with Thomas S. Martin, the Democratic leader of that body, "as Brindle with Cherry," though he abominates Robert M. La Follette as the butt-end of party perfidy and the upper crust of party dishonor. And Joseph G. Cannon has just as little use for Victor Murdock, while John Dalzell wonders what Cooper of Wisconsin was made for. Thus tariff slavery is doing for the Republican party what African slavery did for the Democratic party—dividing it that it may be the more easily conquered if not totally destroyed.

In 1896 I heard David B. Hill, then a senator in congress, exclaim in tones of despair, "What is it in this silver question that makes Democrats hate one another so?" In his view it was nothing but a matter of policy, about which no sane man would get out of temper. Later Hill went to the Chicago convention in order to bring the factions together and engage them in a common cause against the enemy. He disastrously failed and it nearly broke his heart.

David B. Hill was an extraordinary man and much misunderstood. The average observer put him in the class with the bosses, estimated him as one with Gorman, who was one with Quay. It was a mistake. Hill was absolutely sincere when he made the famous declaration, "I am a Democrat!" And he would have been a Democrat in Vermont and a more intense Democrat than in New York if that had been possible. In Pennsylvania Gorman would have been a Republican.

Perhaps it was Machiavelli who said, "Many a full sack comes from a crooked row, and he that will be captain of none but honest men will have small time to pay." And Hill used bad men, but he was never of them. Tammany was his instrument, never his master, and in this he was of the school of Tilden, the most consummate politician even New York ever produced. It was unfortunate for them as public men, unfortunate for the Democratic party, unfortunate for the country, that Hill was not as content to follow Grover Cleveland as Tilden had been to follow Van Buren. Hill's fatal mistake was in not forcing the re-election of Cleveland in 1888, which he could have done. It was his only path to the presidency, just as Thomas A. Hendricks' path to that distinction was in the renomination of the old ticket of Tilden and Hendricks in 1880. But Cleveland held Hill guiltless, and so he was innocent of any sin of commission; but he omitted. Had he served notice on the whisky men that he would not be governor unless Cleveland carried New York, Cleveland would have carried New York and been re-elected. Then nothing could have prevented Hill's election to the presidency in 1892.

In matters of doctrine Hill had as high ideals as Cleveland himself. Emphatically he was a Democrat. It was his methods that were obnoxious to criticism. He looked at the full sack and was careless of the crooked row. He elected to be a poor man. He might have been ten times a millionaire. He scorned to hold

That poverty's a crime and want a sin,
That gold to every wish its object draws,
Can purchase honor, can command applause,
Can laugh at punishments and mock at laws.

As must every one who is base enough to get rich in the public service.

It is sometimes amusing to note the vicissitudes—evil and beneficent—that wait on political career. Tilden bolted the Democratic ticket in 1848, voted for Van Buren and did as much as any other man to elect Gen. Taylor president of the United States. Yet Tilden lived to be the most trusted as he was the ablest Democratic leader since Andrew Jackson. Carl Schurz was the pioneer and the controlling spirit of the rebellion in the Republican party in 1872, but in 1877 he took without protest from any quarter a seat in the cabinet of R. B. Hayes.

James B. Weaver was originally a Republican. He seceded and joined the Greenbackers; but in 1880 as the candidate of the rag money men for president, he contributed very materially to the election of Garfield, and narrowly escaped a fist fight on the floor of congress in open session a few weeks after the election for the part he played in the campaign. But in 1896 Weaver was of the very aristocracy of the Democratic party as the Democracy then was and as political aristocracy then went.

Ben Butler's was a more strange case. Originally a Democrat, a disgusting dough-face, "a Northern man of Southern principles," ready, eager to fetch and carry for "the slave oligarchy," later he was "everything that is pusilanimous in war, inhuman in peace, forbidden in morals, and corrupt in politics," and the strongest debater on the Republican side for four or five congresses. But he lived to be a Democrat governor of Massachusetts and even after that he did his utmost to defeat his old personal enemy, James G. Blaine, president.

John M. Palmer, Southern born and a Democrat, was a charter member of the Republican party and a stout soldier in the Federal armies of 1861-65, also twice or thrice Republican governor of Illinois, but subsequently he got what was refused to Morrison himself, a United States senatorship from a Democratic legislature.

And now the two leading candidates for the Democratic nomination in 1912 were Palmer and Buckner men in 1896 and either will be president if nominated.

And it may be that the whirligig will fetch it around so that we shall see Taft and La Follette, Cannon and Murdock, Dalzell and Cummins, in the same basket, but not in 1912.

NOT AFTER SETTLERS BUT POT HUNTERS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In his communication to The Herald, under the date of Sept. 25, G. W. Robertson makes a sweeping indictment of sportsmen and game wardens which is manifestly unfair. He declares that "sports have no conscientious regard for the law," and that the settlers are "harassed by an armed aggregation of game wardens." Mr. Robertson writes from Grand Marais, which is undoubtedly his home. A new deputy warden was recently appointed in that vicinity, and from all reports which came from that part of the state he was badly needed. If his activity is too active to suit the people in that district, it is much more commendable from a general standpoint than if he were so lazy as to allow the continuation of previous conditions. There probably was, and may be yet, as much or more illegal hunting in that end of the state as anywhere else. No one aims to deprive the settlers of a reasonable amount of fresh meat, whether wild or not, as far as I have been able to gather. But when the settlers, or others, start to kill moose, deer or game birds for whole camps of men or for the market it is time to call a halt, even though the law may pinch the feet of some of the settlers. If they would aid in the enforcement of the law and help the authorities convict some of these pot hunters, as they could do, there would be no need of a warden in their vicinity. The laws have to be stringent and far reaching, because if any loophole were available everybody would crawl through the opening and enforcement would be practically impossible. Not only has big game been slaughtered down the north shore, but large quantities of trout have been taken illegally for the market. It wasn't such a great while ago that two spring lakes not so very far from Grand Marais, abounding with big trout, were practically netted out by poachers who likely reside near there, doing infinitely more harm than could possibly be done by the "sports" of whom Mr. Robertson speaks. Instead of railing against the game wardens Mr. Robertson, if he were there then, might have done much more good by lending his efforts towards bringing some of those miscreants to justice. And not only those particular persons, but others who have been flagrantly violating the law in the country tributary to Grand Marais. I venture to say that if the only game or fish killed or taken illegally had been killed or taken by the settlers for their own private use, there would not be any game warden in that locality today. But if whole villages and camps expect to live on game, and if some expect to make at least part of their living by selling the game they kill, the game warden is a dire necessity, and judging by the tone of the letter from Grand Marais the new appointee down there has been doing some business. Let him keep the good work up. He will not only receive the commendation of the "sports," but of any fair-minded man, whether he ever hunted or fished or not, and of his superior officers as well.

ONE OF THE "SPORTS."

EITHER NATION COULD HAVE REPEALED PACT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Being a reader of your paper, I am going to ask you for some information concerning reciprocity. Had this agreement passed and become a law between the United States and Canada and had it worked a hardship on the people of either nation, could either side repeal it and what action would have to be taken? An early reply will be appreciated. Yours very truly,

A. BREWER.
Barrows, Sask., Sept. 26.

Either party to the agreement, if it found the results unsatisfactory, could have put an end to it by a simple act of its lawmaking body repealing it.—The Editor.

WHY A CHAPLAIN?

To the Editor of The Herald::

In the election of officers for the bartenders' union, I notice among others the office of chaplain.

Now pardon my curiosity, but what do they want a chaplain for?

To ask God's blessing upon their honorable labor, serving mankind faithfully from early morning, until early morning next day.

In regards to faithfulness to their duty they do deserve some credit, but the cause is so vile I shouldn't think they would want to consider either God or the Bible in connection with their union, and so again, why a chaplain? I. M.

Buffalo's Lost Opportunity.

Henry Oyen in the World's Work: Buffalo was planned to be the City Beautiful. Its engineer was Joseph Ellicott of Washington. He laid down his first street and his civic center—the base of the city—a quarter of a mile from the lake shore. The city was to front upon a series of parks, with the free lake beyond. Along his broad, radiating avenues he plotted a series a squares at frequent intervals, that even the business district might not become congested; and, retreating from the business district, he planned a belt of parks to girdle the city.

Then Big Business whispered in the ear of Buffalo, and Buffalo obeyed its dictates. Business got the lake front for its docks, and mills, and railroad tracks. It got the lake front parks for streets and warehouses at first, and for business blocks afterward. The men who then controlled the city's destiny had other ideas than those of the men who had planned to make good homes; they wanted to make money. The park idea, the model city idea, the idea of a city of clean, decent, and healthful homes, had become discredited. Finally they drove a street through Ellicott's pet civic center, shut out forever from Buffalo the lake front, and Ellicott went away with a broken heart and later committed suicide.

The opportunity had gone; Buffalo swiftly proceeded to become one of the ugliest cities on the map. It was—Business.

One On the Supervisor.

Everybody's: The supervisor of a school was trying to prove that children are lacking in observation.

To the children he said, "Now, children, tell me a number to put on the board."

Some child said "thirty-six." The supervisor wrote "sixty-three."

He asked for another number, and seventy-six was given. He wrote sixty-seven.

When a third number was asked, a child who apparently had paid no attention called out:

"Theventy-theven. Change that, you darned thucker!"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

All Politics.

Virginia Enterprise: The average citizen who followed the Red Wing training school farce must conclude that the whole thing had its inception and its ending in politics.

Light on Eberhart.

Fergus Falls Journal: The case of Mr. Whittier the superintendent of the Red Wing reform school has finally gone to the jury, which is the three members of the board of control. The last witness brought forward by Senator Stephens was a boy who told about his rough treatment at the hands of an attendant. When it came to cross examination, he admitted that he and three others were planning to break out and that he had secured pieces of lead which they had tied into their handkerchiefs with a view of slugging the night watchman, when ready to make their escape. This shows the type of boys and young men in the institution and it is exceedingly doubtful if the good women who have been behind this onslaught on Mr. Whittier could rule them withtheir "policy of love." The investigation has not only thrown a light on the institution at Red Wing but it has given the people of the state a splendid opportunity to size up the governor and the little satellites with which he has surrounded himself. While the whole affair has been very humiliating to the state it has perhaps been worth while.

A True Picture.

Park Rapids Enterprise: "If the state of Minnesota is not a tax ridden state given to outrageous extravagance it comes mighty near the danger line. Reform is necessary."—Anoka Union.

Yes reform is necessary, but where do you find any evidence of the reform spirit in the present state administration? A political organization of office holders, not an individual who stands out prominently for principles and policies, controls state affairs and that always is and always will be extravagance in everything but the best interests of the state as a whole.

Lively Time Ahead.

Browns Valley Tribune: Considering the high state of political tension fourteen months ahead of the presidential election, a person of decided political views will possess but few speaking acquaintances by Nov. 1, 1912.

The Governor's Mistake.

Grand Marais News-Herald: Governor Eberhart is least happy when he is playing politics. He does not know the game as well as he might. He could have known, it is possible that he did know, every detail of the management of the state training school two years ago as well as he does now. He fancied, when the discussion of corporal punishment arose, that there was a popular issue and a chance to make himself solid. He is the inspiration and support of the unjust and malicious assault upon Mr. Whittier. He began it without heed to justice and he has carried it on without heed to law. It is going to prove a boomerang.

Only Ones in State, Too.

Two Harbors Journal-News: Ever stop to think that the Duluth & Iron Range and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroads, owned by the soulless steel trust, have not advanced their passenger rate to 3 cents a mile as they could do under the Sanborn decision?

Minnesota Ripe for Revolt.

Biwabik Times: Minnesota is ripe for a house-cleaning. Now bossed by the railroads and robbed by the express companies, cajoled by this interest and confidenced by that one, Minnesotans have reason to revolt against the crowd that has governed them for so long.

Let Us Hope So.

Eveleth News: It was the last rally before the death of bossism in Minnesota politics when provision was made for nominating the congressman-at-large in the state convention instead of by the people at the primaries.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A boy away from home can always save enough money to telegraph for some.

After a man gives his wife a lecture on practicing economy he feels he can afford to take a cab to go to his office.

People who never heard about a subject till yesterday want to dispute about it today with a man who has known it all his life.

A man can come home from the longest business trip looking fresh and fine, but from the shortest family excursion a wreck.

There's nothing a man will lie about more foolishly than how he really wasn't asleep in his armchair when he was snoring the plaster off the ceiling.

One Great Man's Inheritance.

Governor Woodrow Wilson, says Mr. Hale in the October World's Work, owes a great deal of his present fitness for service to the training he received in his early youth from his father.

Father and son were constant companions, but it was Sunday afternoons that the elder devoted particularly to his son's training. Then, sitting on the floor, or rather reclining there against an inverted chair, the gifted parson poured out into the ears of the spellbound lad all the stores of his experience, learning and thought. He was a man of wide information on the affairs of the world a judge of good literature, a master of the queen of the sciences, theology, and withal a man of much imaginative power, mingling with the warp of sound and well-founded thought the woof of picturesque fancy. Above all, the elder Wilson had a clean-working mind. He had a way of recognizng facts, and the process of his thought dealt with them in the light of reason. If the boy had learned nothing else, he would have been happy indeed to have been guided from the beginning into the ways of clear, cold thinking.

The Next Stop.

Indianapolis News: And now, preparing for the next stop, it is high time that we should take up the subject of a safe and sane Thanksgiving.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Le Rire: Waiter (to night nurse watching patient)—Have some coffee, ma'am?

Night Nurse—No, I greatly fear that that would keep me awake.

Judge: Knicker—Yes, my dear, I shall be glad to go with you; I long to see the beauties of the country.

Mrs. Knicker—We will stay in town.

Louisville Courier-Journal: "Senator, why don't you unpack your trunk?"

You'll be in Washington for six years."

"I don't known about that. My state has the recall."

Fliegende Blaeter: Lady—And you guarantee that the parrot talks quite a lot?

Houston Daily Post: "I am going to blow out my brains!"

"If you are a good enough shot to do that you can do better by leaving your brains where they are and going into vaudeville."

Toledo Blade: "What on earth possessed Mrs. Readycash to marry that dry goods clerk?"

"She couldn't resist him you know. When she first met him he was at the bargain counter.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Bingsley wants an extra man or two in the sporting department during race week."

"Never mind what Bingsley wants. Give the society editress three more assistants."

Chicago Tribune: Rivers (slowly evolving an article on aviation)—Brooks give me a modern synonym for "nip and tuck."

Brooks (struggling with a Black Hand assignment)—Cub and Giant, you lunkhead! Don't bother me!

Houston Chronicle: "How is your garden getting along?"

"Why do you ask that question?" demanded the suburbanite suspiciously.

"Merely out of politeness."

"I see. I thought maybe I had promised you some vegetables."

Washington Star: "I've solved a splendid idea," said a Reno lawyer.

"Let's have it," replied his partner.

"We'll see if we can't arrange to have divorces granted in a coupon form like 1,000-mile books or meal tickets."

MAY GO BACK TO TRAINING SCHOOL

Eveleth Boy Released From Red Wing, Charged With Stealing Hide.

Eveleth, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Emil Wikkila, 15 years old, who returned here a year ago from Red Wing, where he was serving a term in the state training school, for stealing, was arrested yesterday afternoon for stealing a hide from Kaner Bros., and selling it to the Eveleth Cash Grocery. He was caught at the Adams school where he attends. He at first denied all knowledge of the theft but admitted he had sold a hide to the grocery. He claimed the hide was the property of an uncle who owns a farm in this vicinity. After a thorough sweating by the city authorities it is said the boy confessed.

Other parties are implicated and more arrests may follow. Since his return from the state school the boy who is an orphan, stayed with local relatives.

The city authorities are undecided as to whether to place the boy on probation or return him to the state school. A decision will be reached after a conference with the state training school authorities.

McAlpine has not yet had a hearing, and may be confined in jail until the investigation is concluded.

HIBBING POLICEMAN HALTS RUNAWAY TEAM.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Officer Jack Shea figured in a heroic stunt last evening when he caught a pair of runaway horses pulling a rig occupied by some women from Chisholm, whose male escort had jumped from the rig when the animals started to run.

Up Third avenue the horses ran until they came to Center street. They turned the corner and galloped to Second avenue, turning at Pine street. They came back to Center and it was at this corner that Officer Shea dashed forward from the sidewalk, grabbed one of the animals by the head and turned the horses to the curbing.

The occupants of the rig were clinging to each other and to the sides of the seats. They hired a driver from a local livery stable to take them back to Chisholm. Their names could not be learned.

HIBBING TEAM HAD GOOD YEAR

Range Village Ball Club Certainly Made Success of This Season.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Under the management of Harry G. Burnham, the Hibbing baseball club has closed the most successful season both from a financial and playing standpoint.

At the beginning of the season a debt of $1,190 was taken over by Mr. Burnham, for the first time manager of the club. This debt was entirely paid off during the early part of the summer and this morning the manager paid off the last of the bills contracted by the club. Each player has received his division of the receipts once every month and there is now about $200 in the treasury for division among the players.

Played Forty-one Games.

Forty-one games were played by the Hibbing Colts. Of this number they won twenty-six and lost fifteen. At the beginning of the season everything in sight was wiped up. That is, the Hibbing Colts were acknowledged by every fan on the range to be practically unbeatable.

Then came the slump when the Twin City Gophers were here. Hibbing played eight games with the colored boys and dropped six of them, most of those being lost by close scores, however. Loose individual playing by the Colts was responsible for several of these defeats.

A feature which stands out prominently in connection with this team is that in all of the games played no outside help was used or even asked for.

The Hibbing staff of pitchers all did good work, although Gene Grady was laid on the shelf on account of sickness the greater part of the season. When in shape he pitched gilt-edged ball.

Indications are therefore bright for another successful year for the Hibbing Colts during the season of 1912. The lineup of the team will be practically unchanged.

Every man on the Hibbing team has made Hibbing his home for more than a year and every man is regularly employed here. The team was conducted upon a purely co-operative basis and a neat sum was realized by each of the players for his season's work.

HORSE RUNS AWAY AND BREAKS LEG

Eveleth Animal Is Shot and Occupant of Rig Is Injured.

Eveleth, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—A horse driven by Z. Lappi, yesterday afternoon became frightened and dashed down Adams avenue, as far as Monroe street where the animal struck a hydrant, tipping the wagon over and throwing the occupants out.

The timbers in the wagon fell on John Lappi and he sustained injuries to his body which it is believed will not prove to be very serious. He was immediately taken to his home. The horse broke its leg, and was otherwise badly injured. Officers John Zidar was called out and shot the animal.

NEW VIRGINIA WALKS.

Lot of Improvements in That Line Being Made.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—New cement sidewalks will be constructed on the east side of Cleveland avenue between Maple and Spruce streets, on the east side of lot 1, block 32, the east side of Cleveland avenue between Cedar and Locust streets, on the north side of Poplar street between Cleveland avenue and Wyoming avenue and on the west side of Central avenue between Poplar and Cedar streets. Most of the walks referred to will be constructed following the paving of the streets referred to this year and are in addition to many blocks of cement walks heretofore ordered. At the next council meeting City Attorney Poirier will report that he has drafted a resolution, ordering the construction of an overhead crossing over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad tracks on the south end of Mesaba avenue and leading to the Gilbert road. This is a matter which was taken up with the railroad company some time ago.

SEVERE ITCHING AND BURNING ALL OVER

"About three years ago I was attacked with a very severe itching and burning all over my body and finally my skin broke until my body looked like a piece of raw meat. I did believe that I could not stand the torture any longer, while all the time I was using the salve and the wash ordered by my physician without relief. When I was advised to go to a skin specialist I went with no better results. My body was covered with large white scales, with scales on my hands, arms and lower limbs. In about one week my scalp was covered with scales which looked like dandruff but became worse each day until at the end of another week the scales were as large as on a fish. The itch in my head was unbearable. My hair was coming out in combfuls until it looked so bad I was ashamed to go on the street.

"I used tar soap for a shampoo but it took no effect. At the end of three weeks the back of my head was completely bald. I was a sight when I decided to try the Cuticura Ointment for the hair, and when I saw the wonderful results I decided to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment on my body. After taking six baths in hot water with plenty of Cuticura Soap, and using three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Pills, I was cured. My hair has grown more than an inch in length.

"Before using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment I lost all of my finger nails and my hands were so sore I could not put them in water. If I had tried them sooner I would have saved a few hundred dollars." (Signed) Mrs. K. Detlefson, 651 Knickerbocker Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 24, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but those who wish to try them without charge may do so by sending to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 19A, Boston, for a liberal sample of each, post-free, together with 32-p. book on the skin and scalp.

FINE LIBRARY FOR VIRGINIA

If Plans Are Carried Out Structure Will Be Among Best.

Virginia, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The plans of the city council for a new public library building contemplate the expenditure of about $40,000 for the proposed structure to be erected at the corner of Central avenue and Spruce street, just north of the Roosevelt school. It is expected that work on the building will be started this fall if weather conditions and other things will permit, and Virginia will have the finest public library building outside the Twin Cities and Duluth.

The present library building and site were sold to the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific Railroad company for $12,000. Andrew Carnegie has promised to provide another $12,500, and the city council has appropriated $15,000 for the building, making $39,500. The council has made provision for the purchase of a site by another appropriation, as well as $8,000 more for maintenance and purchase of new books next year. No other city in the West has made better provision for public library facilities than Virginia through its present city council.

OLD CHISHOLM RESIDENT TO MOVE TO BIWABIK.

Chisholm, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—E. L. Casey, who recently sold his interest in a drug store here with the idea of taking personal charge of his drug store at Eveleth, has closed a deal for the Biwabik drug store and will move there with his family next week to take personal charge of the business. Mr. Casey has been a resident of Chisholm for many years, having served two terms as village recorder.

MUST SEND PUPILS TO BIWABIK SCHOOLS.

Biwabik, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Parents living in this district who do not send their children to school, unless they have legal reasons for doing otherwise, will hear from the school board as that body has decided to strictly enforce the state law and so notified such parents who offered various excuses for not sending their children. Dr. C. W. Bray was appointed at $25 per month to make a medical examination of the pupils.

The board ruled against a regular girls' basket ball team by placing the authority in the hands of Supt. Lunn, who has never been in favor of the girls playing in other towns. There was considerable trouble over the team last year.

The superintendent was authorized to reopen the night schools as soon as a sufficient number of pupils make known their intention of attending.

DULUTHIAN GETS HIBBING CONTRACT

Edward Gallagher Will Build Bridge for Range Village.

Hibbing, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—A ten-minute meeting of the village council last evening was sufficient to open the bids and award the contract for the building of the proposed 465-foot bridge and trestle to span the Winston & Dear tracks at the east end of Washington street. The lucky bidder was Edward Gallagher of Duluth. His bid was the lowest of four submitted, it being $4,620. A contract will be drawn up at once by Village Attorney Stratton and as soon as it is signed work on the new improvement will be begun.

The other three bidders, Otto Ojala, Virginia, $6,749.44; Graham-Young company, Hibbing, $5,164; and Stone & Moline, Duluth, who figured at $30.50 per 1,000 feet of timber in place and 29¾ cents per lineal foot of piling in place. All other work, even the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, was postponed on motion until the next meeting of the council next Tuesday evening.

GIANT SMOKESTACK

Being Built at Grand Rapids Paper Mill.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The construction work on the large additions being built to the paper and pulp mills of the Itasca Paper company is being pushed. The concrete foundation walls are more than three-fourths completed. The work on the great smokestack is well started, and everything is going very nicely. The smokestack is to be a huge affair, set on a base of concrete twenty-six feet square, reinforced with steel, and will tower 175 feet above the ground. The flue will be about eight feet in diameter.

Two large new boilers have been received, and are ready to be installed when their foundations are ready. A couple of dynamos and other electrical paraphernalia are also on the ground.

CHISHOLM'S BUDGET.

Estimated Cost of Running Village Next Year Large.

Chisholm, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—It will cost the sum of $231,425 to run this village next year, according to the budget that has been decided upon by the village council.

Of this amount the water, light, power and building commission have asked for $92,200, which is approximately the same as its request of last year. The commission will look after the street lighting the coming year, which increased its budget to $10,000, but this amount is shown above. In the council's last budget the principal items are: General fund, $10,355; police department, $11,700; fire department, $13,700, which includes $2,500 for new equipment; health fund, $5,000; new sewer work, $25,000, which includes the proposed disposal works. Twenty thousand dollars will be spent on streets and sidewalks including the necessary road work around locations, etc. Five thousand dollars was set aside for cemetery purposes and as this is a very urgent necessity it was deemed advisable by the council that that amount is the least that can be given over for that purpose.

GRAND RAPIDS CREAMERY IS PROVING SUCCESSFUL.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—There promises to be no difficulty in disposing of all of the products of the local creamery which opened Aug. 17. Buttermaker Mokler states that the creamery is proving to be more successful than he looked for at first. He reports that he is making close to 1,000 pounds of butter per week which finds a ready market in the city at the market price plus the express charges which would have to be paid from other points. Aside from the butter business there is a big cream trade and a very considerable sweet milk trade, while practically all the buttermilk produced at the creamery finds a ready market at from 15c to 20c per gallon.

Mr. Mokler states that the creamery has had a contract from a Finnish merchant in Bovey for 100 gallons of buttermilk per week, and that a man in Warba has written asking if he could procure ten gallons of milk per day from the creamery. As to requests for butter, Mr. Mokler states that every mail brings letters asking for some of the Itasca creamery product. It would, however, be folish to sell out of town, says Mr. Mokler, when the creamery can hardly supply the local demand for butter at the good prices which the butter brings here.

RAILWAY IS SOLD TO STREET CAR INTERESTS.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 28.—The interests which yesterday bid in the Atlantic Northern & Southern road, it is stated here, are the same that control the street railways of this city and Council Bluffs and the suburban line to Treynor, Iowa. ## ONLY THE BEST

Duluth People Give Credit Where Credit Is Due.

People of Duluth who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by willing testimony of Duluth people. Here's a case:

J. E. Watts, 918 Tenth Ave., W., Duluth, Minn., says: "I gladly verify the public statement I gave in 1908, regarding Doan's Kidney Pills. I had an attack of backache and lameness in my loins which obliged me to stop work. There was so much pain in my kidneys that I could not bend over and the least movement made me miserable. I tried different remedies, but nothing helped me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They acted like a charm, and it would have been impossible for me to have obtained better results. Since then I have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills on hand and they have helped me when I have taken them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Empress vaudeville.
ORPHEUM—Vaudeville.

Amusement Notes.

There will be no mistaking the genuineness of the warmth in the reception that will be accorded Grace Van Studdiford when she appears in the Parisian comic opera bouffe, "The Paradise of Mahomet," at the Lyceum theater Saturday matinee and night.

This exponent of the best traditions in the American light opera field can be assured of a genuinely hearty welcome. Her brilliant singing in "The Golden Butterfly" is remembered by theater-goers. It is said that nothing better in the comic opera line has been produced in years than "The Paradise of Mahomet," yet Manager Daniel V. Arthur is not content with having a New York success as well as a universal favorite for his star. He has surrounded Miss Van Studdiford with one of the best companies of vocalists and comedians which have ever been brought out of New York. Included in the supporting company are Laura Burt, John J. McCowan, Florence Rother, Edward Mora, Florenz Kolb, Hudson Freeborn, and a large chorus of real singers.

"In the Bishop's Carriage" had the honor of not only proving a great success, but it also met with approval and requirements of stern and carping critics. This was true of the piece in book form as well as its stage representation and the performance to be given next week by the G. A. Forbes Stock company at the Lyceum is expected to be one of the most successful and delightful bills ever offered by Mr. Forbes in this city. The first performance will be given next Tuesday evening and the play will be repeated every evening during the week with the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Performers on the Orpheum bill this week have been enjoying a joke at the expense of Miss Jane Salisbury, who is appearing in the sketch "Corralled." The joke was the work of Edward F. Reynard, the ventriloquist.

Miss Salisbury has been mildly interested of late, in the study of genealogy and has been tracing her family, which is an old and distinguished one. When she arrived in Duluth, Mr. Reynard learned of this from another member of her company, and he promptly called her up on the telephone, and said he was a Miss Myrtle Salisbury. Miss Myrtle said she was a relative of Miss Jane, and wanted to meet her. Several times during Tuesday and Wednesday, Miss Myrtle Salisbury and Miss Jane held conversations over the telephone, but something always seemed to prevent their meeting. A big bouquet of flowers came from Miss Myrtle, for Miss Jane, and the curiosity of the young actress reached the boiling point. The house employes were told of the joke, and helped the case along, by describing Miss Myrtle, as an immensely wealthy young woman, who was a leader of Duluth's most exclusive society. Last evening Miss Salisbury learned of the deception for the first time, and she is spending all her spare moments thinking up plans for revenge. If a bomb should explode some evening in Mr. Reynard's automobile, during his act, it will probably be the work of Miss Salisbury. She is about ready for such strenuous measures.

Richard Warren, who is appearing at the Lyceum in "Quo Vadis Up Side Down," is one of the oldest performers before the public. Mr. Warren has been before the public for the past thirty years and has seen some great changes in stage craft. He was for ten years with Charles H. Hoyt and created most of the principal roles in his famous comedies. Mr. Warren created the role Maj. Yell in "A Texas Steer," Gen. Hurleigh Burleigh in "The Milk White Flag," and Cumming Swift, the Chicago clubman in "A Stranger in New York." Mr. Warren appeared for seven months in the latter role at the Duke of York theater in London. He was first seen in Duluth as Commodore Lion Heart in Hoyt's "A Day and A Night." This was about twelve years ago and shortly afterwards he entered vaudeville and has been following up that branch of his profession for over eleven years. He holds the distinction of making the longest jump of any performer to join a company, journeying from New York city to Melbourne, Australia, to join "The Milk White Flag company."

Mr. Warren married the only daughter of Gen. Sully of Minneapolis. Gen. Sully is well known to all the pioneers and old settlers in this section of the country, as he is a famous Indian fighter and led the wars against the Indians all through Minnesota and the Dakotas. He is now making his home with Mr. Warren in the Orange mountains, Bloomfield, N. J., where Mr. Warren has a large summer home, where he spends the greater part of his vacations.

Duluth people who appreciate beautiful roller skating will see in the two Vernons, Lillian and Frank, two of the greatest roller skaters in the entire world. These two artists will be at the Auditorium next week and will give an exhibition that has been presented in all of the larger cities of the old world. The electric dance has been a sensation and is one of the most beautiful creations ever presented on a roller skating floor. The Merry Widow waltz on skates is another feature of the exhibitions of these famous skaters. Some of the most difficult figures known to skaters are performed by both of the Vernons in their exhibition, and so gracefully that they seem ridiculously easy.

The advance sale for the Sheehan Opera company's engagement at the Lyceum has been heavy. The company will sing "The Bohemian Girl" at popular prices, Sunday night, and "The Love Tales of Hoffman" at the regular scale, Monday night.

MAY CONCLUDE FIGHT AGAINST STANDARD OIL.

Minot, N. D., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The decision of the supreme court in which the action against the Standard Oil company was quashed probably will terminate the proceedings. That is the opinion of Alfred Blaisdell, former secretary of state, who started the case when complaint was filed with him to the effect that there had been unfair discrimination. The action was based on the fact that there was a petition filed with the secretary of state in which alleged facts were set forth tending to prove that the state law had been grossly violated by the trust.

WANT FAIR EVERY YEAR

Fort Totten Reservation Head Favors Making Indian Show Annual Event.

Residents of Reservation Urged to Adopt Better Farming Methods.

Fort Totten, N. D., Sept. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The success of the fair held on the Fort Totten Indian reservation by the Indians has given impetus to the proposition of making the fair an annual event. The government officials on the reservation are working to that end.

Superintendent Ziebach of the reservation is immensely enthusiastic over the prospects for making the Fort Totten fair an annual event which will grow in proportions each year, and he is very confident that the Indians will show a deep interest in the movement.

Urges Better Farming Methods.

When he was here this week F. H. Abbott, assistant commissioner of Indian affairs, strongly urged the Indians to take up progressive methods of farming, pointing to the success that has been attained by the whites in the adoption of up-to-date plans, and indicating that they, Redmen, could be just as successful if they would follow the plan that scientific farming experiments have shown to be the best.

The former is running as the head of the so-called O'Leary ticket, while Mr. Vossler heads the Independents.

HINDUS ENTER UNIVERSITY.

Nine Indians to Study at Madison Institution.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 28.—Dressed in American garb and speaking English as fluently as though they had lived here for years, nine Hindu students applied for admission to the University of Wisconsin this week.

It was the largest delegation of students that India has ever sent to this country.

They caused considerable attention when they appeared on 'the hill," one of the reasons being that they were among the first to appear in the green caps that have become the traditional headgear of freshmen.

The men are from Calcutta with one exception and they arrived in America a week ago.

Following are the names: K. Mitra, J. C. Das Gupta, H. Rakshit, N. Das, R. Chowthury, B. Das and N. Sen. S. M. Pagan, who came over here a month ago, is the only one whose home is not in Calcutta. He lives in Baroda, near Bombay.

"Wisconsin is one of the four universities that are well known to students of India," said K. Mitra. "The others are Yale, Harvard and Boston universities. Although we have not had a chance to get accustomed to the university, we are pleased with what we have seen of it.

"There is a great deal of difference between universities in this and my own country."

He was about to tell what the difference was when he checked himself, saying that he did not know enough about conditons here as yet to offer a comparison.

Within the last few days there have been over 4,000 head of sheep shipped out.

The complaint was made by Joseph Yarabeck, a boy who alleged that Zabaelier threw a lump of coal at him which struck him on the head. From the evidence it appeared that Yaraback and other boys had been teasing Zabaelier, who became angry and retaliated with a lump of coal.

This Week's Sunday School Lesson

WRITTEN FOR THE HERALD BY REV. J. S. KIRTLEY, D. D.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, OCT. 1. Ezekiel III, 12-21: The Prophet Ezekiel a Watchman.

FOREWORD.

We are to have a few lessons from the sermons of the most pictorial and dramatic of the prophets. He was the pupil of the great Jeremiah and was taken into captivity about eight years after Daniel was and was placed among the exiles southeast of Babylon near the canal Chebar. He had a great task to convince the people that the city of Jerusalem would fall, as it did, not long after he began to preach. When he spoke these words, Jehoiakim had been taken captive and Zedekiah was on the throne at Jerusalem. As in the case of so many of the prophets, he was called to his work by a vision. Recall the cases of Isaiah and Jeremiah and some of the minor prophets. We have the date of this sermon. It was June 593 B. C. While Ezekiel was preaching over among the captives, Jeremiah was trying to prevent revolt against Babylon at Jerusalem. Ezekiel went into Babylon that same year. Jeremiah wrote a message of denunciation against Babylon to be sunk in the Euphrates. Daniel was getting a large influence. Ezekiel could see the situation over in Jerusalem in a different light and because he saw it truly, he was called to be a prophet to warn the people who thought that the sacred city could never fall. His was a sad mission. Our lesson includes one sermon and parts of two others.

THE LESSON.

I.

What He Saw in Vision: 12-15.

"Then the Spirit lifted me up, and I heard behind me the voice of a great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of Jehovah from his place. And I heard the noise of the wings of the living creatures as they touched one another, and the noise of the wheels beside them, even the noise of a great rushing. So the Spirit lifted me up, and took me away; and I went in bitterness, in the heat of my spirit; and the hand of Jehovah was strong upon me. Then I came to them of the captivity at Telabib, that dwelt by the river Chebar, and to where they dwelt; and I sat there overwhelmed among them seven days."

1. GOD.—He didn't see God, for no man hath seen God at any time, but he saw a symbol of God's Spirit, in the cherubim and the wheels. He not only saw, but he was controlled by Him. His removal was under the influence of the Spirit, though we need not conclude that the Spirit took him bodily to the place. The Spirit impelled him thither, just as the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, after he instructed the Ethiopian. God's Spirit lifts up any man who will be attentive and docile.

2. HUMANITY.—That is why he went in his bitterness. He had eaten the roll containing the message of woes and lamentations, had digested it, got its meaning and was ready for his mission to wayward Israel. For he knew that his message was from God and not of himself, that it was complete and adapted to the purpose of rebuking and reclaiming Israel. He had applied it to himself and had taken his place with them. The new version has it: "I sat where they sat." He entered into their condition. God had told him how hard headed and stiff necked they were, yet he had a certain joy in bringing that message to them. But while he sat where they sat, it was in a sympathy that was costly, for if his spirit was bitter, at the start, it was more so, when he reached them and "sat where they sat," for he was overwhelmed with grief seven days.

II.

What He Heard: 16-21.

"And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying, Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore hear the word at My mouth, and give them warning from Me. When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him no warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. Again, when a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling block before him, he shall die; because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteous deeds which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thy hand. Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he took warning; and thou hast delivered thy soul."

1. RESPONSIBILITY.—Ezekiel was individualized. God spoke directly to him, second personal singular. This man has been called the discoverer of the individual. How clearly he felt divided off from all other men. But he is also called the discoverer of humanity. He "sat where they sat," as though he entered into their very lostness and rebellion. He was called as many as ninety times "son of man," to impress him with the fact that he was connected up, in a vital way, with men as such, not with the Jews alone, but with men. That is what made the pathos of his preaching. Jesus was called "the Son of Man," and that meant a unique relation, never realized by any one else. Because He was a man He knew what was in man, and He suffered for and with man. Ezekiel was as nearly like Christ as any of the old prophets. Such is the basis of his responsibility. That fits him for the reception of his commission to be a watchman to the people, upon whom great burdens rest. He shows us the fact of individual, also of social, responsibility. Jesus was the only one of His class, but Ezekiel was only a representative man, and we are to find the instructions given him intended for us. Wherever we know one who needs warning we are to give it. If the train is about to go to destruction because of the broken bridge, the boy who runs for dear life and stands in front of the train to stop it or die is always called a hero, but he would be called a brute if he didn't do so.

2. HOPE.—It was terrible to stand on the walls and be responsible for people, and it was enough to depress him, but there was hope, twofold hope, that some would heed and repent if he raised the warning cry, and that all he could be held responsible for was the faithful discharge of his duty, not for the use they made of his warning. He would be unwelcome, as all such men are to many people, sometimes to all. But he could be sure that He who appointed him had something to do, both with the message and with the results. You are your brother's guardian, whether you have had formal appointment or not, whenever you see him about to do a wrong thing or to make a blunder or be injured. Some will heed. Those who do not cannot blame you, if you are faithful, and you must not blame yourself.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

Upon one occasion I had together a college president, a solicitor general of the United States, a professor of history and one of Philadelphia's leading publishers. All college friends, and not one a professing Christian. I did my best in preaching Christ to them. When the discussion was over, I said to them, "I hope you fellows are not mad at me for what I have said. Believing, as I do, that without Christ you are lost, I would consider myself worthy of contempt if I did not warn you." Replied the college president: "William, we think more of thee than ever." And the judge and the professor put their arms around me and said: "Bill, old fellow, you're all right." I don't always do like this, for I am no better than most of you. I wonder how I came to speak to these men. I found out why a little later. God called the judge and the professor home not many months after that, and I was His watchman to give my dear old college chums the warning.—Ridgeway.

This instruction to the watchman is the earliest known formulation of man's duty to man.—Toy.

In the Divine Incarnation Christ came and sat where we sat. We often ask the question why did Christ come into the world and take the form of man? Because men were His children, because He loved them and because the way to take hold of them was to bring Himself down into their condition that He might sit among them as their brother in adversity and need; that they might be able to know Him, hear Him, see Him and feel Him, and by the power of divine sympathy and redeeming love, He might have easy and direct access to every human soul.—Mathews.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

1.—On what principles does God seem to select His special messengers?

2.—Does a true knowledge of men's sins and weaknesses tend to depress us?

3.—Can men now live as truly under the Spirit's guidance as did Ezekiel?

4.—What measures any man's responsibility for other men?

5.—Are there any powers of vision and insight in us which have not been waked?

6.—What is the difference between the preacher's and the layman's responsibility for other men?

7.—Are the tendencies of our times to dull or quicken our sense of responsibility?

BRYAN TALKS AT THE CLOSE

Fisher Wants Laws Like Canada's to Affect Alaska.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 28.—After William J. Bryan had delivered an address last night in Convention hall, the third annual National Conservation congress adjourned.

"Conservation," said Mr. Bryan, "is a subject that grows. Begin, for instance, with conservation of forestry, and you are confronted with the soil question. Agricultural colleges as the panacea for farm ills then come before you. But at last you come to the matter of social conditions. This is the question of man himself. His health, his hopes, his character are the great controlling principles that govern life and conduct. These become primary subjects and all other forms of conservation become methods through which he works out the problem of advancement."

Walter L. Fisher, secretary of the interior, addressed the congress on "conservation and the public domain." He strongly urged the leasing of government-owned coal lands, with particular reference to those in Alaska.

Likes Canadian Law.

"I have been in Alaska and British Columbia," he said. "I studied the leasing law in British Columbia. Why can't we have the same kind of a law? It retains the land in the hands of the government; it affords a permanent return and prevents the exhaustion of the land in a few years. But most important of all, it prevents the hoarding of the land and the subsequent undevelopment by capitalists."

After speaking of conservation of forest lands, Mr. Fisher said:

"There is a system used in Australia that would bear emulation. It is that the owner or leaser of forest interests cannot keep title unless he does some development work."

As to the situation regarding government coal lands in the West, Mr. Fisher said:

"I have learned that there are lots of men who want to gain control of the coal lands and hold them. They don't want to give the public a chance, but want to hoard these lands so they will make money for their progeny a million years hence."

Letter From Roosevelt.

At the afternoon session a letter from Theodore Roosevelt to President Wallace, expressing regret at being unable to be present, was read. Mr. Roosevelt said he believes with all his heart in conservation, in the movement against child labor and the white slave traffic; "in every rational move to promote the cause of temperance," in industrial and agricultural education; in the movement for playgrounds and the betterment of rural life conditions; in the movement to secure workmen's compensation acts, to better tenement house conditions, and most emphatically in something to be done to carefully investigate the increased cost of living.

He had, he said, received requests to speak for each of these movements, as well as others, but he could not speak for one unless he spoke for the others, and he was too busy to speak for all of them.

United States Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma addressed the convention last night. At a business session the report of the committee on resolutions was adopted. Among the resolutions was one recommending the bringing together as a department of health the various "health activities of the United States government as a coordinate branch of its administration."

For Leasing Coal Lands.

Another resolution recommended the early opening of the coal lands and other resources of Alaska, for industrial and commercial purposes, on a system of leasing, national ownership to be retained pending such development of that portion of our territory as to permit the creation of states within its area; and as a means of promoting industry and commerce in Alaska, to improve the construction of necessary highways, railways and terminal facilities by the national government.

A resolution was adopted instructing the secretary to send a telegram to Gifford Pinchot, "one of the great pioneers of conservation" expressing the regret of the congress because he was unable to be present.

The city in which the next congress will be held will be selected by the executive committee, probably about four months after the adjournment of the present meeting.

PRIVATE BLOOM WINS SECOND LIEUTENANCY.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Private Frank Bloom, Battery C, Third field artillery, the young Jewish soldier who failed in his efforts to secure a commission and whom President Taft ordered to take a second examination, has been ordered to be second lieutenant.

Bloom was one of four private soldiers examined at Fort Leavenworth who succeeded in passing the examination. Their ratings were: Sergeant Edward L. Hoffman, Company B, Eleventh Infantry, percentage 91.62; Private Frank Bloom, Battery C, Third field artillery, 90.78; Sergeant Casper B. Rucker, Company K, Sixth infantry, 82.04; and Sergeant Robert C. Brady, Troop C, Eleventh cavalry, 81.91. A rating of 75 was required.

Bloom will be assigned to the field artillery, Hoffman and Rucker to the infantry and Brady to the cavalry. Their posts will be determined later.

COREY DENIES MERGER STORY

"Trusts Not Desirable Things Right Now," He Says.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—William E. Corey, former president of the United States Steel corporation, made a statement here last night in which he denied reports concerning a proposed merger of American copper interests.

"Trusts are not desirable things right now," said Mr. Corey, and for this reason, if for no other, there will be no billion dollar copper trust formed."

Mr. Corey arrived in Chicago late last night with John D. Ryan, president of the Amalgamated Copper company; R. L. Agassiz of Hamilton, Mass.; and other men interested in copper. The party was met here by John H. McLean and John Uno Sebenius of Duluth, and a three-hour conference followed. Ryan, Agassiz and Foster will leave today for New York, while Corey and several friends will go to Corey's hunting lodge in Michigan for a week's shooting.

Corey has just completed an inspection of copper properties in Mexico and in Northern Michigan. He was accompanied on this trip by Ryan, Agassiz and Foster.

His Weight in Gold.

There is an ancient custom in India which will be carried out when King George of England visits that country soon. They king will be weighed against masses of gold in the balance and the bullion will be coined and given to the poor. The total cost of the ceremony is estimated at about $100,000, but close figuring against the weight of King George would place the value of the bullion at about $60,000. While they cost most to make, and are worth their weight in gold, golden grain belt beers cost you no more than inferior brews. Buy of your dealer or duluth branch minneapolis brewing company.

FLAGG AND HIS MATES INDICTED

All Plead Not Guilty and Are Given Time to Withdraw Pleas.

New York, Sept. 28.—Jared Flagg and three men who are said to have been associated with him in alleged fraudulent stock promoting schemes promising 52 per cent profit, were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday. The specific charges in the indictment are that Flagg and the other defendants used the mails to defraud two Pennsylvania women—Julia E. Wood of Reading and Bertha L. Bentley of Corey. Following pleas of not guilty, the prisoners were given until Oct. 16 to withdraw their pleas of demur.

The only witnesses known to have been examined by the grand jury were several women employes of the Flagg concern and a newspaper woman, Madeline Russe, Flagg's confidential secretary, who was expected to be a witness, did not put in an appearance and detectives reported that they were unable to find her. She was not involved in the indictments.

MOTHER AND SON UNITE IN DEATH TO AVOID SHAME.

East Brookfield, Mass., Sept. 28.—Bound together by straps about their wrists, the bodies of Mrs. Mary Lacy and her son, J. G. Lacy, of Fitchburg, were found in Lake Lashway yesterday. Grief over a charge on which the son had been arrested is supposed to have led them to suicide. Mrs. Lacey was 53 years old and her son 30.

J. G. Lacey was employed as a steward at an exclusive club at Fitchburg. When a week ago he was arrested on a serious charge, his acquaintances were greatly surprised. Friends say Mrs. Lacey took the matter deeply to heart, and shortly after her son's release on bonds both disappeared from Fitchburg.

A man living nearby heard a scream from the direction of the lake shore about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and it is supposed that the suicide pact was carried out at that time.

Before entering the water Lacey had removed his coat and hat and his mother had taken off her hat and jacket. The right wrist of the young man was bound to the left wrist of his mother with a skate strap, and the other hands were held less closely together with a string. Numerous letters found in a grip on the shore mentioned the approaching hearing on charges preferred against the young man in Fitchburg, and said that both the mother and son preferred to end their lives to meeting publicity.

ILLEGAL COMBINATION.

Barber Shop-Restaurant Outfit Is Forced to Disintegrate.

Logansport, Ind., Sept. 28.—Peeping over the lather of his face as he lay back in a chair in a barber shop, Dr. John Bradfield, secretary of the city board of health, was so startled by some of the signs on the wall that the barber admonished him to be quiet or he would lose an ear. Some of the signs, the doctor said, read

"A Hard Boiled Egg With Every Shave."

"Hot Coffee and Hair Tonic."

"Shampoo and Scrambled Eggs."

"Hash, Hair Cut and Shine, 35 Cents."

"What's the joke?" inquired the health officer as he was proffered a hard boiled egg at the completion of his shave.

"No joke," responded the barber. "We run a restaurant in connection and this is our inducement to our customers."

Dr. Bradfield refused the egg, went to his office and began delving into his law books with the result that the barber shop owner and a negro, who conducts the restaurant, were ordered to disintegrate their businesses.

There was a vacant storeroom next door and the restaurant owner and barber shop proprietor chipped a coin to see which should move. The restaurant man lost and today he is busy moving and the barber is tearing down his signs, dealing with the "inducements."

STEEL TRUST PROBE WILL NOT BE DROPPED.

Washington, Sept. 28.—The Steel trust investigation committee will proceed to carry out its program notwithstanding the assurance of Judge Gary and J. P. Morgan that the law has not been violated, said Representative Stanley of Kentucky, chairman of the house committee which is probing into the Steel corporation's affairs.

Mr. Stanley declined to comment further upon the statement issued by the United States Steel corporation officials, because as head of the investigating committee he felt he occupied a quasi-judicial position toward the investigation. The committee will meet about the first week in November, said Mr. Stanley, and its work will be continued for some time, with Steel corporation magnates again among the prospective witnesses.

Baseball Players Getting to Be Business Men—Lehto Is Coming Back—Dave Cohen Reminiscent—How Fast Is Butler?

THE conversation was of baseball players You know, Bill, claim all they can get and then smile with that warm, expanding smile of self approbation. These days of hero worship, high salaries and the scarcity of real stars have taught the young man well versed in the rudiments of the great national game to thoroughly appreciate himself.

Mr. Andy Thompson of St. Paul is a man well versed in the folk lore of our great old sport. It might be said that Mr. Thompson is a walking encyclopedia of information of the doings of players and the details of a sport that makes "bugs" of respectable and dignified business men.

"It is getting to be a habit of players asking or expecting part of the money that is paid for their purchase or draft, when they move on to higher company," said the gentleman from the Apostle City. "I suppose that some generous magnate set the example of turning over a part of the purchase money, and the habit has grown, like the trading stamp idea.

"Just the other day I heard of a very funny case. In the contract of some player there was a clause inserted, which stated that the player in question was to receive one third of the purchase price. He was naturally delighted when he was informed that he had been purchased.

"He was non plussed for the moment when told that only a small amount of cash had figured in the transaction, for two players were given for him in addition to only a small monetary remuneration.

"But the player was puzzled just for the fleeting moment. Going to the manager of the team he was about to quit, he stated that he owned a third interest in the two players that had been traded for him, and that he should be consulted as to their future disposition and should receive part of the money for their subsequent draft or purchase, should the players ever be so fortunate as to get back into higher company again."

Sure it is that the player of today is somewhat of a business man and believes in making hay while the sun do shine and the baseball meadows are luxuriant of crop. With close figuring and careful calculation the average bright baseball player should be able to retire at the end of his services in the big show with a house and some dividend-paying investment.

A RUMOR repeated yesterday, if true, will create widespread interest throughout the Northwest. The rumor says Karl Lehto is on his way from his triumphs in Finland to the United States.

As Karl Lehto has laid claim to the Finnish championship of the world at the catch-as-catch-can style of wrestling and defeated Tuomisto in Helsingfors, it will be interesting to observe the controversy that may arise between Pilakoff and Karl. The gigantic Pilakoff claims no title but seeks to meet any man laying claim thereto.

In a short statement he says he will meet Lehto, Tuomisto, or any other wrestler laying claim to the title, and will agree to throw any of these claimants twice or more in an hour's wrestling time. Moreover, Pilakoff says he may return to Finland next summer and meet the best wrestlers in that country in a competition that will settle this matter of the championship.

THERE must have been a world of sweet measure of revenge in the utter rout of New York yesterday by the despairing Cubs. With the flag apparently cinched New York may be coasting until the end of the season. We of the West are loyal and in the past have been staunch supporters of the wonderful Cub machine. There are a lot of us here in Duluth who would fairly crow with pleasure, should the boys of Chicago make it a straight string of victories in the series that is being played the present time.

There would be some consolation for the Western players. It would give the fans of Chicago something to enthuse over these days of sinking stock prices and rising inflection in the dear butcher's voice, as you ask him the second time the price he quoted with loud and certain tone the first blow.

Should Miner Brown not be worked to that point where his wonderful salary wing is far from its best, and should Chance decide that erratic Rheulbach is due, and should the giant deliver, there might be such an occurrence, creating a panic in New York equal to the low down raid on the steel stocks.

Hope and rapture tucked away in our hearts, with fear grasped tightly in our arms, lest it fight its way out, we behold the playing of the last chance series between the East and the West, our sympathies thrown out to the bruised and hotly pursued Cublets.

JUST the other day Mr. Dave Cohen was in a most happy and reminiscent mood. His recollection traveled back to the days of Duluth when his large gymnasium had the word welcome on the door and bade enter the visiting athlete.

Evan Lewis, who only recently broke into the wide circulation of the Saturday Evening Post, through his high brow connection with Bob LaFollette, the former champion wrestler being one of the huskies at the door to discourage and annihilate, if things got bad, the belligerant stalwarts, was a visitor in those early days, as was the Jap, little Dan MacLeod, Charley Moth, Peter Jackson, John L. Sullivan, and many others.

Those fleeting years of sometime ago brought to our midst some of the most famous men of their time. Many a curious onlooker has no doubt stood in the old gymnasium and watched one of these Hercules of his time go through the conditioning stunts. Time passes on and with its passing turns the limelight from the manly forms of many great athletes of decades past.

Evan Lewis, in a mild sort of way, has entered politics. Poor fellow. Dan MacLeod has passed from the mat, a wonderful athlete and a wizard of the mat. Peter Jackson died in the land of his birth, Australia. John L. Sullivan—shish, he is actually being bossed by his wife.

JUST how fast is this Butler boy of Toronto? He is the chap who won three firsts in the sculling races of the recent national regatta at Saratoga lake. Eddie Durnan beat old John Hackett and is supposed to be the fastest sculler in North America. But it is said that Butler, young and of but comparatively slight racing experience, trained with Durnan and was able to beat the professional with regularity.

It would have been interesting to know what Edward Hanlon Ten Eyck could have done against the best professionals of his time. Butler is away and far the best amateur sculler of the present age, and should he improve it may be that the Toronto wonder will be won over by the lure of the game, to racing that wonderful man in the far away antipodes, Arnst.

Sculling is again coming into favor, and should Butler improve in the next season as rapidly as he has gained speed in the past, he may come to that point where he can seriously be compared with the great sculler of Australia.

CUBS' HOPES ARE SLIGHT

Only Improbable Reversal of Form Could Lose Pennant for Giants.

Chicago Fans Are Elated Over Victory in First Game.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Although the defeat of the New York National League baseball team yesterday by Chicago, 8 to 0, made it impossible for the leaders in the league pennant race to clinch the championship in the present series of four games, the Easterners today expressed confidence in their ability to win the game scheduled for this afternoon.

Supporters of the Chicago team, which has held the championship of the National league for several years continuously, are greatly elated over the result of yesterday's game, and prepared to crowd the West side park to its capacity in the hope that Chicago would also take the second game of the series. Unless New York should lose almost every one of its remaining fifteen games, the Chicago team must win nearly all of the ten games still on its schedule.

The field, which was rather soggy yesterday, dried out rapidly today and playing conditions promised to be much better for the second game of the series.

Tentatively, Brown and Mathewson were scheduled to pitch today. Schulte, Chicago's right fielder, who yesterday was responsible for five of the eight runs scored, making four hits for a total of nine bases, declared he would try to make his twenty-third home run today. He made the twenty-second of the season yesterday, and believes he can break the record before the season closes.

Preparations In New York.

New York, Sept. 28.—Pennant and world's series hopes are materializing already at the grounds of the National League club. Work has just begun on an addition to the outfield bleachers, which will add several thousand to the seating capacity of the Polo grounds.

The new section will consist of a semi-circle of circus seats built in front of the present bleachers. If the world's series come here, President Brush of the National League club expects at a pinch to have room inside his enclosure for nearly 60,000 spectators.

CUBS WIN FIRST GAME OF SERIES

Richie Holds Giants Scoreless, While Teammates Pile Up Runs.

Chicago, Sept. 28. — Chicago cut down New York's lead in the pennant race yesterday by shutting out the visitors, 8 to 0, in the first game of the crucial series, which will be New York's last appearance in Chicago this season.

The game proved a one-sided affair with Richie pitching at his best, while his team mates were hitting Marquard and Crandall freely. New York's two errors both resulted in runs and Marquard's wildness was also a factor.

Richie held the visitors to eight hits, three of them bunched in one inning, the others being scattered through five innings. Only two visitors reached third base.

Marquard issued three passes, hit one man, and was hit safely five times before he retired in favor of Crandall with the locals six runs ahead.

In the sixth inning Crandall was hit safely for three doubles, which brought Chicago's total up to eight.

Cubs Score in First.

Chicago started its run making in the first inning. Sheckard was given a base on balls and went to third on Schulte's double, which if it had gone one foot higher, would have been a home run. Tinker filed to Murray and Sheckard scored. Zimmerman grounded to L. Doyle, who threw to Myers to catch Schulte at the plate, but the Indian dropped the ball.

An error, a single and a long fly gave Chicago another run in the next inning, and still another came in the third on a base on balls, an error and a single.

In the fourth Scheckard opened with a single and went to second on a wild pitch. Schulte then knocked out his long looked for twenty-second home run of the season, scoring Scheckard ahead of him. Crandall took up the pitching then and the side was retired without further damage. Schulte, Murray and Archer divided the batting honors for the day, the former making four hits, which included a home run, two doubles and a single, in four times at bat, and Archer made three hits in four times at bat, his first attempt resulting in an error for Fletcher. ## LONG PROGRAM AT COLUMBUS RACE MEET.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 28.—Today's program at the fall meeting at the Columbus Driving park is so crowded that a start will be made at 12:30, an hour earlier than usual. In addition to the scheduled events, there are two unfinished races left over from yesterday, the 2:07 pace and the 2:12 trotting stake, and the 2:13 pace that was not even started yesterday and the trial mile by The Harvester, to beat his own record of 2:01.

The feature of today's schedule is the grand champion pacing sweepstakes, three in five, with $1,000 added. In this event the probable starters are Ess H. Kay, Walter W., Independence Boy, Evelyn W., May Day, Earl, Jr., Knight of Strathmore and Merry Widow.

Other races will be the free-for-all trot for a purse of $1,200; the 2:15 pace for a purse of $1,200 and the 2:14 pace for a purse of $1,200.

JOHNSON SPENDS HIS FORTUNE AND IS FLAT BROKE

London, Sept. 28.—Jack Johnson is broke. The heavyweight champion, who after he had whipped Jeffries, quit the ring at Reno a little more than a year ago with $100,000 "to the good," and who has been making money nearly ever since, apparently could not stand prosperity and is now facing the problem of "financial straits."

It is admitted that the negro is broke and this is the main reason of his great anxiety over the interference with his fight with Wells next week.

Pawns Motor Car.

Johnson's trainer, Cutler, has told Tex Rickard and others that Johnson was forced to pawn his motor car and his diamonds recently before leaving Paris to come to London for the fight.

John is reduced to such a penniless condition that he is unable to pay his manager, trainer, valet, secretary or his wife's maid. Also, it is known that he could only buy them third-class tickets from Paris to London and traveled second-class with his wife instead of first-class, as is customary.

"It is true," said Tex Rickard. "I have no reason to doubt it. He looks very seedy. He has spent $120,000 since fighting Jeffries. This sum was the champion's share of the winnings in addition to receipts from theatrical engagements."

Cutler Goes Unpaid.

Trainer Cutler admitted he had received no money for recent services. He tried to get some this week, but Jack pleaded with him to wait until after the fight. Since coming to London he has also dismissed his white valet.

He has had many quarrels with his white wife, the last spat occurring recently in a Paris cafe, where she declared he did not pay enough attention to her and he slapped her face.

The fight officials admit that Johnson has put his last penny in bets on the fight and will be greatly worried for ready cash if it is declared off.

FIRST GAME FOR CENTRAL

The Central high school football team is practicing hard for its game of Saturday with the Northland college team, which will virtually open the local football season in this city. With what promises to be a very strong team in the field, and some very good games in sight, football fans of Duluth expect some of the best high school games that have been played here for several seasons.

Never have the students shown so much spirit as the present season. It is expected that a very large crowd will be out Saturday to root for a hilltop victory. Yells are being practiced and when the ball is kicked off Saturday it is expected that some new and original high school noise will be let loose.

Some of the men are showing up in great shape and it is expected some of them will have a very good opportunity in the Northland game to show their class. While the visitors will outweigh the high school boys, it is expected that the speed of the Duluth boys and their team play will be better than that of the Northland team.

The tickets for the game go on sale today and it is expected that the first game of the season will bring out a very large crowd.

NOVEL RACE ON PORTAGE LAKE

Houghton, Mich., Sept. 28.—Arrangements have been made for a novel race on Portage lake here today between a Curtiss hydro-aeroplane and R. C. Pryor's 26-foot motorboat, the fastest of its class in the world. The motorboat has a speed of thirty-six miles per hour and the hydro-aeroplane goes at or about the samo rate while touching water. C. C. Witmer of the Curtiss team will pilot the aircraft. The conditions of the race will be that the hydro-aeroplane is not permitted to leave the water. In a second race the air craft will be allowed to take the air and the motorboat will be given a handicap.

RACES ROWED IN VERY BAD WATER

Cliff Thorburn and Vince O'Donnell last evening handily won their heat in the doubles, winning from Louis Thompson and Joseph Lathrup by open water. Kent and Long John Quinn won from L'Estrange and Puck and will meet Thorburn and O'Donnell in the finals, which will be rowed next Saturday.

Thorburn and O'Donnell rowed a pretty race, their work being clean and snappy, considering the adverse conditions under which the race was rowed.

It is expected that the final between Kent and Quinn and Thorburn and O'Donnell will prove a pretty contest.

The boat club will lose a fine oarsman when Long John Quinn leaves for Montana, some time next week. The tall boy goes to Billings to take a good position and his many friends, while loath to see him shake the dust of this town from his pedals, wish him all of the luck in the world.

Rowing but one season, Quinn developed into a strong oar. He was being groomed for the sculling events and the general belief was that he would develop into a fast single sculler.

YALE PLAYS WELL IN OPENING GAME

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 28.—The Yale eleven marked the opening of its football season here yesterday afternoon by defeating the Wesleyan team, 21 to 0.

The visitors were unable to carry the ball into Yale territory until the fourth period, when an entirely new line-up faced them. The Blues displayed excellent early season form and handled the forward pass several times successfully and without permitting Wesleyan to become dangerous at any time.

Capt. Howe, right end, with his punting and brilliant runs, Philbin and Merritt, fullback and quarterback, respectively, with Left Guard Francis, who kicked all the goals, were the winners for Yale. One of Howe's tallies was a goal from the field.

Cornell Wins.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Cornell easily won its opening game of the football season from Alleghany yesterday; score 35 to 0.

Other Scores.

At Hanover, N. H.—Dartmouth, 18; Norwich university, 3.

GOLF AT CLUB.

President's and Vice President's Match Will Be Played Friday.

The president's and vice president's match will be played at the Northland club tomorrow afternoon. This is one of the annual events at the country club and a great deal of interest is being shown in the match by the club members.

The idea of the match is to get every member of the club, whether a golf player or not, into the contest, for it is the big frolic of the season. The game will start as early as possible in the afternoon.

The annual harvest dinner will be served at the club at 7:30 and this will also be an event of much interest.

OLD RIVALS WILL PLAY ROLLER HOCKEY

General interest is being manifested in the game of roller hockey, which will be played at the Auditorium this evening between the Big Duluth and Northern Hardware teams. The first game was played last Monday evening and furnished some of the best sport ever seen in this city. Tonight the struggle will be renewed and one of the best sporting events of the early season should result, as roller hockey seems to have made a great hit in Duluth.

All of the players of the various teams are desired to be at the game this evening as a roller hockey league will be organized after the game. Several teams have signified their intention of coming into the league, which will play contests late this fall and take up the game again early next spring.

Most of the players who have been in the various ice hockey league games are going to take part in the roller hockey contests. The Northerns and the Big Duluths have already strong teams in the field, and several other teams have been practicing daily at the Auditorium.

DREAMS OF GAME: DIVES THROUGH WINDOW.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 28.—Dreaming of football scrimmages in his berth in a train bound to New York, Charles Burrows, said to be a candidate for the Yale eleven, plunged through the window during the night while the train was going at full speed. He was found in pajamas, inside of which was pinned $500, by a negro farm hand near Maregum, Ala. Burrows, who hails from Joplin, Mo., en route to New Haven to enter Yale, continued his journey last night little the worse for the scrimmage.

AMES WORKING HARD.

Iowa Farmers in Great Shape for Minnesota Game.

Ames, Iowa, Sept. 28.—Hard work in preparation for the Minnesota game next Saturday was the order of the day on state football field yesterday. With nearly a month's work behind them, Clyde Williams' men are in shape to go at top speed and the coach drove them hard.

Williams is giving out little information these days, and ordered the big canvas up around the field for the first time last night, excluding all except a favored few from practice when the signal work and scrimmage began. The men were sent against the freshmen for almost an hour, but the coaches were nonoommittal after the session ended. Williams has adopted a policy of secrecy and has allowed the correspondents to send out almost nothing in regard to the work of his team.

ILLINI LOSE STAR.

Tackle Wham Decides Not to Play During Present Season.

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 28.—Charles Wham, tackle on the Illinois eleven last year, today definitely announced that he would not be a candidate for the 1911 varsity. The decision has been feared, although some hope had been entertained that the hard working forward would be back in the ranks.

Wham played well at tackle last season despite his light weight. He was injured in the Purdue game and was out of it practically for the rest of the season. An advantageous teaching offer in connection with his law work was offered him and he decided to accept it.

The loss of Wham reduces the "I" squad to ten men. With the exception of Jake Lanum, all have clean slates, and Lanum is believed to be in a fair way to secure clearance papers.

DULUTH FIREMEN WIN FROM SUPERIOR RIVALS.

The Duluth firemen yesterday defeated their rival hose holders and fire fighters from Superior by the score of 13 to 12. Morgan, for Duluth, had the Superior hitters tamed for the greater part of the game. Jones and Walsh, the latter over 50 years of age, played star games for the Duluth firemen.

The lineup:

| Duluth— | | Superior— |
|---|---|---|
| Morgan | p. | Rudolphson |
| Walsh | rf. | Kelley |
| Harwood | c. | Jacobs |

BRONSON AND HOWELL DRAW IN TEN ROUNDS.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 28.—Ray Bronson of this city and Tommy Howell of Philadelphia, fought ten fast rounds to a draw last night. Howell scored two knockdowns and in the fourth round Bronson went down under Howell's right swing for the count of eight. Bronson had the Philadelphian on the canvas in the second and in the last several rounds pushed him hard.

Earl Denning of Chicago, and Chick Hayes of Indianapolis, lightweights, boxed ten even rounds.

STIFF WORK FOR GOPHERS

Minnesota Team Is Getting Ready for Game With Ames.

Candidates Given Gruelling Workout in Hard Scrimmage Play.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 28.—Drenched to their shivering skins and encased in a veritable armor of mud, the Gopher football men slid and slithered up and down Northrop field for a solid hour late yesterday afternoon while the elements howled. It was the first real taste of hardship the candidates have encountered since practice started, but they apparently enjoyed the novelty.

Just as the vanguard of the seekers after football knowledge trotted onto the field, intermittent showers did a nice job of mussing up spotless jerseys. By the time that Dr. Williams arrived to take charge, the rain was coming down with great effectiveness, but he issued no orders that called off practice. After he had shown Capt. Earl Pickering a few things about punting and had given his proteges a brief talk on the salutary effects of small adversities in the shape of unfavorable weather to a football squad, he set them to work.

Stiff Scrimmage Held.

Hard and fast scrimmage was the order of the day. A picked team was given possession of the ball and eleven candidates, who changed and interchanged positions frequently, were lined up against them. With a sweater instead of a rain coat to protect him from the wrath of J. Pluvius, the coach shouted instructions and commands to his men as though a bright sun were shining overhead. The slippery grass and the oozy turf did not afford the men the best of going, but they toiled like Spartans. Fumbling was remarkably infrequent, considering the condition of the ball and the plays were reeled off in better shape than on the preceding afternoon. One of the first orders the coach issued was for every man to throw his headgear away. This was done and players on both teams battled through the afternoon with the rain beating down on unprotected heads.

Robertson handled the pigskin from the pivotal position with Lucius Smith on the left and Frank at his right. Hanson at left and Elder at right were the tackles on the 'varsity squad, with Capt. Earl Pickering on the left wing and Wallinder on the right. Erdall officiated at quarter, with Vanstrum at fullback, Haywood at left half and Stevens at right. A score of other candidates were given an opportunity to show their football knowledge with the scrubs, and big Harry Powers bucked Robertson at center. Ralph Capron was on the field, but did not get into the battle. An injury to his hand sustained Monday has not healed sufficiently to obtain the consent of the trainers to get into scrimmage.

The same informality that characterized practice Monday afternoon was the rule yesterday. There was no kick-off and no attempt at scoring; just a hard, grinding drill calculated to fit the men for Saturday's game with Ames, now drawling dangerously near. There was no mention of first, second or third downs for the 'varsity retained possession of the ball from first to last. The aim of the coaches was to instill a firm working knowledge of offensive play into the athletes, and the few spectators who got past the barred gates had no chance to see the first squad on the defensive.

Pick Drilled at Kicking.

Earl Pickering is being carefully groomed as a kicker and he got his share of work in that line yesterday. Long before the real work started Pick and Powers put in some good licks. The Gophers are determined to lose no possible chance to score on goals after touchdowns this season, and the big captain made try after try with gratifying results, while Powers held the ball. After an hour's practice on the goals that count for one point, Pick devoted himself to punting. He is showing a steady improvement in this line of work and is working conscientiously for better results.

There were no additions to the eligible squad yesterday, most of those with conditions will take their examinations late this week or early next. Until that is done the coaches must worry along as well as they can with material that the faculty has not frowned upon. Only time and the results of these quizzes will tell what Minnesota followers may expect in a football way this season.

DAVENPORT IS HURT.

Chicago's Chances Injured By Loss of Gridiron Star.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Maroon football prospects underwent some rapid changes yesterday at Marshall field in the course of the first scrimmage of the practice season. Coach Stagg's eligibles scored twenty-one points against the freshmen team in a satisfactory display of early form, but the injury of Davenport of the backfield squad in the last moment of play spoiled the session. The conference champion runner gave his shoulder a bad wrench and will not be seen again with the Chicago squad.

One of the freshmen ends collided with Davenport as the varsity candidates were about to push the ball across for the last touchdown of the scrimmage, and the quarterback candidate had to leave the field. As the conference middle distance champion hopes to represent the United States at the Olympic games next summer at Stockholm, Coach Stagg said Davenport would not continue his football activities.

Davenport was not used at quarterback in his last workout, playing left half alternately with Sauer. He scored the second touchdown of the scrimmage, Fonger scoring the first and third, and Sauer getting the fourth. Scruby kicked the only goal after Davenport's score. All of the touchdowns were made on straight plays through the line.

Lawler and Paine shared the quarterback duties, with Fonger at right back and Scruby and Pierce at fullback. Sauer and Norgren are due for a try-out at quarter this afternoon, in case Coach Stagg decided on more scrimmage.

THOSE LEITER SUITS.

Father of Dead President of Peavey Company Explains.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 28.—That the suit of F. H. Peavey & Co., against Joseph Leiter to recover $300,000 said to represent notes given by Mr. Leiter and accrued interest thereon, is not a matter with which the Peavey Grain Company of Chicago was primarily concerned, is the statement of William Pettit of Minneapolis, father of the late James Pettit, who was president of the Peavey Grain company.

"A Chicago news item speaks of the Peavey suit against Leiter as though it might be a Peavey Grain company affair, which it is not," said William Pettit.

"Joseph Leiter failed in his great wheat deal in the spring or summer of 1898, before the Peavey Grain Company of Chicago was organized.

"Settlement of the Leiter business left Leiter owing F. H. Peavey & Co., $600,000 for which it took his notes. After the organization of the Peavey Grain Company of Chicago, these notes were deposited with it in the hope that some adjustment might be made."

WHEAT GAINS A FULL CENT

Wet Weather Over Northwest and Western Canada Causes Bulge.

Selling Was Too Free on Wednesday, Followed By a Reaction.

Duluth Board of Trade, Sept. 28.—Wheat closed with gains all along the line, not only at Duluth, but in other leading American markets and in Winnipeg. Duluth December and May both gained a full cent. Durum showed a still more substantial advance, going up 1⅜c. This is due in part to the foreign demand for that grain, a considerable amount of which is being exported from Duluth through New York. Oats closed at a gain of ⅛c. Rye and barley were unchanged. Flax made a substantial advance, September gaining 6c, October and November 5c and December 4c.

That the wheat market was oversold yesterday was the opinion that a prominent Chicago broker wired out today and the developments of this morning seemed to bear out that view, for the bulls certainly had the better of it. Since the defeat of reciprocity, and the big bulge in wheat that followed immediately, there have been repeated attempts on the part of the bears to wipe out that bulge, but their efforts this far have not been attended with any great success, every decline being succeeded by a reaction, though it is true that nearly 3 cent of that 9-cent bulge had disappeared in the quotations that were in the Duluth board during this morning. During the morning wheat tended almost steadily upwards in the leading American markets. Liverpool closed higher. Weather reports of Western Canada and the American Northwest were decidedly bullish, cloudy weather and rains being general. Duluth December opened at the same figure as it closed at yesterday, $1.07½ asked, and later sold at $1.08⅛, $1.08¼, $1.08 and $1.08⅛. Thus far there has been scarcely any demand for the spring wheat at Duluth for export purposes, though the New York exporters have been purchasing considerable quantities of the durum from time to time.

Flax was decidedly bullish throughout the morning. This was due to rain, coming at a time when dry weather was needed; to light receipts and light offerings. The volume of the trading in flax was very small indeed, not a fourth of what it should be at this time of the year. At noon today September flax gained 5 cents on the opening price, which was $2.32 bid.

The following is a press report of the Saskatchewan wheat crop—"For the first time in years the Canadian Pacific railway failed to issue a crop report yesterday telling of conditions prevailing the past week. Messages from the company's agents were received as usual but the officials refused to make them public. In Alberta and Saskatchewan snow has fallen in various places and as much as 15 deg. of frost has been recorded, damaging much of the uncut grain. There is still much wheat to be cut."

Winnipeg wires—Weather conditions throughout the Canadian Northwest have been a great disappointment and the effect is going to be bad. I believe conditions through Saskatchewan are worse than is generally known. I believe we are going to get a lot of bad stuff.

"Liverpool: The weakness in Winnipeg and Buenos Ayres and the decline in America together with the very favorable weather and crop advices from Argentine and India were offset here by the fact that large firms here were supporting. Values were ¼d lower. Following the opening there was an advance of ⅛@⅜d on the absence of cargoes off coast and talk of lighter Russian shipments this week. During the morning there was pronounced weakness shown in continental markets and with a very small inquiry for forward delivery. This led to renewed profit-taking. Spot markets were generally ½d lower and the weather in the United Kingdom was favorable for plowing. At 1:30 p. m. the market was dull but steady and ⅛@¼d lower than yesterday.

"Corn opened ¼d lower on the cheaper American offers and the decline in spots."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Disposition to Rally Is Apparent in the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Wheat today showed a disposition to rally. The fact that large firms were supporting the market in Liverpool had considerable influence. There was a good deal of sympathetic bull sentiment, too, as a result of the more cheerful developments in Wall street. Talk of lighter Russian shipments this week contributed also in some degree to the return of confidence. On the other hand, bearish crop prospects were reported from India and the Argentine. Opening prices here were ⅛@¼c lower to ⅜c higher. December started at 97½@97¾c, varying from ⅛@¼c off to a shade up and then rose to 97⅞c.

The Tripoli disturbance had a tendency to help values. Continued rain and snow in the Canadian Northwest acted also in favor of the bulls and there were reports of frosts in Argentina. The close was unsettled ½c net higher at 98⅛@98¼c for December.

Selling on the part of Southwestern houses weakened corn a little at the outset, but the market later advanced with wheat. December opened the same as last night to ⅛c down at 63¾@63½c, and then ascended to 63¾c.

Unsettled weather interfering with shipments kept the market rather stiff. The close was steady with December ⅜@½c net higher at 63⅞@64c.

Because offerings were limited, oats recovered without much difficulty when other grain displayed firmness. December started ⅛@¼c lower at 47¼@47¼c and then climbed to 47⅜c.

With sellers only scattered, provisions shared in the effect of the grain strength. First sales were 2½c off to 10c higher and for January delivery went at $14.80@14.82½ on pork, $8.70@8.77½ for lard and $7.77½ for ribs.

STOCKS HAVE STRONG TONE

Prices Rise Rapidly on Demand Which Grows Insistent.

Huge Profit-Taking in the Final Hour Causes Setback.

New York, Sept. 28. — With a much smaller volume of trading, the stock market moved in irregular manner at the opening today. The speculative leaders developed considerable strength. United States Steel opened with a block of 7,500 at 56¼ to 57, compared with yesterday's close of 56¾ and in first few minutes of trading it rose to 57¾. The preferred stock gained ¼. Union Pacific advanced 2 points and Reading, St. Paul, Amalgamated Copper, Northern Pacific and American Smelting 1.

The market showed a great deal of irregularity. This was due to wide swings on professional operations, rather than to such nervousness as existed yesterday. Following the brisk rise after the opening the market sank back to the extent of a point in St. Paul, Lehigh Valley, Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper. Then another heavy demand set in which carried the whole list higher than before. United States Steel reached 58½ and gains of 1 to 1½ were general in other important stocks. The Gould issues moved in a hesitating way and there was persistent pressure against the Wabash stocks. The common fell to 10½, a new low record after opening ¾ higher at 11½ and the preferred went down to 20¼.

A strong tone prevailed throughout the morning session on the stock exchange. Stocks advanced steadily, the whole market being strengthened by a demand which grew more insistent as the day advanced. Although gains were rapid, the advance was orderly and there was an absence of yesterday's disquieting fluctuations.

The financial district was flooded with rumors to the effect that some sort of a statement reassuring the corporate interests of the country, would emanate from administration sources before long.

This induced considerable short covering and no little speculative buying of Steel, the principal purchaser being an out-of-town brokerage house which has hitherto been active in that stock.

The European situation and the late weakness in the London market apparently were ignored. The demonstration of strength which the market gave in the second hour was so convincing that there will be a frantic scramble by the shorts to cover and bull forces operated with growing confidence.

Virtually every stock of moderate activity rose from 2 to 2½, and with Reading showing a rise of 8 points, United States Steel 3½, American Smelting 3⅜ and Union Pacific 3¾. Bonds were firm. Wabash 4's sold at 50 compared with 51¾, yesterday's closing.

Announcement that the Union Pacific road had rejected the demands of the labor leaders had little effect marketwise although Union Pacific declined almost a point from its best. Prices elsewhere shaded fractionally. There was some contraction of operations except in United States Steel, which changed hands in blocks that ranged from 2,000 to 6,300 shares.

The market closed steady. Following their usual custom the traders took profits on a huge scale in the closing hour and there was a material setback, Union Pacific, United States Steel, Reading, Lehigh Valley and Canadian Pacific receded 2 points. Partial recovery followed on a light demand.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

Pineapples are cheaper, having declined from $5 to $3.50 a crate. Colorado pink meat cantaloupes are also down, now selling for $1.30 instead of $1.40 a crate. Potatoes, which have been bringing 65 cents a bushel, are now down at 55 cents. Pork loins are lower, now selling at 14 to 15 cents a pound, instead of 15 to 15½ cents. Wholesale grocers look for higher prices on butter, cheese and eggs in the near future.

Quotations given below indicate what the retailers pay to the wholesalers, except the hay list, which gives what the farmers receive from the jobbers.

THREE SESSIONS ON CITY AFFAIRS

Health, Milk and Schools Discussed at Chicago Meeting.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Three sessions of the International Municipal congress were held here today. In the morning the subject considered was "The Advertising Value of a Healthy City," Health Commissioner George B. Young of Chicago, and Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana state board of health being the principal speakers.

In the afternoon "The Control of a Milk Supply" was to be discussed by Dr. W. A. Evans, former health commissioner of Chicago; Dr. M. P. Ravenel of the University of Wisconsin, and others.

CROOKSTON AUTO CLUB IS BACK FROM ROSEAU TRIP.

Crookston, Minn., Sept. 28.—The local automobile club has returned from Roseau, where they went to take in the Roseau county fair and size up the roads. They got back without an injury. The 100 people who started on the return visited Stephen, Argyle, Warren and Angus yesterday afternoon. The trip was an immense success and was the first ever undertaken by the club. Tours will be made monthly hereafter.

The average speed for the actual running time was 26 miles per hour. The pilot car, Loring, made 32 miles an hour. Only two cars had tire trouble on the trip.

BLOWS UP DAM TO RECOVER HIS WEAPON.

Hancock, Sept. 28.—John Manzini, an employe of the Franklin mine, living in the Franklin Junior location dropped his shot gun into the water above the Boston dam and then blew up the dam to recover the weapon, according to his confession when arraigned in court charged with the malicious destruction of property. As there was no apparent intent at malicious destruction of property the mining company owning the dam will probably not press the charge although it is expected a minimum fine will be imposed.

SLEEPS IN BARN AND LOSES LIFE IN FIRE.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Tony Nisgardo, a teamster, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed a barn in West Thirty-fifth street early today. The man had worked overtime, and instead of going home decided to sleep in the loft of the barn. His body was not discovered until after the flames had been extinguished.
